CASTORS, Hats, Cotton, Shawls and Plaids, made chiefly for and sold by the subscriber at No 13, Calvert-street.

He has a foreman experienced in new undertakings, and often predicted to manufacture every article in America; they think it proper to observe that nothing material is wanted in business to make good artists to perform the work here, as well as in Europe. That they have these advantages—that two of the partners were educated to the business, and fully of the best figure, chiefly by their father, and long after in partnership themselves. They trust that while foreign goods are received without a question, an encouraging public will not prevent their country men from giving an equal trial to such as are raising among them—hence a natural wish that the same may, that certain interests, not only as well as individual may engage their attention to their undertaking—It is necessary to say that work of the like kind, had before well received here, as by foreign hands received. The solid durable of being exactly well fitted as permanent, the cloths perhaps better suited, and the prices lower than of their predecessors.

The customary credit will be given on good notes or acceptances in the city.
