Agricultural News

Queen Annes county has again demonstrated the fact that she raises real corn, and corn in quantities too great to be exceeded by the other counties of the state. Queen Annes has this year won the corn championship of Maryland through its corn club boy, J. Earl Smith, of Rich Neck. It was confidently predicted in these columns some time ago that Queen Annes had a good chance of winning again this year, and now we find that the judges' verdict in awarding the decision of our county has confirmed the prediction. We say winning "again" because it is again, again after winning last year, again after winning year before last, and again after winning second place three years ago. Maybe in time we will be able to convert the other people of Maryland to a doctrine that we ourselves have already long known, namely—that Queen Annes is the banner county of the Eastern Shore, and therefore of Maryland, not alone in corn raising but in most other fields of agricultural endeavor as well. The Eastern Shore is fast demonstrating to the rest of Maryland that she is quite as formidable in agriculture as she is in politics, and Queen Annes county is rightfully taking a leading part in the Eastern Shore advance.

The club exhibits of the corn club boys of this county were very favorable. Talbot county led in this particular field, but Queen Annes was in the forefront. Some of the finest corn to be seen in the most excellent corn show that Maryland has ever had was that of the corn club boys. Prof. Nicholas Schmitz who unfortunately for Maryland goes to Pennsylvania State College after January 1st, says that the recent corn show at Maryland week was the best that has ever been held in Maryland. The corn club exhibits were fully up to the adult standard of corn showing, and all who missed seeing the entire exposition missed a rare treat in Maryland agriculture.

In the field of club exhibits Queen Annes was well represented. The Progressive Farmers' Club of Price, that live organization of progressive farmers of Price Station, this county, have moved up a notch in their place at the Maryland State Fair. Last year this Queen Annes club won seventh place in club exhibit at the fair, and this year they won sixth. Sixth place is a most creditable showing for the club in view of the circumstances. In the first place, the club produce was delayed as late as Wednesday before it put in its appearance in Baltimore. This means that the produce was on the road from Saturday to Wednesday, which of course is always detrimental to show farm produce. This meant that the stuff came into the Armory too late to enter competition under the rules. However, the rules were waived so as to allow the club to exhibit. After all these difficulties the club won 6th place, which is most commendable indeed. The variety and quality of the produce shown by the Price farmers was equal to any that went to the show from any county. Of course, we Queen Annes countians believe that we have Nature's Garden Spot, and we have! But we have got to show other people who are from Missouri. They don't take our mere word for it. We must advertise our products by placing them in competition with the produce of other sections of Maryland and showing the public the advantage which our stuff has.

Maryland can feel proud of her excellent State Fair in 1916 and Queen Annes can feel proud of the important role she is playing in Maryland Agriculture.

A Word From The Boys.

The County Agent has received several very complimentary thanks from the corn club boys who toured our county recently; the boys were touched with the splendid hospitality shown by the entire Eastern Shore and several of them made no secret of the fact that they had the best time while in the counties in Queen Annes and particularly in Centreville. The General Committee, the Entertaining Committee, and all those public spirited citizens who opened up their homes and hearts so generously to the young farmers of Western Maryland, have the thanks both of the boys and of the Sun and Agricultural Extension service for the splendid co-operation and energy with which they lent themselves to the cordial welcome and reception of Maryland's future farmers.

Breed Cows Now.

The present is a most excellent time for dairymen to breed the bull to their milch cows. To use the bull now will mean that calves will come early next fall, when milk is scarce and it will mean that the cows will have a long flow over winter and winter is the period when we get our best prices for our milk. Not only does breeding now mean that we will get milk during a period when the best prices prevail, but it means that each individual cow will give more milk. Each cow will give more milk because her milking period will extend over a more desirable period for production. The summer months are the least desirable production months for the cow in as much as flies and the heat worry and pull her down in flesh. If, in addition to these, she must work every day at milk production, she cannot produce the quantity in total that she would on the same amount of feed during winter and spring months. It is essential, therefore, not only in the interest of better prices, but also in the interest of more milk, that the dairy man looks to the breeding of his cows at this time. If your cows do not now calve so that you can follow this suggestion, begin now to plan the cows' periods of freshening so that they can come in August and September and can rest over the hotter months of the following summer.
