MARVIN MANDEL a biography

MARVIN MANDEL, MARYLAND'S 56TH ELECTED GOVERNOR, began his service to the state in the House of Delegates in 1952. He served as chairman of both the House Ways and Means Committee and the Baltimore City delegation before he was elected speaker of the House in 1963. He served in that office until his General Assembly colleagues elected him by a huge margin to be governor on Jan. 7, 1969. Mandel again was overwhelmingly elected to two four-year terms, first in 1970, and again in 1974.

During his 28 years in public office, he profoundly reorganized and modernized all three branches of state government: as speaker, the Maryland legislature, and as governor, the executive branch and significant parts of the judicial branch.

As speaker, he commissioned the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University to study and make recommendations to establish a more efficient and modern committee system and services for the legislative branch of government, which he implemented and are still largely in place today.

During his gubernatorial years, Mandel compiled one of the most outstanding records of progress, innovation and reform of any governor in the nation. His leadership and ability have been recognized by the toughest critics possible: his fellow governors.

In 1971, Mandel was selected by the nation's Democratic governors to be chairman of the Democratic Governors' Conference. During the same period, he served as chairman of the Middle Atlantic States Governors' Conference, which he was instrumental in organizing. In 1972, Mandel was chosen by the nation's governors to be chairman of the bipartisan National Governors' Conference after having served on its seven-member Executive Committee. He also has served as chairman of the Southern Governors' Conference Committee of Transportation, Science and Technology and of its Energy Committee.

He was a member of the Policy Council of the Democratic National Committee and was one of five governors selected to act as liaison among the Democratic Governors' Conference, the leadership of Congress and the Democratic National Committee.

In addition, Mandel was selected by his fellow governors to serve on the three-member National Governors' Conference Permanent Subcommittee on Revenue Sharing. He also was the only Democrat among the three governors chosen to represent the National Governors' Conference on the New Coalition of Governors, Mayors and County Executives. He is a former chairman of the Council of State Governments. Mandel also served as a member of the Executive Committee of the Democratic Governors' Conference.

Eight colleges and universities in and outside of Maryland have awarded Mandel honorary doctorate degrees for his leadership, and he was twice recipient of the coveted Herbert Lehman Ethics Award. Three times Mandel was among a half-dozen governors chosen by the National Governors' Conference and the U.S. State Department to represent the United States on official visits to Russia and the People's Republic of China.

He began a systematic reorganization of the executive branch of state government, which during his first two years in office consolidated 248 agencies and departments into 12 cabinet departments headed by secretaries.

Mandel's first official act as governor was to restore to the Medicaid rolls 22,000 medically indigent citizens who had been removed by his predecessor. He began a systematic reorganization of the executive branch of state government, which during his first two years in office consolidated 248 agencies and departments into 12 cabinet departments headed by secretaries. Foremost among them was the Department of Transportation, which committed Maryland to the concept of a unified transportation system by funding rapid-transit systems in the Maryland suburbs around Washington and in Baltimore. Through Maryland's single transportation fund, the only one of its kind in the nation, the state also acquired Friendship Airport and immediately began to modernize and expand the facility. Renamed the Baltimore-Washington International Airport, the airport completed the most modern cargo terminal on the East Coast.

Among the major laws the governor sponsored and saw enacted were: the strictest handgun control law in the nation; a unique insurance law that combines a limited "no fault" feature with the nation's only state insurance company; a model power plant siting law, which the National Governors' Conference has adopted as its own suggested legislation; a state drug abuse authority and a model narcotics law; a state housing agency to encourage the development of low-income housing; and a land-use law to protect Maryland's critical areas and provide for orderly development and growth across the state, and a model for modern land-use laws.

Maryland's environmental laws, among the strictest in the nation, were conceived by Mandel to protect now and for the future the quality of the state's land, air and water and the abundance of marine life that flourishes in Maryland's wetlands.

