

Mr. Samuel S. Barnes, who was so seriously hurt by the negro Ned Watson, has so recovered as to be able to return to his home near King's Creek. He left the hospital at Salisbury on Wednesday last and is now at home with his family. To be sure he is not a well man but is able to walk around a little. We came down on the same train with him and from his appearance the wonder is that he is alive. It will doubtless be some time before he regains his accustomed strength.
