TO SAVE THE CRABS

VIRGINIA FISHERIES COMMISSION GIVES VALUABLE LESSSONS IN PAMPHLET.

Valuable lessons that Maryland crabbers may learn with profit to themselves are contained in a pamphlet recently issued by the Virginia Commission of Fisheries. It is called "Dredging for Crabs vs. Deep Water Oyster Planting" and a valuable extract is the following:

It has long been the belief of many persons who have made a study of crabs that this dredging of crabs in the Chesapeake Bay in the winter season is largely responsible for the present scarcity of crabs in our rivers and that if it is not stopped crabs will, at no distant day, be practically exterminated in our waters, as lobsters have been in some of the Northern waters, by the failure to properly protect them. Already crabs have become so scarce in some of our rivers, bays and sounds, where they were formerly plentiful, that handline fishermen experience difficulty in securing enough for bait. In other sections of the state, where the crabbing industry was formerly very profitable, it has been entirely abandoned.

The last section of the state to feel the scarcity of crabs will be the lower Chesapeake Bay, where female crabs from the entire bay congregate for the purpose of bearing their young.

As long as there are any crabs at all in the bay and rivers, they will appear to be fairly plentiful on their restricted breeding grounds in the lower Chesapeake Bay, where they hibernate in great schools or shoals. Their scarcity is beginning to be felt even here.

Not only is the Commission of Fisheries unanimously of the opinion that the dredging of crabs should give way to the deep-water planting of oysters. We are further of the opinion that in leasing out land in the Chesapeake Bay for deep-water planting we are helping to preserve and protect the crabbing industry.

WORLD'S BUTTERFAT RECORD

Holstein-Freisian Cow Produces 50 Pounds in Seven-Day Test.

A new world's record for all breeds for butterfat production in the seven-day division has been established by a pure-bred Holstein-Freisian cow, Segis Fayne Johanna, 114658, in a test recently ended. This remarkable cow produced 50.68 pounds of butter in seven consecutive days, and the official test was conducted by supervisors from the New York State Agricultural College, Ithaca, N. Y. Segis Fayne Johanna, by her wonderful achievement, is now the most talked of cow in the world, and her sensational record marks a signal triumph in the forward march of the Holstein Freisian breed.

She was bred by A. A. Cortelyou, of Somerville, N. J., and her present owner is Oliver Cabana, Jr., proprietor of Pine Grove Farms, Elma Center, N. Y., at which noted establishment four other world's record holders have been developed during the past six months.

The new world's record holder freshened at the age of 8 years, 2 months and 17 days. She is four-fifths white, weighs about 1,450 pounds and is sired by King Fayne Segis, 46747. Her dam is Vikina Johanna, 64355, a daughter of Johanna Rue 3d's Lad and Vikina Clothilde.

The test was made under perfect conditions, absolute quiet, systematic feeding and milking, and a roomy stall constructed of clean white enameled walls.

Segis Fayne Johanna's seven-day production of over 50 pounds of butter surpasses that of Hester Aaltje Korndyke, the previous world's record holder, by 3.91 pounds. In their present warranted state of elation, enthusiastic Holstein-Freisian breeders over the dairy world at large now marvel at the accomplishment of what was almost impossible and ask, "where will it end."

HAVE YOUR OWN GARDEN.

That the majority of people have heretofore overlooked or forgotten the value of gardens is indicated by the rapidity with which the idea of vacant lots and back-yard gardening in cities has sprung into prominence since the rapid rise in the prices of food products. Vegetables and especially canned goods are unusually high in price and gardens will do more than ever before to cut down the cost of living. Properly cared for, a small plot of garden will supply enough vegetables for the average family. Good seed, proper cutural methods, plantfood, preferably in the form of both manure and fertilizers, and a few garden tools, are all that are needed to make a start in the gardening industry for hime use.
