When Christmas arrives in about a month's time, it will be the saddest since the middle ages, with the greatest war, with its immeasurable horrors, raging in all of Europe. Just to think of the millions of homes made desolate, the millions of weeping women and sorrowing children, who are facing their future destinies without a single bit of knowledge of what it will bring forth. Although we are not engaged in the conflict, we should allow our hearts to go out in sympathy for those innocent children, who have their whole lives before them, without a single arm of guardianship.
