abuse, and how communities can stimulate the development of grass roots organizations that focus on health issues to spread the responsibilities for care.

Other forum topics included: Housing, to identify the private housing projects in the city, and to examine the possibility of mortgage and financial asssistance.

Leaders in the communications field attended to serve as a link between each individual community and the city at large and to educate leaders on becoming more effective in using media to tell their individual stories.

"Hopefully," said Rev. Wendell Christopher, conference chairman and director of the Social Action Committee of the Baltimore Conference, "conferees will emerge from the conference with new attitudes and new awareness of issues impacting on their communities."

"The true test of leadership will come from the people," said Rev. Christopher.

we tried to do in the past. We want to make a very important announcement . . .let me thank all of you . . . you have been more objective, I just left WHMM and what I did was to video tape about a 13 or 14 minute statement. Lurma is getting the statement now and running it off so you all can have in its entirety.

We intend to go on Evening Exchange tonight (Wednesday) at 7 o'clock and basically announce that I'm not going to run for another term.

It's not easy, let me back up a little bit, but this is my 145th day of my recovery, I mean free of any chemical solution. It's a good feeling for some it's a short time, for lot of us it's a long time.

Back to the announcement. It was not an easy one, very difficult, very emotional, very stressful, I prayed a lot on it. But the way I look at it, I've been doing pubic service for about 30 years and I think politically, by all the polls, we could have probably won reelection, notwithstanding the trial.

But quite frankly the next four years would be difficult for me and my family and for the city. They would never let you alone. And I think it's time for me to begin to serve the city and go out another way. And I'm still emotional about it. I just haven't done it and still feel it. And that's basically what I want to say tonight. The statement - it goes to another level among other things. Family stock at this point is safe. That's where I am. Don't look so sad, It'll be alright. We're gonna make it . . . There's going to be prying around on this.

Publisher: Already they're prying around, calling and camping out in the area sine Monday. But we would like to have the first expression of it to be held until 7 o'clock.

Mayor: Let White people come and get from you all that which they can't get from me. And so you'll still be current tomorrow because you will have this up close. We're not giving any interviews to anybody. After tonight I'm going home. I'm going to court tomorrow and I'll leave court at 5-5:30 and I go to my treatments from 6 until 8 o'clock then I'm going home after that, so they will not get a chance to have this kind of dialogue.

Mrs. Murphy: Could I ask you what are you going to do if you don't run?

Mayor: Well, Frances, you take a few steps at a time. First, I got to get past this trial. Ken Mundy is very optimistic that they are going to throw the kitchen sink and everything else they can find in evidence. They got some people that they have pressured to death. They have threatened some people. Threatened to disbar certain people, lawyers. Threatened to deport people who are not residents, alien. They have gotten people to say things that are way beyond the truth. We think we're gonna make it beyond that, particularly perjury. We think we have an excellent chance, but I don't want to predict that because the jury is still reading all of that, but the evidence will show that I'm gonna finish this term out. I may, I don't know all I'm gonna do, I've not thought fully about it but, If I'm out of public life, I'm not gonna leave Washington. I'm not going anywhere. I've been here too long.

Mrs. Murphy: We've heard you say over and over again that you do not intend to plea bargain.

Mayor: No, not at this point. Unless something comes that I don't know anything about. We intend to go to trial. I've spent too much time down there and Kenneth has spent too much time and milk of another animal and then you wonder why its actions become like that of an animal. Teddy bears , plastic bottles and pacifiers are no substitute for human warmth."

In stern warnings against incest and "kept men" the Minister said," No man can speak for the pain of women. It is a crime of the highest order to sneak into the bedroom of a daughter and force yourself upon her.

"How can she resist you?. In the Islamic world incest is punishable by death. Death is the only way that a woman who has experienced rape can ever gain back her spirit.

Becomming more confortable with his audience , Minister Farrahkan said jokingly "In many Islamic countries the execution of criminals is as close as anyone there gets to pork chops.

"The executor pokes the criminal in the side of the neck with a scimitar, causing a reflex reaction that straightens it then the sword comes down chopping off the head—poke and chop."

Farrahkan encouraged the men in the audience to stand up and assume the role of family providers and protectors of their women and families saying,"The slave holder enforced the break-up of the Black family by using Blacks for breeding purposes.

