

P.G. Circuit Court judge leaves. Prince George's Circuit Court Judge James H. Taylor announced Tuesday that he will leave the bench on October 31 to head up a special effort to expand the role of minority businesses in the private sector. Some of his responsibilities will be to identify existing minority businesses participating in private and public contracting in the county; and to determine the most prevalent problems relating to expansion, profitability and increased minority participation and make appropriate recommendations to the county on these matters.
