Brailey car burns:
Was it a bombing?

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

When Chessie M. Brailey awakened to answer her ringing telephone approximately 4 a.m. Thursday she had no idea what was happening outside her Baker Street home.

"When I went to the door I saw my daughter-in-law's car engulfed in flames and firemen trying to put the fire out," said Mrs. Brailey, as tears crowded her eyes and then trickled down her face. She is state Sen. Troy Brailey's wife.

Her daughter-in-law's 1984 two-door BMW had been totalled. Barbara Brailey, a computer analyst for Equitable Bank, could not be reached for comment.

Capt. Patrick P. Flynn, of

The newest member of the Maryland General Assembly, Samuel M. Parham, who was elected Tuesday night to fill a vacant seat in the 41 District, is a quiet and reasonable man who will "fit right in" said a veteran senator.

Sen. Clarence W. Blount, 41-D, said Wednesday Parham will help the lawmaking body, by bringing his expertise on education to the Pupils rewarded for achievements

By Alisa Samuels

Nearly 100 children who attend elementary schools in the 39th Legislative District will soon get paid for their achievements in school, said a district legislator.

Del. Elijah E. Cummings said he and a group called the Foundation For Community Unity and Services, comprised of 70 young professionals who want to give something back to their community.

They are planning in June to award $50 and a plaque, named in honor of educator Lena K. Lee, to 96 elementary students who have perfect attendance, good grades and very supportive parents.

Cummings said one child from each of the 16 elementary schools in grades kindergarten through five will be honored.

"We have to reach out to them and show them we care," Cummings said in his Annapolis office Wednesday.

"This is an extra incentive for children... It will give them a sense of using a bank and seeing a black bank president," added Cummings.

"I was 35-years-old when I first saw a black bank president," Cummings said.

Cummings said the nonprofit organization has asked the Harbor Bank of Maryland, a black-owned bank, to secure the 96 individual $50 savings account.

Cummings said Joseph Haskins, the bank's owner, however said the bank requires a $100 minimum savings deposit, but Haskins would manage a way to allow $50 deposits for the students.

Haskins could not be reached for comment.

The delegate said the $50

Charles Village fights Oak St. AME expansion

By Helen Glover Cook
AFRO Staff Reporter

The Oak Street African Methodist Episcopal Church wants to purchase a surplus school building and row house from the city of Baltimore Department of Housing and Community Development.

This has upset business leaders in the Charles Village and Remington area, who see the church acquisition of the property as an expansion of non-profit, non-taxpaying organizations in the area.

Last summer the Department of Housing organized a task force to seek uses for the

Baltimore Urban League Orchard Church proposal

By Delfield S. Yoes, III

Bids have been received and are in the process of review, for the renovation of historic Orchard Street Church, located at 520 Orchard Street.

Three developers have submitted renovation proposals for the church, which is believed to have been a station along the route of the Underground Railroad, which assisted fugitive slaves in their trek north in search of freedom.

The city has received responses from a tandem of two Baltimore developers, the Baltimore Urban League and a Philadelphia developer.

The team of Paul Bryant, of Baldwin Development Co., and Alex Sotir, of Sotir Construction Co., wants to transform the church into a project to be named, Spectrum Day Care Center.

They intend to create an adult and a child day care center using the church and the Sunday school. The cost of construction is estimated at $1,264,000.

The Baltimore Urban League, wants to move its headquarters from the current location at Mondawmin Shopping Mall, to the Orchard Street facility.

The Urban League's proposal also includes plans to