"Slaveholders did not want us to be unified. Divide and conquer was their motto. We need to get away from that kind of thinking.

On the topic of woman beating the Minister said, "If you have to beat a woman, you shouldn't have a woman. If you knew what to do with a woman you would never have to touch her.It's not in the bed it's in the head!"

Attributing the desire of many ghetto youths to have a pair of expensive tennis shoes that are out of their economic reach—at any cost -including the killing of their peers, the Minister said, "Michael Jordan promotes killing."

"Although I am sure that Jordan doesn't know this. Blacks should approach the makers of these shoes and try to work out an arrangement where they can be manufactured in the urban centers of our nation. That way we can obtain a percentage of the sales.Right now many of our youth are dying for these shoes and as a result getting nothing."

Minister Farrahkan closed with a final message of warning against Blacks becoming overweight and lazy. Farrahkan said, "If you need to loose weight do so. It will increase your self-esteem and the chances of your living longer.

"Many women sit at home watching T.V., constantly eating, becoming bigger and bigger. While they are doing this, the White woman is out at the spa slimming down in preparation to catch your man."

During the program Minister Farrahkan thanked Baltimore Minister Jamil Muhammad and attributed the success of the crowd turnout to Mosque #6's hard work in selling tickets 400 at a time because that is the only way that the Arena administration would agree to scheduled the Minister's appearance. The crowd was estimated at 9,000. The Arena holds 13,000.

who was allegedly the victim of New York Central Park 'wilding'by Black youths did not have any of the Black youngster's sperm, but that of her White boyfriend when she was medically examined. Yet Tawana is projected as a fraud."

Also joining the over thirty people who sat on the Baltimore Arena stage as Minister Farrakhan spoke were Congressman Kweisi Mfume, Palladium caterer; Edward Butler, Rev.Theodore Amenhotep and A Child's Place Director;Brenda Woods and the minister's daughter Betty Jean, who was in Baltimore for the first time and is an MGT (Muslim Girls Training) Captain.

The V.I.P section of the audience also reflected alliances made by those adhering to the political thinking of the Muslims. A crosssection of Vip's included 40th District candidate Dr. Salima Siler Marriott, Clarence Mitchell III and IV, Rev. Willie Ray.

Baltimore Mosque minister, Jamil Muhammad received a citation from Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke presented by Muslim community member Malik Rahman.

In the past, The Nation of Islam has traditionally avoided politics and encouraged its members not to take part in the voting process or align themselves with political parties.

The Baltimore meeting represents a turning point in the history of the Islamic movement. The Nation's sole link to politics up until this year was the guarding of presidential nominee Reverend Jesse Jackson during the 1985 primary election by Muslim's trained security force ; The Fruit of Islam.

Attacking politicians who do not represent the people who elected them to office, Minister Farrakhan said,"We need our representatives to act as a voice for us. Issues such as the education of our youth, reparations and health care need demand that we have voices so that legislation can be passed in our behalf."

The AFRO Salutes:

Outstanding students honored at Hopkins

Thirty-seven students representing 12 schools from Baltimore City Public Schools were honored for their outstanding verbal and or mathematical abilities at a recent reception at the Johns Hopkins University.

These students participated in the 1990 Annual Talent Search conducted by the Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth (CTY).

The students who attended received a book award for their participation and outstanding scores. Each student present was provided the opportunity to attend special mathematics and writing programs sponsored by CTY Academic programs and CTY Talent Search.

In addition to CTY staff and parents and friends, Baltimore City school personnel attending the ceremony included Sara Gray, Christolyn Buie, John Mohamed and Sheila Henley.

More than 46,000 students from more than 4,000 schools in 19 states and the District of Columbia participated in the 1990 Talent Search. This year marks the 11th anniversary of the Center. During this time, CTY has helped thousands of mathematically or verbally talented seventh graders develop their academic talents through educational planning and counseling, fast - paced courses and one-day workshops.

For more information about the programs call, Angela Pond, Linda B. Barrett or Pat Owen at (301) 338-8427.

