THE SENTINEL.

SHOCKING RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Collision on Philadelphia Road.

A few minutes before 2 o'clock on Friday last, as the train near Wilmington, running at the rate of fully thirty miles per hour, there was heard a sudden signal of down breaks, and in a few moments all in the cars felt a violent concussion, which was followed by a loud crash and terrible outcries for help. All the male passengers on the New York train immediately hurried to the front of their train, where they encountered a terrible scene.

It was found that an accident to the locomotive of the train which had left Philadelphia at 11:30 P. M., had detained that train upon the track at a point just two miles north of Wilmington and that whilst standing upon the track the New York express had run into the rear of this train, crushing the end of the last car and driving or telescoping it into the forward car, killing two passengers and wounding fifteen others, one of whom died immediately after being removed from the wreck. The passengers of both trains who had escaped injury at once set to work, aiding the officers and employees of the Railroad Company to remove the bodies of the killed from the wreck and carrying the wounded to the forward cars that had escaped injury, where they were made comfortable as it was possible under the circumstances, until they could be conveyed to Wilmington, Delaware, for medical and surgical aid.

The smoke stack and upper works of the locomotive of the New York train were knocked off and the engine otherwise badly shattered in its collision. With the rear of the Philadelphia train, the force of the collision having driven it with fearful crushing force into the rear car, breaking up the latter badly for a distance of ten feet or more. The forward platform of the last car was immediately forced under the platform of preceding car, which was at once split quite open, and then took place that fearful telescoping process, the horrors of which none can adequately realize until they have once beheld such an appalling scene and heard for themselves the terrific crash of timbers mingled with agonizing screams of unfortunate victims. When the force of the collision had spent itself, the Philadelphia train had been carried some distance from the point where the first contact took place and such was the rebound that the New York cars were separated from their locomotive and driven backward some hundred feet or more. The last two cars of the wrecked train were found to have been driven almost through one another so that the seats of both cars, together with the occupants, were forced violently into a mingled mass, and it was a very difficult matter to extricate the wounded without further adding to their sufferings. Several were so closely jammed in between the timbers and broken seats that it was only after great labor that they could be released. In some cases, especially the females, the wounded could only be gotten out by leaving behind them the greatest portion of their clothing. Mrs. Fritz, of Wilmington, who had her foot badly mashed, could only be extricated by parting with nearly all her clothing. The groans and screams of the badly wounded and their imploring appeals for succor were most painful to hear, and will linger in the memory of those who so earnestly worked for their relief, or stood horrified spectators of the fearful scene. A young colored man one account says, he was not more than nineteen years of age, was caught beneath the flooring of the two cars, and in addition to other fearful injuries had one leg so completely crushed and wedged between the timbers, that to extricating his mangled body it was necessary to cut off his limb which was left behind, a ghastly fragment among the timbers. The poor fellow soon bled to death, and survived his extrication from the wreck but a few hours. An elderly white man, whose name could not at the time be ascertained, was also removed from the wreck quite dead; also another white man, apparently about forty years of age, who was understood to belong to Wilmington, Del. Several ladies were also among those seriously wounded.

The cause of the disaster from accounts given by various passengers on the wrecked train, it appears, was, the Philadelphia train was an hour behind time when it reached Chester, only thirteen miles from Philadelphia, and when the train was within two miles of Wilmington, the engine gave out. It is also said that the train had come to a stand only a few minutes before the New York express came thundering down upon them.

Snow Storm in Minnesota.

PERILS OF THE NORTHWEST.—A special from St. Paul, Chicago 24th inst., says gloomy news may be anticipated from Minnesota. As the tracklayers on the extension of the Winona and St. Peter railroad were approaching the western State line at the rate of two miles daily, a terrible storm last Thursday night enveloped them and cut them off from communication with civilization. The working force numbers over eight hundred men.

When the intelligence of the storm reached Winona, J. H. Stewart, general superintendent, started out with two locomotives and a train of cars, but so heavy and deep were the snow drifts, and so intense the cold that up to Saturday morning they had not passed New Ulm. On Sunday the train had penetrated twenty-five miles. In the meantime the storm raged with violence unprecedented, and when last heard from, on Tuesday night, the relief train was stuck fast in the ever-accumulating snow, forty miles west of Sleeping Eye, and eighty miles short of the suffering trackmen.

For six days the storm has continued with unabated fury. The painful impression is created that the men at the end of the track will starve before relief reaches them. No supplies are known to be accessible, for the line is being contracted in advance of the government survey far into the country uninhabited save by a few squatters and sickly Indians.

WHY THE NEGROES VOTED AGAINST GREELEY.—A Virginian writing from Hanover Court House to Mr. Greeley concerning his colored neighbors, says:

"They have preachers of their own, who proclaimed to them from their pulpits that you had promised, if elected, to put all the negroes into slavery, that you would pay slave holders $600 for each slave freed, that you would bind all negro children for 23 years to their former masters, &c., and then resolving to exclude from the church every one who voted for Grant. These things carried the negroes in solid column against you."

At a Chinese funeral in San Francisco, the other day, the body was placed in a coffin which was set upon chairs on the sidewalk. At the foot of the coffin was a table, upon which was piled a quantity of uncooked vegetables, fowls and meat. Beside this table stood the priest, dressed in a black robe, with a hat upon his head shaped like that of a cardinal's. He was repeating the burial service in a kind of chant; varying the music by alternately clashing cymbals together and ringing a small dinner bell. On the sidewalk knelt three women, with white sacks over their heads, who were hired mourners of the occasion. None of the others seemed to mourn at all, and the men and women present were laughing and talking and the children playing on all sides.

ANOTHER JOB FOR THE HATER.—A chap named (Sergeant) Heins is now engaged in doing the foolish thing of carrying the American flag through England. He made a bet that he could, and so far he has not been molested. When he gets through that, the New York Times has another job for him, and that is, to carry the Stars and Bars all through the Sixth Ward of New York city, which has 20,000 Irish people in it. If he ever undertakes it that his poor old father will wear crape on his hat in a very short time after his son starts.

The Chicago Times asks, "How can we escape first?" The New York Commercial answers, "The Gospel offers you every encouragement."
