The contest in dispute is far deeper than the outrages in the Chesapeake—Britain in her hypocrisy may possibly try Humphreys, as she has tried others—he may be told by the court martial that his sword has not been disgraced in his hands—and the British ministry may thus attempt to quibble under their naval policy with the rights of free nations and the blood of our citizens.

But as we have repeatedly said long ago, the present contest between France and Britain, can end only in the establishment of a maritime code of laws for the whole world, similar to that of the armed neutrality, and the late principles of blockade laid down by the French government.

Any thing short of those principles will always subject the commerce of our merchants to every insult and vexation, and especially, should any thing short of that principle be now conceded to Britain; for such a concession would be a full and perfect acknowledgement to France, that she was equally entitled to the same right of searching American ships coming from British ports, and sending them into Guadaloupe for adjudication.

What say the tories and the British papers to this principle?

Will they concede the right to both nations equally? Will they admit that France has the right to do what they allow Britain has the right to do? Will their presses not teem with more abuse of French cruizers, than they now do of British, for this privilege of sending in for condemnation on suspicion? Are the merchants of the United States ready to concede equality to one as to the other? If they are, and Britain makes an ample apology for the massacre of the crew of the Chesapeake—the murder of Pearce—restitution of plundered property—and releases our impressed seamen We then say, if our merchants are perfectly agreed, then in God's name, let them say that they are so willing, and that this universal power of search be fully acknowledged—and let the American people be not troubled with the complaints of our merchants if they are willing to surrender their rights and property too—let this class of citizens take the profit and the loss to themselves, and no longer reproach the national government if they should recognize what the complainants themselves justify.

No! Let every American citizen take and hold fast the firm ground which we is now in possession of, and support the administration in demanding full remuneration for all our wrongs; let us never abandon the right of the flag to protect all that lies beneath it. Let us borrow an apotegm upon which we can hand, and let us never abandon it.

Indemnity for the past, and security for the future!

Routed by the murders on board the Chesapeake, the federal papers came forward with all the professed zeal of real Americans, to resent those murders—it is with regret we have seen, since that time in some of them, a cool, f and tuberviency to every tory or tame brother feebler.

But we once more call to the serious consideration of our merchants, that if such principles are supported by them—then American vessels will be the prey of every nation in Europe—for every nation will be outside of great britain.—Look you to it, who are interested.

VIENNA, June 24.

The latest letters from Constantinople confirm the accounts of the deposition of Selim, but correctness of the details given in the first reports. Hitherto Mustapha has kept his promise of preserving the life of Selim. The Prince is still alive, residing in the Old Seraglio.

On Saturday last, an EEL of the following surprizing dimensions was caught by Captain Howland between the Bridges on Schuylkill, viz.

Length,	5 feet 2 inches
Girth,	15
Width,	12

And weighing twelve and an half pounds!

This forenoon the crew of the English brig having touched at the Battery, six of the sailors leapt ashore and made their way up into the town. N. Y. Post.

ON PEACE.

A strange expectation has been indulged by some persons, that the peace negociating upon the Continent, will not be confined to Russia, Prussia, and France, but will extend to this country. This expectation has been encouraged by the late administration, who, alluding to the circumstance of the funds not having experienced much depression, suppose them to have been prevented from falling by the idea "that subsidies will be saved, and that, as the war is without object, peace may be concluded, if not jointly with Russia, under her mediation." Does any man think that this is a period in which a joint negociation with Russia, or her mediation, can be productive of such a peace as we can accept with honor? Throughout the struggle the late ministers left her to herself; complaints upon complaints were made by her and Prussia, that we sent no troops to her assistance; after a contest, in which she has displayed the greatest disinterestedness and courage, she has been defeated and forced to sue for Peace. She cannot negotiate a peace that will be advantageous to herself, and yet we are to expect that she will negociate an honorable one for us! Bonaparte views his continental successes as so many stepping stones to the conquest or humiliation of this country, and yet we are to suppose, that after having gained those successes, he will allow the vanquished to stipulate such terms as will be honorable to us, and secure our independence!

