"THE ANCIENT CITY."

Several citizens of influence having expressed the opinion, that the sense of the people had been properly taken, it would not appear that the whole of the proceedings of the meeting of the 25th received their approval, the friends of American liberty met the statement by distributing hand-bills, earnestly requesting another general meeting of citizens. The second meeting was held May 27th, when the proceedings of the 28th were fully approved. The opposition, however, did not stop here. On Monday, May 30th, a protest, signed by one hundred and thirty-five citizens, amongst whom were some of the best names of the town and vicinity, made its appearance.

"TO THE PRINTERS."

MAY 30th, 1774.

"A publication of the enclosed protest, supported by the names of a considerable number of the inhabitants of the city of Annapolis, will, it is presumed, furnish the most authentic grounds for determining the sense of the majority, on a question of the last importance.

"We, whose names are subscribed, inhabitants of the city of Annapolis, conceive it our clear right, and most incumbent duty, to express our cordial and explicit disapprobation of a resolution which was carried by forty-seven against thirty-one, at the meeting held on the 27th instant.

"The resolution against which we protest, in the face of the world, is the following:

"That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the gentlemen of the law of this province, bring no suit for the recovery of any debt due from any inhabitant of this province, to any inhabitant of Great Britain until the said act be repealed."—Dissentient.

"First—Because we are impressed with a full conviction, that this resolution is founded in treachery and rashness, inasmuch as it is big with bankruptcy and ruin to those inhabitants of Great Britain, who, made us masters of their fortunes, condemning them unheard, for not having interposed their influence with parliament in favor of the town of Boston, without duly weighing the force, with which that influence would probably have operated; or whether, in their conduct, they were actuated by wisdom and policy, or by corruption and avarice.

"Secondly—Because whilst the inhabitants of Great Britain are partially despoiled of every legal remedy to recover what is justly due to them, no provision is made to prevent us from being harassed by the prosecution of internal suits, but our fortunes and persons are left at the mercy of domestic creditors, without a possibility of extricating ourselves, unless by a general convulsion, an event in the contemplation of sober reason, replete with horror.

"Thirdly—Because our credit, as a commercial people, will expire under the wound; for what confidence can possibly be reposed in those, who shall have exhibited the most avowed and most striking proof that they are not bound by obligations as sacred as human invention can suggest.

A meeting of the committees appointed by the several counties of the province of Maryland, was held at the city of Annapolis, on the 22nd of June, 1774. There were present for Anne Arundel county and the city of Annapolis, Charles Carroll, Esq., barrister, Messrs. B. T. B. Worthington, Thomas Johnson, Jr., Samuel Chase, John Hall, William Paca, Matthias Hammond, Samuel Chew, John Weems, Thomas Dorsey, Rezin Hammond.

The letter and vote of the town of Boston, several letters and papers from Philadelphia and Virginia, the act of parliament for blocking up the port and harbor of Boston, the bill depending in parliament relative of the charter of the Massachusetts Bay, and that enabling the governor to send supposed offenders from thence to another colony or England for trial, were read,—and, after mature deliberations thereon, it was Resolved, That the said act of parliament, and bills, if passed into acts, are cruel and oppressive invasions of the natural rights of the people of Massachusetts Bay, as men, and of their constitutional rights as English subjects; and that the said act, if not repealed, and the said bills, if passed into acts, will lay a foundation for the utter destruction of British America, and, therefore, that the town of Boston and the province of Massachusetts are now suffering in the common cause of America.

Resolved, That it is the duty of every colony in America to unite in the most speedy and effectual means to obtain a repeal of the said act, and also of the said bills if passed into acts."

The third resolution was to the effect to stop all importations from and exportations to Great Britain.

The fourth resolution asserted that this province will join in an association with the principal and neighboring colonies to stop all exportations to, and importations from, Great Britain, to go into effect on some day agreed upon by the colonists.

The fifth resolution instructed the deputies from this province to agree to any restrictions upon exports to the West Indies, deemed necessary by the colonies in the general congress.

The sixth resolution authorized the deputies from this province to admit and provide for the importation of particular articles from Great Britain as are supposed to be indispensable.

The seventh resolution recommended to merchants and vendors of goods not to take advantage of the resolve for non-importation, but to sell their goods at the rate sold within the year previous.

The eighth resolution provided for a subscription for the relief of the inhabitants of Boston.

The ninth resolution expressed thanks to the friends of liberty in Great Britain.

The tenth resolution appointed Matthew Tilghman, Thomas Johnson, Jr., Robert Goldsborough, William Paca, and Samuel Chase, Esq., deputies for this province to attend a general congress, which was recommended to be held on September 20th.

The eleventh resolution asserted that this province will break off trade and dealings with that colony, province, or town, which shall decline the common plan which may be adopted.

The twelfth resolution directed that copies of these resolutions be sent to the Committees of Correspondence, and be published in the Maryland Gazette.

The strong, loyal opposition to English measures, existing in Annapolis which cropped out, at this period, has made the ancient city renowned in American history.

The burning of the Peggy Stewart was one of the most remarkable events of the Revolutionary period.

