Giving a child a piece of their minds

Giving children a piece of her mind is Helen Quarles, a volunteer tutor with the Lillie A. Ross after-school tutorial program at Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

New to the scene of outreach ministries is the Lillie A. Ross After-School Tutorial Program at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, 2110 Madison Avenue.

The program began in September, 1988 with Jeanne Cummings, retired school administrator, as its director.

Rev. Curtis A. Jones serves as the pastor of this community-oriented church.

The tutorial program services the needs of children primarily in the Greater Madison Park Area of Baltimore City.

Some 40 children are now being provided tutoring services in reading and mathematics, grades three through five.

The program offers both enrichment and remedial instructions.

Frequent conferences with the teachers and principals of the feeder schools help to provide an individual educational program for each child enrolled in the program.

All of the tutors are volunteers who are members or friends of the Outreach Ministries Office at Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. During each class session the tutors follow a prescribed lesson for each child.

Records of progress are kept by the director, Mrs. Cummings, who assists in providing parents with communications regarding the program.

The tutorial program is designed to augment the instruction provided by the Baltimore City Schools #61 and #11.

Quite often the individual instruction for each child is all that is needed to insure success.

The self-assurance each child experiences in the tutorial program makes a viable difference in the classroom.

And, at Madison Avenue School, there are many hugs and gold stars for tasks well done.

Now that second semester of the tutorial program has begun, the Director is concentrating on gathering funds in order to add computer education to the program.

With the addition of computers, many problems of individualized instruction can be solved and will allow for services to parents in the community in the form of SAT and GED reviews, employment aptitude assessments and basic computer literacy.

Mrs. Cummings is looking for as many volunteer tutors as possible, from all over the city, in order to increase the program to more days per week.

They are presently meeting on Wednesday and Thursday of each week but hope to include Tuesday classes soon. If interested, please call 523-7935.

Instrumental to the success of the tutorial program are the following volunteer tutors: Blanche Beckham, Charlotte Bracy, Norma Bracy, Yvonne Brown, Gwendolyn Carter;

Stephany Graham, Graftine Haynie, Curtis Jones, Peggy Jones, Audry May, Carolyn Payton, Helen Quarles, Lillie A. Ross;

Madie Rucker, Marian Smith, Royal Weaver, Ruth Williams, Thelma Williams, Sarah Newton, Mildred Hodge;

Three students from Y.E.S. (Youth Evangelism Services), Kevin Boehmer, Nancy Speigle and Phillip Stauffer.

Library and transportation services are provided by Mary Dameron and Robert Stephens.
