Forum organized by Dr. Albert Daly, who headed the program, during which aspiring poets from the community read their works. The Coppin State College Reader Theatre also performed.

Music In The Arts is in the form of a concert of African American students at the Peabody Conservatory while Dance is recognized by a Dance Symposium led by dance historian Joe Nash.

The feeling generated by the Arts Festival can best be described by Dan Tindall, a Northwestern High 11th grader, whose collage "Jammin" won the Best in the Show recognition. He and his brother could not stop looking at his work.

"I never took art before. I never knew how good I was. Now I know that I can do it (create)," said Tindall. "It really runs in the family," whispered his brother.

guests replenished themselves lavishly.

To add to the fun — as always at the Omega Mardi Gras, there was the parade of costumes, during which the guests, bedeckled in colorful and interesting and yes, weird adornments, and reveling in their splendor and uniqueness, vied for first, second and third prizes in the competition.

Prizes in the individual category went to Sharon Cosgrove who garnered first place and $100 as a bunch of grapes; Margaret Jones, who won second place and $75 as an Indian Woman Warrior, and Hubert Simms, in third place with a win of $50 as the Great Slick and Sly.

In the Couples' category, Troy and Gina Taylor came in first as Mike Tyson and Robbin Givens; Gretchen and Gregory styles, in second place as the ghouls, and Elaine and Frank Reese as Tina (as in Tina Turner) and Elvis.

Judging the costumes this year were Edith Crawford-Gibson, educational specialist, BCPS, and Sunday Tenabe, Curator, MSU Art Center (Individuals); Jerlyn Eddings, of the Sunpapers and Norman Ross, Head of Cultural Arts for the Eubie Blakc Gallery (couples) and Gwendolyn Biddle, dance teacher, and Sam Wilson, head of the Arena Players.

Mardi Gras '89 was a smashing success.

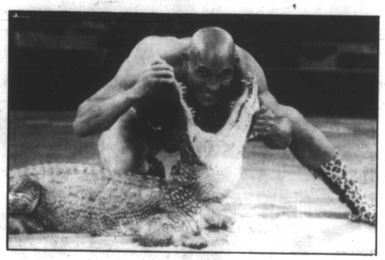
African Wonders Featured in the 'Greatest Show on Earth'



FOR THE FIRST time in Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus history, the most terrifying of all reptiles, the alligator, is showcased. In an amazing display of raw courage, Tahar The Moroccan Master brings his awesome mental power to The Greatest Show on Earth as he confronts the fiercely lashing alligators face-to-face.

Where can you find fierce tigers and lions, trembling elephants, and frightening alligators? On the continent of Africa and at the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus! This year the two are combined.

The circus brings the excitement of Africa to the DC-Richmond-Baltimore area within the next two months featuring Tahar, the Moroccan Master, who fearlessly commands a deadly assemblage of alligators in an attraction never seen before.

Tahar starts by hypnotizing the ferocious alligators with his mental powers. Then he passes his hand between their jaws. He proves his command of the natural world when he places his head between those cold-blooded jaws of death!

African adventures await at every turn in the show. From the most remote reaches of the jungle come 16 authentic Zulu warriors who captivate the audience with a traditional tribal ceremony. Dressed in native garments and wearing beaded necklaces and headdresses, they perform an astonishing tribal war dance for the first time outside the African continent.

The safari magic continues as wild animal trainer Larry Allen Dean, The Jungle King, enters the Great Steel Cage alone to face 14 African lions. Carmen Hall, the only woman ever to present fully grown male African baboons, will dazzle audiences with her primate training prowess.

The spectacular presents trapeze artistry performed by Mexico's Flying Vasquez, Spain's sensational Quiros family on the highwire, Holland's Marco and Philip Peters with a pair of Bengal tigers on the whirling Wheel of Death, the Tianjin Acrobats from The People's Republic of China, Axel Gautier, Lilov's Bears, and much, much, more!

And what would the circus be without clowns? This year marks the 21st anniversary of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Clown College, and the circus make a very special tribute to this "Institute of Higher Hilarity."

Electrifying experience

WEARING THEIR SAFETY gear, hard hats, glasses, and ear plugs, students learn about equipment that monitors the output of electricity.

About 120, fifth and sixth graders from River Terrace and Thomas Elementary Schools toured Potomac Electric Power Company's Benning Road Generating Station and other facilities there in Washington, DC.

This 75-acre site in their neighborhood of the 330 block of Benning Road NE also houses the utility company's central print shop, warehouse, general shops, motor transportation garage and training facility for line crews.

Hundreds of Washington-area school children tour PEPCO power plants annually through PEPCO's Community Relations and Educational Services.

The Benning oil-fired power plan, which generates 550 megawatts of electricity for DC neighborhoods as well as the metropolitan area, is in use only about 10 percent of the time, primarily during such periods of high demand as hot summer afternoons. It is one of PEPCO's six generating stations serving nearly two million people.

Teachers interested in touring an electric plant should contact their local power company.

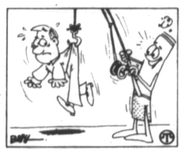
Did You Know?



Some 54 million Americans who still smoke are hooked. They have started a harmful habit that is difficult to get rid of. Nicotine, the drug in cigarettes, causes the body and the mind to crave it. This drug hurts that part of the brain that cause relaxation, and also increases the heart rate and raises the blood pressure.

When a smoker decides to stop, a "withdrawal syndrome" occurs. The symptoms include headaches, muscle aches, anxiety, irritability, and continued strong cravings for cigarettes.

Many doctors give the smoking patients a gum to chew that has nicotine in it. The small amounts of nicotine in the gum help to relieve some of the withdrawal symptoms.

Smoking is a habit that causes difficulty in breathing and often results in death.
