Sex survey examines blacks

Consider the following:

If you discovered that the husband or boyfriend or your best friend was having an affair with another woman, how would you react?

Or, if by chance, the wife or girlfriend of your best friend made brazen overtures toward you, what would you do?

These and more questions — some explicit — are being asked of participants in the first National Black Sex Survey.

The 13 page questionnaire is being completed by blacks in at least 40 American cities, according to LTNS/Success News, the group that developed the study.

"We are asking that people complete all questions and answers them honestly," a spokesman for the group said. "The beliefs are your attitudes and not what may be considered society's views and beliefs."

Those wishing to participate may order a copy of the questionaire by writing LTNS/Success News 803 Florida Ave., N.W. Washington, D.C. 20001.

BUSINESS IN THE BLACK

Japan keeps piling up money

By Charles E. Belle

Imperial Hotel, Tokyo...It should come as no surprise to you that Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank, Tokyo, Japan, with a record 371 billion U.S. dollars, is the world's biggest bank. The fact that six of the largest banks out of the top ten in the world are Japanese Banks should bother someone in a White House in the United States.

Since the "Bay Area Economic Mission," led by Mayor Art Agnos of the city of San Francisco and Mayor Tom McEnery of the City of San Jose, set foot on Japanese soil, the cost of our living has soared out of sight. Spending to stay even with our Japanese host is hopelessly out of the question. Japan has so much money, that it does not seem to care about foreign business people looking to participate in their prosperity.

Prices for simple food products are outrageous even by American millionaires' standards travelling with us. Seven dollars for an orange! Really! Rip off prices these are not, just the going rate. The overload of Japanese middlemen make it virtually impossible for an outsider to penetrate the Japanese domestic market.

The make-shift regulations on imports prevents lower cost goods from being fairly priced inside the Japanese market, making their consumers cough up unreasonable prices for both domestic and foreign produced products. Protection of its mega profit center companies keeps foreigners from entering the Japanese domestic market. For example, all foods and fish must be sold first to either a marketing organization, broker in a Producing Center or on selling consignments and purchases to a wholesaler.

The wholesaler with a guaranteed fixed commission then sells it to an authorized buyer (like a canner or food processor) or a "middleman" who sells it to an "ordinary buyer" (like a retail store). By the time the vegetables or frozen fish get to the Japanese consumer, the cost bears little relationship to the producer's original first offered price.

Carola Hills, U.S. Trade Representative's office, has cited Japan as the leading country posing unfair trade barriers. Thses areas include Telecommunications, their distribution system, construction, agricultural products, supercomputers, semiconductors, optical fibers, soda ash and aluminum.