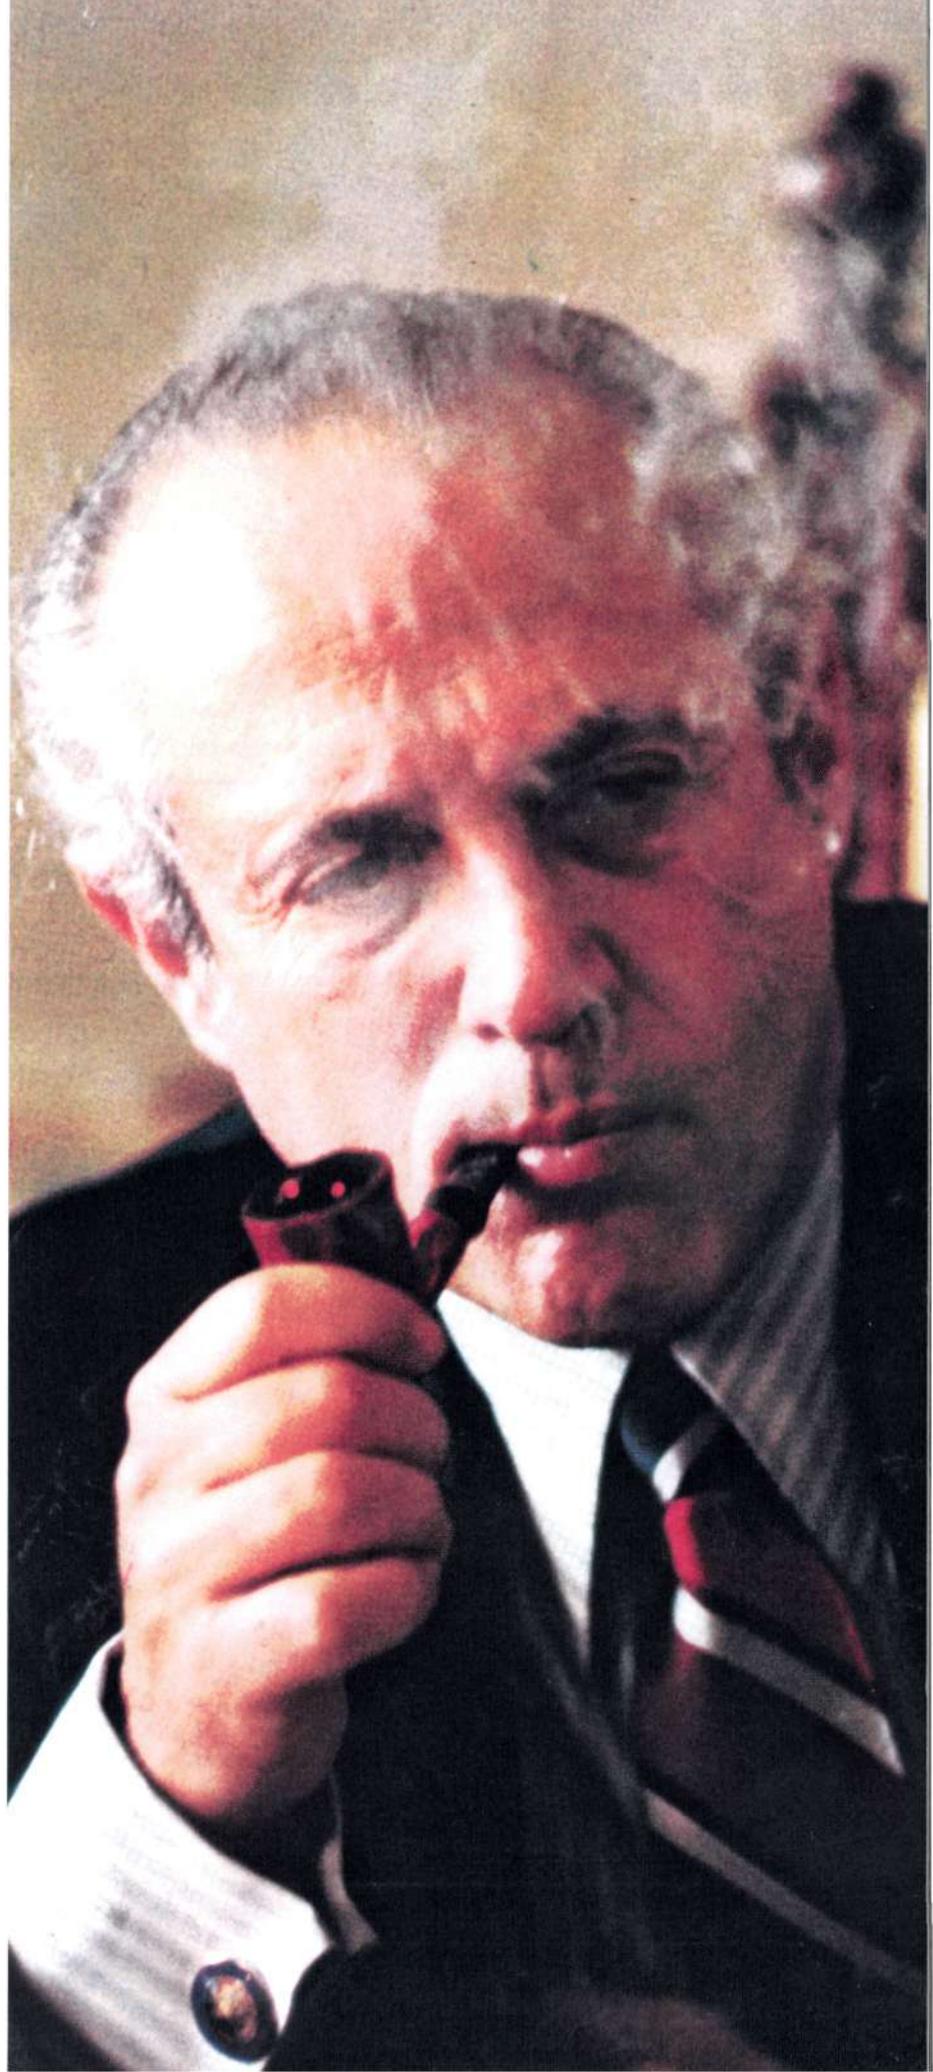

Another achievement of the Mandel administration were the reorganization and consolidation of Maryland's courts, the strengthening of the state's criminal justice system and the establishment of a procedure of selecting judges from among persons nominated by panels of lawyers and laymen. He also established a coordinated system of criminal justice information.

Mandel also acted to solve the problem of soaring medical malpractice insurance rates by creating a system of arbitrating claims over certain amounts. Arbitration panels comprise laymen, lawyers and representatives of the medical and health professions.

Unique in the continental United States is the Public School Construction Program, which Mandel conceived and sponsored to relieve the 23 counties and Baltimore of the financial burden of building schools. Under the program, the state assumed full financial obligation for the construction and major renovation of all public schools in Maryland, and full financial responsibility for outstanding bonded indebtedness for schools the counties built prior to inception of the program. Since the program began in 1971, the state has obligated more than $1 billion for school construction, which relieved taxpayers of the costly burden of increased taxes to support the need for schools. The program has led to the reduction of local property taxes in many subdivisions and stabilization of taxes in others.

Under Mandel, Maryland also became the first state to provide operating funds for private colleges and universities. And the governor greatly increased the amount of state aid for education to the subdivisions.

Acting on the recommendations of a study commission that he appointed, Mandel sponsored and saw enacted a broad program reorganizing and restructuring the entire system of education in Maryland. He replaced the Council on Higher Education with a stronger coordinating body and signed laws granting university status to two state colleges. The governor also devised an equitable formula for funding special education programs throughout Maryland.