The valor of this extraordinary conduct was heightened by the presence of two local English officers, and a strong English sentiment. Mr. Eddis, the English Custom House officer, quaintly says: "I attended the whole progress of the business, and was active in my exertions to prevent the extremities to which some frantic zealots proceeded."

Mr. Eddis further declares that the owners did not burn the ship willingly, but were forced to destroy it by the citizens.

According to adjournment, the State Convention met on December 8th, and continued to the 22th. There were present 85 members. Mr. John Hall in the chair, Mr. John Duckett, clerk. The proceedings of the Continental Congress were unanimously approved, and it was resolved that every person in the province ought to carry into effect the association agreed on by the Continental Congress, and the most stringent measures were adopted to repress by force the invasion of their rights.

It was now apparent that the dispute between the colonies and the mother country would be settled by an appeal to arms. Annapolis made ready for the conflict. In compliance with the recommendation of the deputies of the several counties of the province, at their convention in June, that the gentlemen, freeholders, and other freemen of this province, as are from sixteen to fifty years of age, form themselves into companies, and to select their officers, a number of the citizens of Annapolis met on December 14th, and chose their officers agreeably to the recommendation. The companies were composed of

DANIEL DULANY

One of the most prominent lawyers of the Colonial period in Maryland, Daniel Dulany, was born in Queen's County, Ireland, in 1685. He arrived in Maryland in 1703 and by 1710 was admitted to the Bar of the Provincial Court. In the same year he married Charity Courts. She died a year after their marriage, and Dulany married Rebecca Smith a few years later. He and Rebecca had seven children. In 1737 Rebecca died, and he married Henrietta Maria Chew in 1738. Widow of Samuel Chew, she had six children. She and Dulany had one child.

Already a prominent Maryland lawyer by 1721, Dulany was appointed Attorney General by the Provincial Governor, and also served the Proprietor as Commissary General, Judge of the Admiralty, and Agent and Receiver-General during the next fifteen years. He also served the people, who elected him to the Lower House of the General Assembly from 1722 to 1741, representing Annapolis from 1722 to 1724, Anne Arundel County from 1725 to 1738 and Annapolis again from 1738 to 1741. He was an Alderman and Recorder of Annapolis, and in 1742 he was appointed as a Member of the Governor's Council, a post he held under three successive Governors until his death in 1753. He is buried in St. Anne's graveyard in Annapolis.

Social Activities

Occupational Profile

Dulany & Siders were in a position to effect political influence when necessary to further their industrial concerns. Dulany wrote the legislation which exempted employees of iron works from militia muster but from separate labor law roads & bridges.

(47)

A founder of Baltimore Iron Works Company, his initial investment of £700 in 1731 rose to £10,000, by his death. ^{in value} (1)

Partnered by S. Meryent ministers, BENJAMIN TASKER (1690-1708), ^{DR.} CHARLES CARROLL
(1691-1755); CHARLES CARROLL (1702-1782), Daniel Kneass of Annapolis;

✓ land speculator - minister in warrants, held against the day when the demand for plantations in the unsettled back country would justify the expense of surveying.

✓ Planter

✓ Money lender - by 1730 he was in the loan business on a large scale (40) he dealt in all three types of money, tobacco, currency and sterling - his most numerous customers were small traders; also made loans to planters, especially the smaller ones

Invested in the slave trade - offered the attraction of double profits, first on the slaves when they were sold, and then on loans made to the planters who purchased them (41)

Dulany's eldest son remained in England throughout the war.¹³ As a loyal subject dispossessed by the war, Dan applied to the treasury for compensation and in 1778 received a lump sum of £ 400 and an annuity of £ 200 until loyalist claims were finally settled after independence.¹⁴

Of his two living brothers, Dulany kept in closer contact with Dennis, who like himself, declined to emigrate. Dennis did not, apparently, support the patriot cause, nor did he commit himself to any of the small disturbances created by loyalists in Maryland during the war. He continued as clerk in Kent County until the middle of 1777 and then retired to his plantation where he died unmarried in November, 1779, leaving almost the whole of his estate to Mary, widow of his brother Walter.¹⁵

Lloyd alone among the sons of Councillor Dulany became an active loyalist—in intrigue rather than fighting. After he reached London in early 1776 Lloyd turned his home into a center for American refugees. Word got about that he had ambitions. A British peer suggested to the ministry that Lloyd be employed as agent to induce General Washington, "his bosom friend," to perform for George III the same service that General Monck had for Charles II, and for the same reward, a dukedom.¹⁶ Somehow this information in garbled form came to the ears of American agents abroad and was mirthfully reported back to Maryland from the listening post at Paris. "Lloyd Delany I am told flatters himself to come out Lieutenant Governor of Maryland," wrote a Paris correspondent. "What will you give him for his salary. his office I believe will be like L^d Littletons in air."¹⁷

Lloyd's intrigues, bordering on the fantastic if he seriously believed he could persuade Washington to bring the revolting colonies back into the empire, had far less effect on the course of the war than the military activities of the younger Dulanys, Walter's sons, Grafton and Walter, Junior.

After Lord Howe had settled his redcoats in Philadelphia in the fall of 1777, Grafton and Walter, Junior, made their way to his headquarters and received commissions in a paper unit, the
