IF YOU ASK ME

By Bettye Moss

If You Ask Me Hopkins, finally

In 1959, Louis Wade Sullivan, fresh out of Boston University Medical School, was offered a residency position at famed Johns Hopkins here in Baltimore. Instead; the man who remembers himself "a brash young physician in the midst of making a decision," selected Boston for his residency.

In the thirty years since then, Dr. Sullivan has distinguished himself in clinical, research and teaching posts at Cornell Medical Center, Harvard Medical School. Boston City Hospital, and at Morehouse College in his hometown of Atlanta where he helped establish the Morehouse Medical School and served as dean and president.

And, he is noted for his contributions to medicine, particularly in hematology, and for his commitment to providing opportunities for disadvantaged youth to pursue medical careers and serve in poverty-stricken inner city areas.

Earlier this year, President George Bush picked him to be the U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services, the largest domestic federal department with a budget of $150 billion!!

And, earlier this month, the nation's first black cabinet member received another invitation from Johns Hopkins, This time, he accepted. He was keynote speaker at the June 7th opening ceremony marking the 100th birthday of the Hopkins medical institution at the Convention Center.

After his learned speech, Hopkins president, Dr. Steven Muller, conferred an honorary doctorate of humane letters; moving Dr. Sullivan to observe, "Today, I have finally made it to Baltimore . . . to Johns Hopins . . . this outstanding historic institution. I will treasure it always . ."

What he said

Dr. Sullivan praised leaders who have made Hopkins "a special center of scholarship for 100 years," and "made the name Johns Hopkins synonymous with excellence in health care, research and education."

The audience of 2,500 listened intently. In the crowd, Congressman Kwesi Mfume, Gov. William Donald Schaefer, Mayor Kurt Schmoke.

Secretary Sullivan was frank and impressive when he observed, "We must find ways to improve our efforts for health promotion and disease prevention: to keep people well, independent and productive.

"We must take these health maintenance messages to the poor, to our minority citizens and to the medically underserved in our rural areas and our inner cities.

"We must make our themes relevant by being culturally appropriate and sensitive to the ethnic and socioeconomic diversity in our population . ."

And this . . . ."As a compassionate society, we must address the disparate health status of the poor and our minority citizens.

"We need better strategies to provide adequate, effective health services in our medically under-served inner cities and rural areas, to our poor and minority citizens.

"We are compelled to find ways to strengthen the family, to combat illiteracy, to prevent the disentergration of our communities, which results in homelessness, crime, drug abuse, violence and other ills. These, too, adversely affect the health status of our citizens . . . ."

Their 46th

Happy day: It was on that last Sunday at the lovely Randallstown home of Charles and Charlotte Harper. Family and friends gathered to help them mark their 46th wedding anniversary.

Earlier in the day, many joined them for worship at Sharp St. United Methodist Church. (They've been active for years, just as their fathers before them. Mr. Harper's dad, the late Rev. Charles S. Harper, Sr., was pastor of St. Paul Methodist Church. Mr. Harper's dad the late Augustus Holsey was longtime trustee and superintendent at Sharp St.

Harper daughters were there, Cheryl Jones, the State Department of Education supervisor, and Sharon May, the attorney.

Grandchildren, Randon Jones, 5; and Eric May, 14, were there. Also from Hagerstown, Mr. Harper's cousins, Walter and Martha Hollins.

There were oohs and aahs for family and friends, Anna G. Bennett, the retired teacher. She wore the same peach chiffon frock she wore to the wedding 46 years ago . . . and it was right in style with its jeweled neckline and pleated skirt and cap sleeves.

Mrs. Harper was also a picture in pink chiffon, a 1989 model - with a self tied belt. Lovely!

Cuff note: the Harpers are retired educators - she was a principal, he was teacher and later court commissioner. Both are known as caring good, good neighbors who take the time to help and comfort many.

Honor grads

Hats off to 18-year-old Ahmad Ridley. He was valedictorian at Baltimore Polytechnic institute this year. At commencement exercises on June 11, he gave farewell address, urging his fellow 300 grads — "never lose sight of your goals."

Young, Ridley maintained a 4.0 average during his three years at Poly, where he majored in math and science. He won a four-year scholarship to the University of Maryland, Baltimore County, (UMBC). His career goal—to complete eight more years of schooling, earn a doctorate in math and science.

Ridley is a member of St. Paul Methodist Church. He resides on Harlem Ave. in West Baltimore. Proud mom is Mrs. Margie Ridley, a Health Care, Financing employee in D.C. Proud grands; Mrs. Tearlie Nelson and Mrs. Annie Ridley.

Cuff note: Ridley is secretary of the Harlem Park NAACP Youth Council. He was a member of the chess club, the tutorial organization, computer club and the math, engineering and science association during his days at Poly.

To Tulane

Also graduating with honors from Poly was Fred D. Mason 3rd. He was awarded the dean's honor scholarship to Tulane University in New Orleans, will major in political economy

Fred is the first black Poly student to be a national merit scholarship finalist—the award given to students nationwide who demonstrate outstanding scores on a national college entrance exam given in the junior year of high school.

The youngster was also a national scholarship award finalist, won a scholarship from Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, the Md. Merit Scholarship Award, as well as citations for perfect attendance, creative writing and excellence in history.

At age 2, he began attending Sunday School at St. James Episcopal Church, where he was a member of the Junior Fellowship and served as acolyte. The church presented him a $500 scholarship prize this past Sunday.

Proud parents: Elise Jude Mason, the associate city solicitor; and Fred D. Mason, Jr., the Archway Ford assistant sales manager. Grands are George and Vashti Jude of Baltimore and Fred and Hazel Mason of Tasley, Va.

Cuff note: In addition to his scholastic and church activities, young Fred found time for Poly's varsity swim team, was a panelist on the