During Mandel's years in office, the state expanded its network of day care centers and the number of children receiving free school lunches. The governor created by executive order a division to deal with the special problems of the elderly and set aside a portion of state lottery proceeds for programs for the aging. While welfare grants have been increased, there has been a steady decline in caseloads because of safeguards taken at Mandel's direction to weed out abuses and ineligible.

By steadily and progressively expanding aid and services in virtually every area of state government while prudently managing Maryland's fiscal resources, Mandel achieved a record of financial stability. Maryland has consistently maintained the highest bond rating of any state in the nation.

Marvin Mandel was born on April 19, 1920, in Baltimore. He attended Pimlico Elementary School and Garrison Junior High School, and graduated from City College in 1937. He attended the University of Maryland and the university's law school, receiving his LL.B. in 1942.

He enlisted in the army in 1942 and served as an instructor at Aberdeen Proving Ground and at Texarkana, Texas, until he was honorably discharged in 1944.

Today, Mandel continues to practice law on a daily basis at his Annapolis law firm, Marvin Mandel, P.C. He is a member of the Anne Arundel Bar Association, National Governors Association, National Institute of Former Governors and the Speaker's Society, and is on the board of directors for First Mariner Bank and the Maryland Public Policy Institute. He is also the co-chair of Maryland Business for Responsive Government. In 2003, he was appointed by the governor of Maryland to serve on the Board of Regents of the University System of Maryland and has served on various system committees, including as chair of the Campus Safety and Security Workgroup. Also in 2003, Gov. Robert Ehrlich appointed Mandel as chair of the Commission on the Structure and Efficiency of State Government.

