Pier Six seeking repair$$

By Alisa Samuels

Sen. Larry Young said he is "guardedly optimistic" the state will grant $750,000 to repair the Pier Six Concert Pavilion.

"I am guardedly optimistic that we will be able to get the funds," said Sen. Young, who is a Baltimore Center for the Performing Arts board member.

Young said the pavilion's eight-year-old tent, which he said is durable for five to seven years, is in dire need of repair. "We stretched that about as far as it can go," the senator said.

"We might be able to get it through until 1990, but after that it will be tough."

In Annapolis Wednesday, state planning representatives were not very receptive to Young and the BCPA's request during a Senate Budget and Taxation Committee hearing.

State planning said it only has $15 million available, so it could not fund all of the $130 proposed projects.

Under Young's bill, the money would be used to renovate the pavilion's exterior. The bill originally asked for $1.85 million.

Young said the outdoor entertainment site is a bargain for entertainment lovers in the city. Over the years, big-name jazz, soul and pop performers have performed here.

"Where else do you find major entertainment for four months with tickets as low as $16.50?" Young asked.

Another of Young's bond bills asks the state for money to build a recreational facility for students and neighborhood children of St. Frances Charles Hall High School.

And despite the holy appearance and friendly manner of Young's friend, Sister Reginald Gerdes, state planning did not recommend the state meet the school's $150,000 matching funds request.

"We come short of stealing to make keep our programs running," said Sister Reginald. The school is one of the oldest black Catholic high schools in the nation.

Young said he was optimistic the committee would vote to award the school some money, in spite of state planning's decision.
