

G. M. BRADY, LAWYER, DIES

Attorney Had Been Member Of The Bar Since 1903

George Moore Brady, prominent Baltimore attorney and member of the bar since 1903, died at noon yesterday in the Union Memorial Hospital after three weeks of illness.

Mr. Brady was senior partner in the firm of Brady, Jones & Hedrick and began his law practice here in 1904 with the late William Milnes Maloy, former State Senator who sought the Democratic nomination for governor in 1926.

He graduated from the Loyola College in 1900, later receiving a law and philosophy degree from Georgetown University. He was also a graduate student of the Catholic University and held the degrees of master of laws and doctor of jurisprudence.

Aided Hospital

Although he twice filed for the Supreme Bench in 1934 and again in 1938, Mr. Brady never held public office. In later years his civic interest was concentrated on the Children's Hospital, which he served as counsel and board member, and the Children's Rehabilitation Institute.

During World War I Mr. Brady served the War Shipping Board in the Baltimore and Norfolk areas and after his return to practice the original Maloy & Brady firm was joined by John S. L. Yost, present general counsel for the Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Company, and by Roger Howell, at present dean of the University of Maryland Law School.

Survivors Listed

Survivors include his second wife, the former Mrs. Archibald F. Comiskey, of 100 West University parkway, and five children by his first wife, the late Mrs. Ellen Atkinson Brady who died in 1943.

They are Mrs. G. Bernard Fenwick, Jr., George Moore Brady, Jr., James H. T. Brady, Mrs. Richard K. Marshall and John Atkinson Brady, all of Baltimore.

Also surviving are a brother, Dr. Leo Brady, of Baltimore, and two sisters, Mrs. William N. Norris, of Norristown, Pa., and Miss Katherine T. Brady, of Baltimore.

Two stepdaughters and a stepson survive Mr. Brady. They are Mrs. John S. Conroy, Miss Margaret Haile Comiskey and Francis W. Comiskey.

Funeral services will be held at 10 A.M. tomorrow at St. Ignatius Catholic Church, Calvert and Madison streets, and burial will be in the New Cathedral Cemetery.

Associates and friends serving as honorary pallbearers will be G. Bernard Fenwick, Jr., Dr. Richard T. Shackelford, Richard K. Marshall, John F. Conroy and Thomas H. Hedrick.

Also, John T. Love, Dr. George E. Bennett, Dr. Leslie N. Gay, Gen. Thomas B. Catron, Howard R. Taylor and Laurie H. Riggs.