Mandel is the former president of the University of Maryland Terrapin

Club and continues to remain active at the university as a member of the Terrapin Club and M Club. He is a loyal fan of its athletic teams, especially as a long-term season ticket holder for basketball and football. He is also an avid fan and supporter of the Baltimore Orioles and Baltimore Ravens.

He was married to Barbara Oberfeld Mandel and the late Jeanne Blackistone Dorsey Mandel. Mandel's late parents, the former Rebecca Cohen and Harry Mandel, were natives of Baltimore. Mandel has three children, Gary Steven Mandel, Ellen Mandel Maltz and Paul Bryant Dorsey.

A MESSAGE FROM GOVERNOR MARTIN O'MALLEY

Dear Friends:

It is my pleasure to join in the celebration of Governor Marvin Mandel's 90th birthday.

Mahatma Ghandi once said, "The best way to find yourself is to lose yourself in the service of others." As a humble public servant, Governor Mandel has demonstrated tireless devotion to the people of our Great State.

From his years in the Maryland House of Delegates to his service today, Governor Mandel has created a legacy driven by innovation and accomplishment. Under Governor Mandel's leadership, Marylanders witnessed the dawning of a new era with the creation of a mass transit system in Maryland, while his commitment to public school construction gave Maryland's children the tools they needed to help build a better future.

To Governor Mandel: It is my hope that those who are fortunate enough to be touched by your life, and share with you this happy occasion, will both reflect and celebrate all that you have given to enrich their lives. Congratulations on this tremendous milestone and we thank you for your continued dedication to our One Maryland.

Sincerely,

A MESSAGE FROM LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR ANTHONY G. BROWN

May 2010

Dear Governor Mandel:

It is my pleasure to wish you a very happy 90th birthday.

As you celebrate today with friends, family, supporters and community and state leaders, we honor your decades of hard work on behalf of Baltimoreans and Marylanders. Thank you for your public service and contributions during your time in the State House as a member of the House of Delegates and as the 56th governor of our great State.

Your dedication to improving transportation and your loyalty to enhancing education are among the many efforts which you helped foster to success. Your leadership laid the groundwork for the progress we continue to experience today, forty years later.

Thus, on behalf of all Marylanders, I send my best wishes for a wonderful birthday celebration.

Sincerely,

Anthony G. Brown

Dear Governor Mandel:

Heartiest congratulations on your 90th birthday! Your life has been very important to the citizens of Maryland.

Your service as Speaker of the House and as Governor had one overriding component: accomplishment. You sought passage of meaningful legislation as both the Speaker and Governor. You viewed public service as an opportunity not to talk about what was possible but to do what was practical. You sought results and achieved them--few governors before or after you could match your record of success. Your reorganization of State government stands as a monument to your ability to find a solution considered unattainable by others.

Unfortunately I cannot join you tonight. Please know, however, that you always have impressed me and so many others as a public servant dedicated to an ideal that action trumps talk, and taxpayers expect results and responsiveness. Inaction is inexcusable.

Happy Birthday, Marvin!

Sincerely,

Dear Governor Mandel:

On behalf of the Maryland House of Delegates, Happy 90th Birthday! The progress that the State and the country have made during your lifetime is incredible to consider. Over the past 90 years, the U.S. has not only increased its presence as a global leader but also become the model for many other countries to expand democracy. Within our borders, you have seen the expansion of civil rights, the creation of the Social Security and Medicare programs to support the elderly.

Maryland too has changed since your time in the State House. (Although we still feel your presence in the House chamber each day of the legislative session, as we deliberate under the watchful eye of your portrait.) Here are a few things to consider:

- When you were Speaker, a man had not yet walked on the moon.
- When you were Speaker, our current president may not have been served at lunch counters across the South.
- When you were Speaker in 1963, there were not any African-Americans or women in the legislature. Today, one-third of the legislature is female and a quarter is minority.
- When you were Speaker, there was not a public school construction program to speak of. Thanks to your vision as Governor that the State should support public schools, today, we have a record $1.25 billion investment into school buildings across the State.
- When you were Speaker, Maryland's Governor did not have a formalized cabinet structure, which soon changed, under your leadership.

