Grads honored

By: Theresa Mercer
AFRO Church Writer

Our churches always have played a key role in education.

Years ago, because of segregation, Douglas Senior High School was the only high school Blacks could attend and receive a diploma for graduation.

In 1940, Dunbar became the second fully accredited high school for Blacks. The same year, commencement was for 54 students.

Dunbars first graduating class was honored at a baccalaureate service at First Baptist Church, 525 N. Caroline Street.

As the class of 1940 celebrated through several activities, two major events occurred.

On June 3, the class returned to First Baptist Church for worship service. After the morning service, dinner was graciously served by the church.

On June 8, when Dunbar's graduating class of 1990 marched for their honors, the class of 1940 marched behind them.

Reporters...jumping bushes to chase the mayor's limousine.. Back stepping cameramen crashing to the ground trying to catch R. Kenneth Mundy...Channels 4, 5, 7, 9 yelling questions at the same time..."Mr. Mayor...a plea . . . a resignation . . . anything . . . a source said...Jesse Jackson...Walter Fauntroy...George Stallings and even the Guardian Angels.

Welcome to "Hollywood on the Potomac, "Barry-gate," the drug and perjury trial or the political lynching of the mayor. It all depends on whom you talk to...

R. KENNETH MUNDY, the mayor's attorney reminded potential juors that the defendant was innocent until proven guilty.

SKETCHES
By Thomas Stockett

But wait — hold on . . . It has just begun.

To be a witness one has to arrive early at the U.S. District Court House even before the cook at the basement snack shop who has worked overtime scrambling eggs because of the throng.

The U.S. District Court House has been transplanted into a granite circus tent with at least three ring performances going on inside and outside of the Federal building each day.

Ring one is definitely courtroom number two, with the ringmaster being Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson, a Reagan appointed judge with a booming voice who keeps the lawyers in check and the potential jurors informed on their rights and responsibilities in the case.

Then there are the lead lawyers in the case. Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts and and defense counsel R. Kenneth Mundy. Mr. Roberts sports an Afro and has a limited selection of suits, but is a serious minded attorney as compared to R. Kenneth Mundy, the sweetheart of the courtroom who knows the law, but can always keep a little humor under his hat which is trademark hat.

The co-counsel for the government is Judith Retchin, who looks more like a rent collector about to serve an eviction notice, while her counterpart seems to be Anita Bonds, the mayor's chief political adviser who sits next to Mr. Mundy.

Whatever her role is as a, "jury consultant," she must be doing a good job because after each potential juror, she is consulted by both the mayor and Mr. Mundy. (Robert Mance is actually Mr. Mundy's assistant but he has only been in the courtroom a few times.)

There are many types of people who fill the 10 pews of the courtroom. On the front row are the artists and the mayor's closest associates complete with his body guard and fashionable press secretary Lurma Rackly.

The second, third and fourth rows are mostly press: ranging from Frances Hardren of Cable News Network to everyone else who writes for a tabloid. The last rows are for the first 20 people in the public line each day. Usually, the're the same folks.

As for tourist attractions, forget the Smithsonian Institution or the U.S. Capitol. The Court House is the place to be with people from all across the country have been dropping in on the trial of Mayor Marion Barry.

"Are you a Secret Service agent?: Are you?.." asked one woman with a heavy southern accent as she and her contingent wandered through the courthouse and found their target: Courtroom Number 2.

Mayor Barry can hardly contain himself. But even he got bored this week and was seen playing tick tac toe with his chief political adviser Anita Bonds, who despite an awesome job, takes her work with a smile.
