No. 5511 Equity

and injury to them, or whether or not it will be to the advantage of all of said heirs at law infants as well as adults that said real estate be sold and the proceeds divided amongst them and give your reasons for such opinion?

Ans. Said real estate described as Exhibit "A" & "B" is not susceptible of being divided amongst said heirs at law without loss and injury to them but it will be to the advantage of all of said heirs at law infants as well as adults that said real estate be sold & proceeds divided amongst them. My reasons for this opinion are that said real estate is too small to be advantageously divided amongst so many parties particularly as the whole of this real estate is largely encumbered by Mortgages and a large portion of it is in City Property consisting of Brick houses utterly incapable of such a division —