City school students attending and honored at the reception were Kevin Middleton, Charay Jennings, Stewart Morgan, Phyllis Ajayi, Jessica Krick, Vermell Vaughan, Anthony Lambright, Clifford Bobian, Malaika Bogan, Mieka Gillette, Kyle Greenwell, Joseph Witherspoon, Darryn Felton, Yekeh Harris, Corey Henderson, Octoria Parks, Anthony Whitley, Aisha Howard, Colin Beebee, Daniel Bandy, Miaesha Blackwell, Jean Carson, Adam Cowan, Elizabeth Embry, Devaughn Maddox, Jenesta Matthews, Jamie Meyer, Ashley Short, Toya Smith, Paul Stankiewicz, Kimberly Waters, Anissa Weems, Tom Katsikides, Rose Kucharcyk, Nancy Meyer, Angela Hitchcock and Hermondoz Thompson.

Bright Students — Attending the Hopkins function were Octorial Parks, Gregory Siagle and Christine Hoskins.

MSU Educator cited

Dr. Sandye Jean McIntyre, II, Distinguished Professor Emeritus of Foreign Languages, was recently presented the Maryland Association for Higher Education's (MAHE) first annual OUTSTANDING EDUCATOR AWARD in the category of Advisor/Mentor.

Dr. Helen F. Giles-Gee, President of MAHE, read the citation honoring Dr. McIntyre before presenting him a plaque. Dr. McIntyre was nominated for this award by Dr. Earl S. Richardson, President of Morgan State University.

Dr. McIntyre, who, after 40 years of service to Morgan, retired in 1988, was last year's recipient of the Iva G. Jones Medallion Emblem, awarded annually to the Most Outstanding Faculty Member at Morgan.

He also received a plaque from the Maryland Foreign Language Association recognizing him as the outstanding college/university professor of foreign language in Maryland.

Another plaque was presented to Dr. McIntyre from the Association Francophone du Maryland for his distinguished contributions to French culture.

Rev. Crosson Retires

Rev. Crosson, pastor of John Wesley United Methodist Church 12 years, was one of 25 clergy members retiring. In addition to the conference's recognition of its retirees, John Wesley Church has been hosting guest ministers and choirs all week in honor of Rev. Crosson.

On Sunday, June 17, at 4 p.m., a banquet given at the church will end the festivities in the pastor's honor. The 69-year old Rev. Crosson will be replaced by Rev. DePriest Whye.

Additional speakers at the conference were Bishop Delton May who spoke about his "Initiative on Drug Program," a program sponsored by more than 10 churches in the Washington D.C. areas. These churches act as "saving stations" for the district's drug abusers.

Rev. Harry Hanes, the oral secretary for the United Methodist Committee on Relief, an organization that aids the victims of natural disasters and tragedies, also spoke.

Reports concerning membership gains and losses were discussed at the conference. Time also was taken to praise the members of the United Methodist Church. Worship services before each session were given.

SPECIAL DAY — It was a special day to be honored for Jenesta Matthews and her Godmother, Yolanda Powell.

Southland sponsors literacy luncheon

The next time you patronize a 7-Eleven store, you should really feel great about it. This company truly gives back to the community. On May 22 they gave to 46 community based literacy programs approximately $58,000. The grants ranged from $500 to $2,000.

The awards ceremony was preceded by a delightful luncheon held at the Sheraton-Carlton Hotel where grant monies were presented to the 46 groups. This provided an opportunity for the recipients and the other interested participants to meet and exchange experiences and ideas.

Since launching this literacy program last year the Capitol Division of Southland Corp. has contributed $500,000. There was an advisory board that evaluated the applications. "People Who Read Achieve" is a public service campaign designed to heighten awareness of the tremendous literary issue.

The Advisory Board Members are our own Mrs. Frances Draper, president of the AFRO AMERICAN Newspapers;

Dr. Hardy Franklin, director, D.C. Public Libraries; John Johnson, Assistant director NAACP; Cecily Robbins, executive director Big Sisters; Particia Gaskins, CEEP Coordinator D.C. Public Schools; Daniel Rochowiak, superintendent (Ret.) Baltimore Schools; Dr. Richard Hunter, superintendent Baltimore Schools; Lillian Wesley, president, Federation of Friends of D.C. Public Library System, and Jean Fugett Jr. attorney and former professional football player.

General manager of the Southland Corp., Kathleen Callahan-Guion announced the award receipents and is keely aware of the global necessity of literacy. The workforce at 7- Eleven consists of more than 50 percent of the firm's employees whose native language is not English.
