

The Condemned Men in Fort McHenry.—The announcement concerning the four men under sentence of death in Fort McHenry, made on Saturday morning, appears to have been premature. It is known that orders were received here last evening by Major General Wallace in reference to the matter, but their exact official character has not been made public. It may be said, however, that the execution, from all that can be ascertained, will not take place to-day. It is also pretty well understood that none of the prisoners have been unconditionally pardoned, whilst the probability is their sentence has been commuted, but to what other punishment is not yet known outside of official sources.

Serious Accident.—About half past ten o'clock on Saturday morning last, an old lady named Elizabeth Starr was knocked down and run over by a one horse carriage, at the intersection of Biddle street and Pennsylvania avenue. The carriage was driven by Dr. Thomas, who at once jumped out and rendered Mrs. Starr (who is over 70 years of age,) all the aid in his power; with the assistance of policemen he carried the injured lady into the drug store of Mr. Carpan, and there rendered her professional aid. It was found that her ankle, shoulder and head were much bruised and cut, but that she was not fatally injured. She was carried to her residence on Pennsylvania avenue, where Dr. Thomas attends her. The affair was regarded as purely accidental.
