FORT McHENRY NATIONAL MONUMENT AND HISTORIC SHRINE located in the city of Baltimore, commemorates the successful defense of Fort McHenry against a heavy British naval bombardment in the War of 1812 and the writing by Francis Scott Key of the "Star-Spangled Banner." Key, detained by the British on a small vessel anchored behind the enemy fleet, during the night watched the spectacle of the British throwing a continuous stream of shot, bombs, and rockets at Fort McHenry. When dawn broke he saw the American flag still flying, and was moved to write the verses of our national anthem. The fort is a fine example of late 18th century military architecture, with bastions forming a five-pointed star.

Fort McHenry is open to the public daily throughout the year, including

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL following the Potomac River from 321-666 the District of Columbia to Cumberland, Maryland, occupies a narrow right-of-way totalling 5,253 acres, and is administered as part of the National Capital Park System. This old waterway, one of the least altered of the older American canals, is an example of the ever-improving means of transportation that helped to bind the Nation together. Through the natural passageway to the West afforded by the Potomac River Valley have passed the Indian trail, colonial wagon road, canal, railroad, telegraph and telephone, and the modern superhighway. By these constantly improving modes of communication the once widely separated eastern and western regions of the fast-growing Union were firmly linked both socially and commercially. Twenty-two miles of the old canal, between Georgetown, D. C., and Seneca, Maryland, have been restored by the National Park Service. Specially conducted tours via an old-time muledrawn barge are available on the canal during the summer months. Canoeing, botting, hiking, fishing, picnicking, nature walks, and ice skating are among the recreational opportunities. Canoes and rowboats may be rented at Great Falls; and privately owned canoes are permitted on the canal. Address: The Superintendent, National Capital Parks, Interior Building, Washington 25, D. C.

HAMPTON NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE. One of the great Georgian-style mansions of America is historic Hampton, long the home of the distinguished Ridgely family of Maryland, situated north of Baltimore near I owson, Maryland. There are very few early houses in the United States built on such a magnificent scale. Erected in 1783-90, Hampton represents the height of opulence in the moment just between the end of the Revolution and the adoption of the Federal Constitution. Hampton is operated as a national historic site by the Society for the Preservation of Maryland Antiquities under a cooperative agreement with the National Park Service. It is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 11:00 to 5:30, Sundays 1:00 to 5:30. It is closed all day Monday.
