William Dawkins Broom, Eſquire, is elected a delegate to repreſent Calvert county in the enſuing general aſſembly, and not William Dawkins Brown, as mentioned in our paper of the 16th inſtant.

"Died, at his ſeat, in Charles county, on the 24th of October, in the fiftieth year of his age, Mr. WAR-REN DENT, a rare example of human perfection.
He approached to manhood with the faireſt proſpects, for he received from nature a good genius and a good conſtitution, and from his parents a liberal education and an affluent fortune; but a dire diſeaſe in early youth, deprived him, in great meaſure, of the uſe of his limbs, and his country of his talents—yet it could not overcome his fortitude nor weaken his other virtues, for though often doomed to ſuffer extreme pain, in the courſe of more than twenty years, he bore its ſevereſt ſtrokes without a murmer, and almoſt without a groan—Notwithſtanding all his ſufferings, he never ceaſed to diſplay the virtues of a perfectly benevolent, humane and charitable mind; and he died as he had lived, with entire reſignation. Reader, this narrative is guiltleſs of flattery; all who knew him will confirm the truth it conveys—let us revere his memory, and endeavour to imitate his virtues."
