

From the Federal Republican.

The funeral honours to the memory of the lamented LINGAN, were celebrated yesterday with the most awful solemnity and perfect order. A numerous concourse of citizens from the different counties of Maryland, and the neighbouring cities, convened to pay their last tribute to the brave and virtuous Hero.—We have not room in our paper of this day to describe the effect produced by the presence of the VETERAN BAND OF THE REVOLUTION, who flocked from all quarters, to assist at the obsequies of their departed brother in arms; nor to speak with proper emphasis of the manly firmness of the military, who notwithstanding the request (backed by threats to issue an order were the request disregarded) of the PRESIDENT, that they would NOT APPEAR ON THIS OCCASION, paraded with promptitude, and imparted the most imposing grandeur to the scene. The throng of mourners was so great, that Mr. ADDISON'S church, which had been originally selected for the ceremonies, was relinquished in consequence of its not being large enough to contain them. A shady eminence in the suburbs of the town was substituted in its place. The Marquee of WASHINGTON, was spread among the trees. The exercises commenced by a prayer from the Rev. Mr. ADDISON; the oration by GEORGE WASHINGTON PARK CUSTIS, Esq. followed; and the whole closed with a prayer from the Rev. Mr. BALGH.

The profound silence of the audience, which in number could not have fallen short of fifteen hundred, was only interrupted by their sighs and tears. To the eloquence of Mr. CUSTIS, description wants power to do justice. The cause and the orator shed lustre on each other. If the praise of convulsing those who listened to him with grief, and swelling every bosom with honest indignation at the wrongs of LINGAN, can gratify him, he may truly say, "I have indeed been gratified." Over the hearts of his hearers, he exercised despotic power. The address was extemporaneous; but we are promised a sketch of it, which shall be published in our next.

A new ship, belonging to WASHINGTON BOWIE, Esq. one of the most wealthy and enterprising Merchants in George-town, yesterday received its name—THE GENERAL LINGAN. It was decorated with colours, hung half mast high; and minute guns were fired from cannons on board of it, while the procession moved.

The music played a dead march, while the procession was moving to the ground, and on its return the march of WASHINGTON. Some of the shops were hung in black. The citizens of George-town have gained themselves much credit by their orderly and sympathizing conduct on this memorable day.

The following is the order of procession. The more important particulars will be detailed on Friday.

the court of Russia promised to adopt out reserve, the plan wisely combining securing the continent from the influence of England, and for bringing back the to principles more conformable to the of nations.

"Russia was not slow in departing this salutary system.

"The change, on her part, being announced by certain facts, and the negotiation being ineffectually employing the course of the year 1811, the Emperor was bound to resort to measure the dignity of the crown, the interest of the people, and the dangers of his allies.

"The treaties which are about to be before you, form a step towards the consummation of this design."

His highness then delivered the discourse referred to in his speech.

By the treaty with Austria the last furnished 30,000 men to France. The integrity of the Turkish territories in Europe guaranteed, and the principles of the of Utrecht are recognised.

When an express left the French formation was received there, that had reached the capital, of France a peace having commenced hostilities.
