By extracts from the Moniteur given in the Dutch papers which we have received to the 5th inst. the expedition under gen. Craig is represented as having been compelled, in consequence of the united remonstrances of the French and Spanish ministers to the Portuguese government, to quit the Tagus within 48 hours. The prince Regent is stated to have ordered the batteries to be prepared, in case the peremptory order he issued should be resisted.

The fact is, that every possible indulgence was extended by the Portuguese government to the English force which took refuge in the Tagus, and that the prince Regent was reluctantly compelled to announce to the commander of the expedition, the hard necessity under which he was obliged to act.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1805.

The editor was engaged last evening, on business, at the Point, 'till after night—and this prevented him from (executing the painful task he seems destined to perform) hurling Brown into that state of insignificance and infamy, which his repeated atrocity, is fast preparing for him, in the minds of all who form the candid, honest and honorable part of the community. But, to-morrow, the editor will add such evidence, to that heretofore exhibited, as will, he firmly believes, prove Matthew Brown, a scoundrel of the most superlative stamp!

We have not time to enlarge on the subject of the BOND! But for Brown's comfort, we inform him, the BOND shall be fairly offered, on the editor's part, to the Orphan's Society.—And, before we have done with the subject, we will force Brown to meet the stamp, or prove him a faithful coward, and an abandoned faltiner!

We did not calculate, that the foreboding of Brown's countenance would smite him so severely, when we accidently stated, something about a halter of ignominy!—neither did we expect, that he would, in idea, run his head into it, and then kick against the wind, so hard as he did yesterday! We are sorry the little man's imagination is so vivid, as to cause its being wrought up to such a high pitch of anguish and horror! But for sanitary purposes, it is necessary to make the sinner's heart tremble within him!—and this we shall do to-morrow, with a force, searching as the power of electricity!

We will permit Matthew, to-day, to furnish his breakfast with his own choice of relish—to-morrow we will impose one on him! It will, no doubt, make him laugh as heartily as he did on Monday!

The United States frigate Adams, commanded by Captain Murray, has sailed from Alexandria.

We wish to know whether the certificates upon which the Fishermen were released, were known to the Government, or belonged only to the will of individuals? If they belonged to the system of commerce, the respect to them was an act of national respect. The friendly men, who sent on the papers, and the British Consul who approved them, never thought of an influence when they had beyond the whole nation. Every thing ought to be said honorable to the benevolent citizens, who made the exertions: and as the example was worthy of imitation, it is to be hoped that it will never be forgotten. They who have profited from it, will be sure to remember it. And they who approve it, will be sure, on all occasions, to have their full claims upon the public gratitude.

(Salem Register.)

We feel much pleasure in stating, that Mr. JESSE KERSEY, a respectable Minister of the gospel in the society of Friends who had been on a religious visit to the Friends in England and Ireland, arrived here, in good health, on Saturday evening in the ship Hercules, captain Bradford in forty days from Liverpool.

Mr. PITT.

In the British House of Commons, the 14th June, Mr. Whitebread made his motion of censure, for culpable neglect, (chiefly in not acting upon the information of Mr. Raikes) on the Chancellor of the Exchequer. After a speech of some length respecting the topics which are already amply before the public, he moved a string of Resolutions. Mr. Pitt ably defended himself; and the sense of the House, and even of the Opposition, was evidently with him. Mr. Fox acknowledged himself perfectly satisfied; but as the proceedings of the Minsters had been irregular, he proposed a Bill of Indemnity. This agreed to, and the resolutions cheerfully withdrawn

REMARKABLE INSCRIPTION ON A GRAVE STONE

At a burying place called Abade in the county of Donegal, in Ireland, there was lately dug up a piece of flat stone three feet by two, the device on which was a figure of death, with a bow and arrow, shooting at a woman with a boy in her arms, and underneath was an inscription in Irish characters, of which the following is a translation:

"Here are deposited, with the design of mingling them with the parent earth from which the mortal part came, a mother who loved her son to the destruction of his death. She clasped him to her bosom with all the joy of a parent, the pulse of whose heart beat with maternal affection—and in the very moment whilst the gladness of joy danced in the pupil of the boy's eyes, and the mother's bosom swelled with transport—death's arrow, in a flash of lightning, pierced them both in a vital part, and totally dissolving the entrails of the son, without injuring his skin, and burning to a cinder the liver of the mother, sent them out of this world at one and the same moment of time, in the year 1343."

Married on Sunday evening last, by the Revd. Mr. Harryman, WILLIAM SMITH, esq. to the amiable Miss BETSEY M'COMAS, daughter of Colonel Jas. M'Comas, of Harford county.

On Sunday evening, by the Revd. Dr. Rattoone, at Fell's Point, Mr. John M. White, to Miss Ann Davis, both of this city.
