HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

A work bench which has been under construction by the pupils of the Centreville High School is about completed. It represents the skill and labor of a number of the high school pupils for the space of about five months and, when fully equipped with tools, will accomodate fourteen workmen. The construction of this large work bench was necessary, owing to the fact that the school board moved a portion of the manual training equipment to another school in the county. While this bench is large, the cost is little more than a smaller one, because the construction was done by the school. It is said the bench if bought would have cost $400.

A number of the boys of the high school are suffering from bad colds, alleged to be due to the fact that they were kept up so late "Pan-Cake" night by Mr. Kline, who held night school that evening.

Mr. Bruehl and Mr. Kline were absent from school a few days this week on account of illness.

MARYLAND IN PICTURES

The Sunday Sun Will Reproduce Views of Queen Annes County.

From the sand dunes shifting on Worcester's ocean shore to the templed hills of Garrett, through the tidal sweeps of the Chesapeake Bay and o'er the cereal laden fields of the historic Conowingo section, Maryland is to be done in pictured history. Its spots of romance, of industry, of communal life of glorious history, of budding progress and of beauteous landscapes will be spread before its admirers galore in the photogravure section of The Baltimore Sunday Sun.

A staff photographer now is making a tour of Maryland—a pictorial Pilgrim's Progress, it is called—delving deep into scenes and local traditions. Every section of the state, including Queen Annes county, will be visited. These pictures will be presented from Sunday to Sunday in full pages done in artistic sepia, which is the last word in newspaper illustration. Delightful to look upon and well worth preserving, these pictures, so far as space permits, will reflect the spirit and hopes of each community.

WILLIAM H. CLAPP.

News reached Centreville Wednesday morning that William H. Clapp, for seven years a resident of "Headlong Hall," the former farm home of "Headlong Jim" Tilghman, a noted Confederate veteran, had died that morning in New York City from pneumonia. His brother, Arthur P. Clapp, a wealthy cotton broker, was here at the time and hastened to New York by the morning Pennsylvania train.

Mr. Clapp was 63 years old and was a son of a wealthy manufacturer and former mayor of Bridgeport, Conn. Previous to coming to Queen Annes county, Mr. Clapp was connected for years with the New York Life Insurance Company. He was a member of the Marine Field Club. His surviving relatives are his brother and one sister, both residents of New York, where his funeral services were held. Mr. Clapp left here last fall to spend the winter in New York and, was ill but a short time before he passed away.

TO SAVE SMALL FISH

Oyster Navy Ordered Rigidly To Enforce Conservation Law.

That the laws regarding the taking of undersized fish must be enforced by the oyster navy and inspectors is the latest dictum of the State Conservation Commission as announced recently.

For years these laws have been poorly enforced, and the oyster navy has done little or nothing in regard to them, leaving it to the State Game Warden to find the undersized fish in the markets. The law requires that all undersized fish be returned to the water alive and not be dumped on shore to perish.

ANOTHER QUEEN ANNES POET

Unknown Lyricist Sings of the Glories Of Maryland's Far-Famed Eastern Shore.

In last Monday's issue of The Baltimore American, the following poem, signed "Queen Annes County," was published with many others. It reads:

Eastern Shore.

Sing your songs of any land, of any spot or clime,
There's not a song that can be sung
that can compare with mine.
For mine is an Eden bower—
Its of a birthright grand—
The dearest spot in all the world
A part of Maryland.

The Eastern Shore of Maryland
Is grand and grandly great.
The paradise—you read about
Where brains originate.
Its southern hospitality
Will set your heart agoin
The garden spot of all the world
Is the good old Eastern Shore.

If you doubt what I am telling you,
Just happen down some day,
The hand clasp of the Eastern Shore
will win you right away
Its lakes and lovely rivers
Its fields of yellow grain,
The bountifulness of all its yields
Will bring you back again
From Queen Annes County.

WHERE GARDENS PAY.

The market gardens on the outskirts of Paris, which supply that city with fresh produce, average in extent from one-half to two acres each, according to a letter recently published in The Chicago Daily News, written by A. R. Decker. There are about 1,200 of these small farms that produce crops valued at $1,600 an acre each year. This yield is more remarkable when compared with $140 per acre, produced by American market gardeners on Western Long Island.

