

Grady, Goodman Set Parley On Transfer Of Mayoral Duties

Mayor Grady and his successor, Philip H. Goodman, City Council president, planned to meet today at City Hall to arrange an orderly transition when the Mayor becomes a judge of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore next month.

Mr. Goodman acknowledged that there "are many things I would like to do differently" in running the city government, but said he did not know whether he would make any major changes during Mr. Grady's Evening Sun Nov 1, 1964 term, ending in May, which he will fill out.

Mr. Goodman also declined to announce now that he will be a candidate for a full term in the mayor's office next spring.

Appointed By Tawes

The Mayor's appointment as an associate judge was announced last night by Governor Tawes.

Mr. Grady will fill the position of Judge Michael J. Manley, who will move up to the chief judgeship vacated by Judge Emory H. Niles when he reached the age of compulsory retirement last month.

The timing of the moves has not been fixed. Mr. Grady said it will take "a reasonable time" to conclude his business at City Hall before ascending the bench.

And Judge Nov 1, 1964 Grady cannot become chief judge until he formally begins the new term to which he was elected last week. That must await the official State certification of the vote.

May Take Oath In Dec.

Indications are that Mayor Grady will be able to take the oath as a judge early in December. He will stand for election to a full fifteen-year term in November, 1964.

Mayor Grady's leaving City Hall clears the way for a wide-open contest for the Democratic nomination for mayor in the primary elections March 5.

Mr. Goodman is almost certain to be one of the contenders.

Others mentioned as possible candidates for mayor next year are Francis B. Burch, city solicitor; Hyman A. Pressman, lawyer and civic gadfly; Councilman Solomon Liss, and James J. Lacy, Jr., president of the Fire Board.

They have until the filing deadline of December 26 to make up their minds, and several days after that to change their minds and withdraw.

Goodman's Successor

Mr. Goodman's successor as president of the City Council and the Board of Estimates until May will be chosen by the Council from outside its own ranks.

Mentioned for that post is Thomas D'Alesandro 3d, president of the Board of Election Supervisors, and son of former Mayor D'Alesandro who preceded Mayor Grady.

Mr. Grady became Mayor in 1959 when his "Three G's" reform ticket was swept into office with Mr. Goodman as Council president and Dr. R. Walter Graham, Jr., as comptroller.

Not long after the election, the "Three G's" began going their separate ways, and harmony evaporated at City Hall.

Cites Accomplishments

In a statement accepting the judicial appointment, Mayor Grady called attention to accomplishments of his administration, and said:

"In short, the Administration has, at this point carried to successful completion as much of its program as it appears humanly possible to achieve in a single term.

Under these circumstances, and with the 1963 city budget having been prepared and submitted to the City Council, I feel that I can now relinquish my responsibilities as Mayor with the knowledge that I have carried out the mandate which my fellow citizens gave me nearly four years ago."

Ex-State's Attorney

Mr. Grady, 45, is a magna cum laude graduate of Loyola College, and received his law degree at the University of Maryland.

He was an FBI agent during World War II, was appointed assistant State's attorney in 1947, and became State's attorney in 1958 when Anselm Sodaro resigned to become a judge. He was elected to a four-year term as prosecutor, and was elected Mayor the next year.

Mr. Goodman, 47, a former State senator from the Fifth district of Baltimore, has been president of the City Council since 1959.

Born in Poland, Nov 1, 1964 spent his early years in Hamburg, Germany, before his family moved to Baltimore when he was 6.

City College Grad

He is a graduate of City College and the University of Baltimore.

where he earned his law degree in 1934.

He became a police court magistrate more than twenty years ago, and was elected to the City Council in 1951. He and Irvin Kovens have an influential political organization in the Fifth district.

Mr. Goodman is married and has one son. He lives in the Wynnewood Tower apartments on West Cold Spring lane.