As we come together to celebrate your 90th birthday, we reflect on your dedication and public service to the State of Maryland. You have seen the evolution of a State and a nation and have made a positive difference.

Best wishes on this special day.

Sincerely,

Dear Governor Mandel:

Congratulations on being ninety years young. And if there is anyone who is ninety years young, it is you! You are as fit and as energetic as you have ever been and continue to contribute in so many ways to the State you love so well.

I am sorry that I cannot be there to share this warm and wonderful event with you and all your friends of longstanding. I am sure the evening will be filled with stories of iconic events and unforgettable people. You were there and knew them all.

Marvin, you were central to many important events in the history of Baltimore and Maryland. I remain grateful for the many initiatives you created that are still bearing fruit forty years later. There is Thurgood Marshall-BWI Airport, the State Department of Transportation including the Baltimore Metro and the State Public School Construction Program on the infrastructure side. Then there is the Office on Aging, the Hospital Cost Care Review Commission and the State Public Defender System on the human services side. Your legacy of accomplishments is inspiring.

So a very Happy Birthday and many happy returns of the day!

Dear Governor Mandel;

I hope this note finds you well on the very special occasion of your 90th birthday. I regret that Kim and I are not able to join you and all of your friends for this momentous event. The dedication and devotion that you have shown to the citizens of Maryland is second to none.

Your steadfast career in public service is well known to all. After beginning as a Justice of the Peace in Baltimore City in 1950, you were elected to the Maryland House of Delegates in 1952, where you served until 1969. During your time in the House, you quickly ascended the ranks into leadership, first as Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, followed by Speaker of the House for 6 years, and culminating in your election as Governor of the Great State of Maryland, where you guided our ship of state for 10 years.

Today, I join with your family, friends, colleagues, and loved ones to congratulate you on this wonderful occasion in your life. I am sure I speak for everyone when I say, we wish you the very best for many more years to come.

Dear Governor Mandel:

Please accept my sincere congratulations on the celebration of your 90th birthday. Being fortunate enough to reach this momentous milestone is a testament to the life you have led. Your 25 years in public service – first in the Maryland General Assembly, then, as Governor – demonstrates your commitment to the people of this great state.

I recently read a quote that was attributed to you that said, “Don’t spend your life looking through a rearview mirror.” I believe that you have lived your full life true to this motto, always moving from one challenge to the next. These are truly words to live by and I hope that you can continue to do so for years ahead in good health and good company.

I thank you for your service and I wish the best for you as you celebrate this joyous occasion.

Dear Governor Mandel:

It is my pleasure to send my personal greetings to you as we honor your many years of service to the State of Maryland and celebrate your 90th birthday.

I am delighted to join your friends and family in commemorating your outstanding accomplishments on behalf of the State of Maryland. Whether fighting for our country in World War II, representing the City of Baltimore as a Delegate in the Maryland General Assembly, or serving Maryland as its 56th Governor, your efforts made a difference in the lives of many. Under your leadership, significant reforms were made to improve local government efficiency, enhance public transportation, and launch a major school construction initiative. I am so pleased that on this occasion we can recognize your lifetime of achievements.

Congratulations and best wishes on this wonderful occasion.

A MESSAGE ...
FROM THE COUNTY EXECUTIVE

On behalf of the people of Baltimore County, it is my pleasure to join in the celebration of Governor Marvin Mandel's 90th birthday.

Since he was first elected to Maryland's House of Delegates in 1952, Governor Mandel dedicated his life to serving the people of Maryland. As a Delegate, Speaker, and the 56th Governor of the State of Maryland, Marvin Mandel always put people first, and his vision of an effective and efficient government still resonates today.

Governor Mandel's vision and legacy continues to inspire our elected leaders. Forty years ago, he understood that a thriving metropolis must have a viable mass transit system. He reorganized the executive branch of State government to improve the delivery of services. And recognizing the importance of public education, he significantly increased funding for school renovation and construction. Governor Marvin Mandel could not only see the future, he planned for it!

It is indeed an honor to join people from all across the State this evening to celebrate Governor Marvin Mandel's distinguished life. I am delighted to offer best wishes to the Governor on reaching this momentous milestone and offer my personal thanks for his friendship and his ongoing dedication to the people of Maryland.
