

From the Federal Republican.

The family and friends of the late General LINGAN, being anxious that his remains should be conveyed from the scene of his murder, to the sepulchres of his fathers, this melancholy office was confided to the care of two of his fellow sufferers residing in Baltimore, Messrs. Henry Nelson and John E. Hall. On Tuesday the 23d instant, these gentlemen conveyed the body in a hearse to a place appointed in the vicinity of Georgetown. Here they were met by a few select friends of the deceased. The procession then moved to Haerlem, where the body was deposited in the earth, and the usual solemnities were pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Addison. Removed from the scene of murder, the friends of good government and political freedom may, and do rejoice, that the remains of this monument of jacobin intolerance and perfidy have been redeemed, and rest in tranquillity with kindred spirits.
