NEW NAME — Wilson Street become Islamic Way as a beaming Mayor Schmoke unveils the sign designating the new name. Looking on (R) is Hafiz Qari Manzoor Sialwi who came to this country for the occasion.

Eid ul Fitre celebration

Sunday, May 7, state and city government officials joined the muslims of the Baltimore Masjid in celebration of Eid-ul-Fitr.

The Mayor of Baltimore, the Honorable Kurt L. Schmoke, presented a proclamation proclaiming May 7, 1989, "Islamic Community Day" in Baltimore.

The Governor's office sent a state citation commending the Muslims of the Baltimore Masjid upon their completion of the fast and the celebration of Eid-ul-Fitr.

A state senate resolution was also presented by state Senator Larry Young commending the Muslims for their steadfastness in the faith.

Vice President of the City Council, Councilwomen Jacquline McLean, along with council members Anthony Ambridge, Iris Reeves and Lawrence Bell, III, presented over 50 city council resolutions to members of the Baltimore Masjid commending them on their steadfastness in observing the tenents of Al-Islam.

The most historic moment of the Eid celebration came when the Mayor climbed the ladder to unveil the street's new name, "Islamic Way."

Approximately one month ago the Baltimore Masjid requested Councilman Bell to put a bill into the city council to have the street on which the masjid is located changed from Wilson Street to Islamic Way.

We are changing the name of Wilson Street to Islamic Way as part of the celebration of our 30 years on Wilson Street that will be commemorated during the first week of October, 1989.
