President Was Greeted Here Enroute Home From Denton

President Roosevelt Made Brief Speech At War Memorial On St. John's Campus Before Spending Hour With Governor Nice At Gov- ernment House — Lewis With Him — Tyd- ings Denounced In Speech On Shore.

President Roosevelt, en route home from the Eastern Shore where he spoke urging the election of Congressman David J. Lewis as United States Senator, spoke briefly in Annapolis yesterday.

After disembarking at the Naval Academy, President Roosevelt, accompanied by Congressman Lewis and Postmaster General Farley, drove to the front walk of the St. John's campus, opposite the War Memorial, where he made a short speech.

ALUMNUS OF ST. JOHN'S

In his comment the President pointed out that he was an honorary alumnus of St. John's College. He also expressed pleasure that he could visit Annapolis, and compared government with the town's old, historical buildings. He said had the buildings not been somewhat modernized they would not have remained.

President Roosevelt stopped here at the request of Mayor Louis N. Phipps who had gone to Denton to hear the President speak. When President Roosevelt arrived in Annapolis, Mayor Phipps and members of his ticket for county office, were gathered on the porch of the Mayor's house, but President Roosevelt stopped nearly a block away and Mayor Phipps and his party then walked to the monument to greet President Roosevelt.

Visited Governor Nice

Later the Nation's Chief Executive went to the Government House where he was greeted by Governor and Mrs. Nice and others. Many of the 1,000 persons who had greeted him at St. John's College cheered him again as he left his automobile at the State Mansion. President Roosevelt remained almost an hour with Governor Nice before returning to Washington.

He was warmly received throughout his visit in the city, despite the strong sentiment here for Senator Millard E. Tydings who is on the President's purge list.

Lewis To Return Here

Tomorrow night Congressman Lewis will speak here at a public rally at the State Armory.

underscored the name of Senator Millard E. Tydings on the Administration's political "blacklist," put aside politics temporarily today and traveled to his Hyde Park estate for a rest.

In a Labor Day speech at Denton, Md., yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt denounced Tydings, by implications, as a conservative and praised by name his opponent in Maryland's Democratic Senatorial primary next Monday, Representative David J. Lewis.

As leader of the Democratic party, he said, "I propose to try to keep it liberal."

Listed As Betrayer

Tydings, who has opposed some New Deal legislation, recently was labeled by the President as a "betrayer" of the Administration. Lewis has campaigned as a "one hundred per cent. New Dealer."

Aides said Mr. Roosevelt had no speaking engagements until September 17 when, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he will help observe the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the ratification of New York's Constitution.

There has been speculation that he might take occasion then to say something more about why he has asked Democrats of the Sixteenth New York District not to renominate Representative John J. O'Connor.

The President remained in the Capital only a few hours last night before boarding a special train for Hyde Park. He had spent the day, in company with Lewis, touring Maryland's Eastern Shore by automobile.

Speech At Denton

He stopped at Denton, county seat of a farming section, to talk for half an hour on what he called "American principles of Government." Not once did he utter Tydings' name, but his hearers could not fail to identify the Senator as the target of several verbal shafts.

Progress, he said at one point, "comes from the rank and file of our citizens, and through the representatives of their free choice—representatives willing to cooperate, to get things done in the true spirit of 'give and take'—not representatives who seek every plausible excuse for blocking action."

Earlier in the speech he had referred to liberals and conservatives and added: "Any man—any political party—has the right to be honestly one or the other. But the nation can not stand for the confusion of having him pretend to be one and act like the other."

Charges G. O. P. Leaning

When he first spoke out weeks ago against renomination of Tydings, Mr. Roosevelt had described him as wanting "to run with the Roosevelt prestige and the money of his Republican friends both on his side."

Tydings headquarters in Baltimore said the Senator heard the broadcast address, but had no comment.

In mentioning Lewis, Mr. Roosevelt first sketched the Congressman's career in the Maryland and national legislatures, referring to him only as "a fledgling member of Maryland's Legislature" whose efforts had led to the enactment of the first workmen's compensation measure in any State.

That same individual, he went on, later was a pioneer in the cause of social security and parcel post legislation in Congress.

And the crowd cheered when the Chief Executive departed from his one mine in the world which blends its entire output from anthracites. From one seam superbly hot, quick-burning coal. From the other a steady, long-lasting "White Ash" type. But where one alone would be difficult to bank and the other insufficiently responsive in cold weather, a correct blend of both becomes the ideal fuel.

one ton of Colonial Blended Anthracite. Notice how it glows as it feels draft, subsides to steady warmth as you damp it off. Watch its freedom. Its small quantity of fine ash, its admirable performance under mechanical feeding. After the first ton, you will never go back to ordinary anthracite.

How do we prove all this with a ton of Colonial Blended Anthracite?

 "I don't have to name that young man, now well along in mature middle age. But my friends in the other 47 States—for their benefit if they don't know—the name of that man is Representative Lewis of Maryland."

His words were carried to the nation by radio.

With emphasis of voice and gesture, Mr. Roosevelt stressed these points to several thousand listeners in a holiday crowd that half-filled the tree-shaded courthouse
 square:

That the Democratic party must remain liberal to remain alive, and that liberalism in the party serves the interests of all Americans.

That he has a right to speak out
 for liberalism in any community,
 county, or State in the land.

That the farmer and the laborer have a "community of interests," with the welfare of one dependent on the welfare of the other.

Speech In Annapolis

Later in the day, across Chesapeake Bay at Annapolis, the President stopped before several hundred persons assembled on the campus of St. John's College. He praised the beauty of the historic buildings of the city and the institutions, then commented that they were useful still only because they have been modernized.

"We have the same form of government we have always had," he added. "But it needs to be constantly modernized. That's all that needs to be said. I think you'll catch the point."

While traveling to Denton from Crisfield, where he debarked early in the morning from the yacht Potomac, Mr. Roosevelt stopped for an occasional short talk in towns where crowds had gathered. The Shore folk, he said at Sallsbury,
 had given him a "warm welcome."

With him on the journey, in addition to Lewis, were Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Denton; Postmaster General James
 A. Farley, Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Dem., Wis.), and, for part of the trip, Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland.
