'We need to ban together to combat drugs', Barry says

By Diana Carter
AFRO Staff Intern

D.C. Mayor Marion Barry held a press conference to announce the outcome of the Leadership of the U.S. Conference of Mayors in New Port, R.I.

In a letter addressed to William Bennett, Mr. Barry outlined a 16-point program that the mayor's decided.

"Mayors from all over the country came to Rhode Island to discuss these points. We agreed President Bush's new drug policy is good, but we need to do more," he said.

The mayors created a 16-point plan to implement the nation's drug control strategy that will be announced on Sept. 5. In the plan, several points include request for money to be spent on prevention and education of drugs.

"We have to do more when this country is only stopping 10 percent of the 300,000 pounds of cocaine that is coming into this country. We can't do anything with $200 million the B-2 costs $70 billion and it . . doesn't even work," said Mr. Barry.

Of the 16 points, the mayor's conference is calling for an international drug eradication army. The army would eradicate illegal drug crops and stop the flow of illegal exports across national borders.

Mr.Barry said that Mayor Koch of New York and he agreed on the need for an army.

"Mayor Koch and I agreed that we need a multi-national combat force to that is well-trained and at the request of the country that will go in anywhere."

Mr. Barry also pointed out the plan that President Bush is proposing needs to be effective.

"Mr. Bush's plan targets street level criminals the majority of who are black and Hispanic, but what about those that bring cocaine into the country," he said. "We need to make the penalties tougher."

"We need to band together across multi-national boundaries to assist in beating drugs. The drug cartel in Columbia are so bold as to offer to pay off the country's debt. We need to do more."