His pretensions and his tone, which were so lofty before the victories of Jena and of Friedland, are expected after those victories to be moderate! and he who would not accede to such terms as we would accept, while Prussia was yet whole and untouched, is now, after he has annihilated her, to be willing to agree to conditions to which the British nation may consent, without any degradation of its character! But the "war is without an object" we are told—Bonaparte threatens that he will wrest from us ships, colonies, and commerce, and yet the war is without an object! He boasts that he will establish the freedom of the seas; that is, that he will humble our naval power, and yet the war is without an object! To tell the people that the shedding their blood and spending their treasures, that they are carrying on a war without any object, is to hold out language which is most calculated to check the spirit of unanimity, and to damp those vigorous and patriotic exertions which are so indispensably necessary—See too at what a time this disheartening language is held! The continent has just fallen beneath the blows of Bonaparte and lies at his feet, weltering in its blood. Are we in such a moment to take fright, to be struck with sudden dismay, and to shew the utmost anxiety to make peace, as if, after the conquest of the continent, we had no hope of being able to cope with him single handed? Are we to confess to him that our safety and honor are dependent, not upon our own valor, patriotism and resources, but upon the ability of the continent to resist him—that so long as Russia and Prussia could occupy his arms we were able to contend with him, but that now we dread the concentration of his force against us, and turn pale at the sight of his hordes encamped along our coast?

If such is to be our language and our conduct, if we think freedom and glory intolerable upon the terms of fighting for them, we must sink, punished and prostrate, before audacity and tyranny; lick the dust from the chariot wheels of the conqueror; yoke ourselves in the same chain with the dependent Princes that are to swell the triumphant procession that waits his return to Paris, burn the annals of our country, and forget our honors, our heroes, and our ancient fame! But let us not deceive ourselves with the expectation that peace is practicable under the present circumstances. Peace, honorable peace is not, in the present extravagance of Bonaparte's triumph and pretensions, to be made with him. War is to be chosen, not because it is preferable to the sweet enjoyments of peace, but because it is preferable to the scourge and curse of being his slaves. This is the language that should be heard; not disguising the difficulties of the crisis, but confident that if we are true to ourselves, we have ample means of meeting and overcoming them.

Another year!—another deadly blow!
Another mighty empire overthrown!
And we are left (or shall be left) alone;
The last that dares to struggle with the foe.
'Tis well! from this day forward we shall know,
That in ourselves our safety must be sought;
That by our own right hands it must be wrought,
That we must stand unpropp'd, or be laid low.

Died on Saturday night last, at his lodgings in the Indian Queen Hotel in this city, John Drayton, Esq. of the house of Stess, Thomas and J. Price, of Charleston, South Carolina, much deservedly lamented.

On Wednesday last departed this life, in the 46th year of her age, Mrs. LUCY MARSHALL consort of Mr. Jacob Manuser, a respectable merchant of this city.

To God she's gone, to him her spirit's fled,
Though her dear corpse lies mouldering in the mould
Death's keenest dart her living worth shall brave,
And strew sweet perfumes o'er her silent grave.

Yesterday evening, departed this life after a short but painful illness which she bore with the most Christian fortitude, Mrs. JANE CARSTAIRS, consort of Mr. Isaac Carsten, distinguished for the good qualities of her heart, and benevolent disposition no less than an attention to the duties of a wife, parent and friend. With affectionate relatives and friends sincerely devoted to her service, she has dropped into the grave, leaving a melancholy void in the hearts of those who knew her worth, and justly appreciated her virtues. Her friends are invited to attend her funeral at 5 o'clock this evening.

For Sale,

THAT well known, and long established Stand, as a Tavern, Stage House, and Post Office, where all the Public Stages stop, situate in Harford town, in Harford county, (commonly known by the name of Bush) on the Post Road, 25 miles from Baltimore and 12 from Havre de Grace. There cannot be a more eligible situation taking a regular stage North and South. It possesses peculiar advantages of most other country stands, having a merchant mill, a mercantile store of large capital, and weekly water conveyance, to and from Baltimore, all within 200 yards of the door; also a very desirable neighboring custom and society. There is an excellent Kitchen Garden, and three valuable Lots, in high order for Grass, or other produce; seperate large stables for travellers and stage Horses, Carriage and Cow Houses, with every other necessary building for the accommodation of travellers, and the family equal, if not superior, to any stand between Baltimore and New York. This property will be sold low for cash or good paper. I will sell with it, if wished, about four hundred dollars worth of Furniture, Beds, Tables, Chairs, &c. Also, a set of Horses and Stage, in the Pilot Line, which runs from the above place, to Havre de Grace. The whole will be sold together, or seperate as may suit purchasers. The Tavern House, and its appurtenances is now under rent at four hundred and fifty dollars per year; and the whole property in good repair. A great bargain will be given, on application to the subscriber, near the premises.
