

POPPLETON'S PLAN

OF THE

City & Environs of Baltimore.

The subscribers to the above work are respectfully informed, the survey is more than $\frac{3}{4}$ made and map'd; that the expence already incurred very far exceeds the amount upon the subscription lists; and that it appears upon consulting the principal artists in New York & Philadelphia, the expence still further necessary to complete the plan is too formidable to enter upon without a reasonable prospect of remuneration. The Survey is therefore suspended, until the citizens of Baltimore by their support shall again set it on foot.

T. H. P. proposes to have the survey complete the ensuing spring, if warranted by a sufficient patronage; in the interval he reminds a great number of gentlemen of their promise, and respectfully invites them to place their names on the list of subscribers, and also those gentlemen who mean ultimately to subscribe.

A gentleman will wait upon the citizens at their respective residences to receive signatures and the amount so obtained will be considered the sum total of patronage, and will decide the fate of the work, which cannot be got ready for delivery at less than 5000 dollars. The public's obedient servant.

T. H. POPPLETON,

City Surveyor, New York.