This high yield is obtained by the French gardeners by the liberal use of fertilizers and intensive methods of cultivation. Before planting, the gardener digs out the top soil and mixes it with fertilizer. During winter and early spring, the growing vegetables are protected by glass, usually bell-shaped, but much produce is grown without glass. Water is obtained from canals pumped onto the land by motors.—Seed World.

DR. RICKARDS TO BE TRIED

Second Trial On Charge of Manslaughter Set For Thursday.

Dr. Harry N. Rickards, a physician of the Eastern Shore, who formerly conducted an office on North Charles street, will be tried again next Thursday in the Criminal Court on the charge of manslaughter, growing out of an alleged criminal operation upon Miss Lillian Smith, of Chestertown, Md. Dr. Richards was convicted on January 29, 1916, and sentenced to six years in the Penitentiary by Judge Duffy on the same charge. He appealed the case to the Court of Appeals, and the court remanded the case for a new trial. Rickards is now out on $8,000 bail, furnished by a number of prominent citizens of the Eastern Shore.

Last October it was thought Rickards would never be tried again, on account of the serious illness of James R. Meredith, 31 years old, of Church Hill; but since that time Meredith has recovered sufficiently to enable him to appear at the trial. In the fall of 1915 Dr. Rickards was arrested following the death of Miss Lillian Smith at the Hebrew Hospital. It was alleged he had performed an operation on her at his office, on North Charles street. Miss Smith is alleged to have died two days after the operation was performed. Dr. Rickards was later indicted by the Grand Jury, and, following a two-day trial before Judge Duffy, in the Criminal Court, Part 2, was convicted of manslaughter.—Baltimore American.

EASTERN SHO' PINE SHATS ARE BECOMING VALUABLE

Northern Poultry Raiser Pays $18 a Ton or Them To Use As Nests.

Since a visitor to the peninsula discovered that pine needles make excellet nests for hens, driving away vermin and furnishing an added inducement to the fowl to lay eggs, the pine trees' discard has acquired a commercial value.

Farmers have used the needles for bedding stock, making hens' nests and covering tender plants in winter for years, but they never considered them as of any value commercially.

A short time ago a northern man engaged in raising poultry and pigeons on a large scale visited the peninsula and was much interested in the hens' nests he saw formed of pine needles. He at once arranged for a small shipment of them and, after giving them a trial, purchased three tons. Shortly afterwards the shippers were surprised to receive a check for $54, at the rate of $18 a ton.

News of the sale soon spread through the section and now many able-bodied men who have no other occupation have gone to work gathering and baling the needles. Quite an industry has been started in supplying the demand for this product.

KEEPING A SECRET.

There is no one in the world who can and does keep a secret better than the average newspaper reporter. Good reporters are always taken into the confidence of the leading business men of a town or city. They also have the confidence of many lawyer. They know, frequently many days in advance, that this or that story is going to break on such and such a day.

There is not one reporter in a hundred who would betray one of those confidences under any circumstances. He knows if he did, that that particular source of information is forever closed to him. For uprightness, honesty and integrity the newspaper reporter is, or should be, known.

To illustrate, let us relate one experience. The prosecuting attorney in a certain county told of an indictment of quite a prominent man on a criminal charge. The lawyer promised to send the case to the grand jury immediately after the noon recess. The reporter wrote his story, told of the indictment, and gave many details. After his paper was out he visited the court room and gave the judge a copy of the paper containing the story. The judge was amazed and said the story was false. But the reporter hurriedly asked the prosecuting attorney to send in the indictment. He did so at once and all was well.

His paper scored a big beat, but had not this reporter been in the confidence of that lawyer he never would have got it.—Annapolis Capital.

HIGH COST OF DRINKING.

It is said that twelve grocers in Delaware, Ohio, prepared the following list to illustrate the high cost of drinking. The man who averages three glasses of liquor a day for a year at ten cents a glass could buy for the same money the following:

3 barrels of flour.
20 bushels potatoes.
200 lbs granulated sugar.
1 Barrel of crackers.
1 lb pepper.
2 lbs tea.
50 lbs salt.
50 lbs butter.
10 lbs cheese.
25 lbs coffee.
10 lbs candy.
3 dozen cans tomatoes.
10 dozen pickles.
10 dozen oranges.
10 dozen bananas.
2 dozen cans corn.
18 boxes of matches.

And besides, he would have $15.20 left.
