A Literary Curiosity.

Mrs. H. A. Deming, of San Francisco, is said to have been a year in hunting up and fitting the following thirty-eight lines from thirty eight English poets. The names of the authors are given below:

Life.

1—Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
2—Life's short summer—man a flower.

3—By turns we catch the vital breath and die—
4—The cradle and the tomb, alas! so nigh.

5—To be is better far than not to be,
6—Though all man's life may seem a tragedy;

7—But light cares speak when mighty griefs are dumb
8—The bottom is but shallow whence they come.

9—Your fate is but the common fate of all;
10—Unmingled joys, here, to no man befall.

11—Nature to each allots his proper sphere,
12—Fortune makes folly her peculiar care;

13—Custom does not often reason overrule,
14—And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool.

15—Live well, how long or short permit to heaven;
16—They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.

17—Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face
18—Vile intercourse where virtue has not place;

19—Then keep each passion down however dear;
20—Thou pendulum, betwixt a smile and tear;

21—Her sensual snares let faithless pleasure try,
22—With craft and skill—to ruin and betray.

23—Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise,
24—We masters grow of all we despise.

25—O then renounce that impious self-esteem,
26—Riches have wings, and grandeur is a dream.

27—Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave,
28—The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

29—What is ambition? 'tis a glorious cheat,
30—Only destructive to the brave and great.

31—What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown?
32—The way to bliss lies not on beds of down.

33—How long we live not years, but actions tell;
34—That man lives twice who lives the first life well,

35—Make then while yet ye may your God your friend
36—Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend.

37—The trust that's given, guard and to yourself be just;
38—For, live we how we can, yet die we must.

A TERRIBLE FLOOD!

GREAT DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

SEVERAL LIVES LOST.

BRIDGES AND DAMS SWEPT AWAY.

Factories, Mills and Tanneries Injured.

The City Overflowed—Streets Inundated—Stores and Dwellings Invaded—Goods Destroyed—City Cars Stopped—A Car and its Passengers Caught—Gas and Water Supply Injured—Incidents, &c.

This city and the adjacent country was visited on Friday with violent storms of rain, which lasted several hours, producing a most disastrous flood. The rain poured down in torrents from early in the morning, and about midday the water in Jones's fall—that delectable stream which passes directly through the city—rose with great rapidity, soon overflowing its walled banks, backing into numerous contiguous streets, and penetrating dwellings, stores and innumerable basements, creating great alarm, and damaging and sweeping off property, carrying away bridges, &c.

The small wooden bridge at Charles street avenue was the first within the city limits to give way, and sweeping down, with other debris from above, passed under the lofty Belvidere and Eager street bridges, the latter being a stone arch, and reaching thence the iron bridge at Madison street, struck it, causing that bridge to give way, and soon after the bridges at Monument, Centre, Bath, Hillen and Fayette streets, making seven bridges in all in the city, swept away. Gay street bridge was sprung, but stands, as also does Baltimore, Lombard and Pratt street bridges, though they were overflown.

The dwelling of Dr. J. McWilliams, on the east side of Jones's falls, on Fayette street, a three story house, was washed away, nothing but the east wall being left standing. The family of the doctor had fortunately been removed previous to the falling of the wall. Loss estimated at about $3,000.

The foundation of the large building on the corner of Front and Plowman streets, occupied by Messrs. Bently, Larrabee & Co., as an iron foundary, gave way, and the front and west walls fell with a tremendous crash. Fortunately the workmen had left the premises, and no one was injured. The loss is very heavy.

The soap and candle manufactory of Messrs. Armstrong & Co., on Concord st., was submerged to the depth of about ten feet. The building was but slightly injured, but the loss in stock and machinery is large.

The extensive sugar refinery of Woods, Weeks & Co., corner, of Concord and Lombard streets, the east wall being on Jones's falls, appeared to be in a precarious condition, with floating debris piled against it, and a large amount of valuable machinery rendered worthless for the time being. There was also a considerable stock of sugar on the lower floor, which was either washed away or destroyed.—The loss is variously estimated at from $25,000 to $30,000.

A large amount of sugar and molasses lying on the docks at the foot of Frederick and Gay sts., was washed away and destroyed, involving a heavy loss. The sugar and molasses was the property of several importers, and it is impossible to estimate the loss. The loss of Fisher Brothers is set down at $10,000. Kirkland, Chase & Co., lost but little.

The heads of Smith's, Spear's and Dugan's wharves were washed away clear up the railway track on Pratt st., and in one or two cases the railway track was injured. It being impossilbe to pass the train over it last evening, the passengers were transferred to other cars, and thus the through travel was uninterrupted.

The various lumber dealers on both sides of Jones's fall, from Pratt st., bridge to the basin, lost heavily, large quantities of lumber, shingles, staves, &c., being washed away. Some of the lumber yards was left with scarcely any stock.

Merrill Manufacturing Company's dam at Belvidere bridge is partly destroyed.

THE GERMAN ZION CHURCH.

The thick brick wall surrounding the yard of the German Zion Church on North Gay st., both on Holliday and Gay sts., gave way, and fell with a heavy crash. The rear wall of the church is also said to be damaged.

GAY AND SARATOGA STREETS.

Gay street, from Fayette street to the bridge and Saratoga, from Gay to Calvert, were both completely under water, and the loss to those residing or doing business on both, is very considerable.

A RAILROAD CAR IN THE FLOOD.

About one o'clock, city passenger car No. 14, John Plummer, conductor, and Wm. Bloodgood driver, in passing from Gay st., bridge, was caught by the floor when opposite Harrison st. The body was lifted by the force of the current from the track, and carried rapidly down Fayette, where it lodged against the restaurant of John English. The driver managed to loosen his team and the horses were saved. There was a lady and two gentlemen in the car at the time; the former was rescued by means of a rope thrown to her as the car swept down the street; the male passengers were rescued by a lady in the house against which the car lodged, she helping them out from the second story window.

HOLLIDAY STREET.

The water extended through Holliday street, to the corner of Fayette, entirly submerging all the houses from Monument street, five or six squares to that point. The office of the police marshal, the police station and all places of business were only accessible by boats, a number of which were brought from South Baltimore on drays. The Holliday Street Theatre had ten feet of water in the parquette, the basement being filled. Mr. Ford estimates his loss at not less than $2,000. The extensive excavation opposite, for the basement of the new City Hall, was also filled. The centre police station was inaccessible last night, and by order of Marshal Farlow the business of the district was transacted at the marshal's office. All the residents on this st., lost more or less, and it will require weeks to remove the water and dirt from the yards and cellars.

The water rose so rapidly and unexpectedly that many persons employed in the lower stories made narrow escapes with their lives. At the copper foundery of Mr. Joshua Regester the workmen had a very narrow escape, Mr. Sam. Regester sank exhausted three times before he was rescued from the building. Mr. Regester's loss is very considerable, as is also that of Messrs. Emrich & Flynn, machinists, adjoining.

HARRISON STREET.

Harrison street was entirely under water to the depth of ten or twelve feet, and being the street next adjacent to the falls, was, of course, the last street which the water left. In fact, up to a late hour last night it was next to impossibility to get into this thoroughfare on account of the mud left by the retiring waters, and the wrecked material on every side. This street is mostly occupied by Israelites, engaged in small retail business, and as no one escaped, the loss in the aggregate is very heavy. Nearly all the awning and lamp-posts were carried away by the heavy timbers which passed down.

BALTIMORE STREET.

The water extended from east of Front street to Gay, on Baltimore, and the destruction of property has been heavy. For a time, also, the water ran out of Holliday street into Baltimore. Mr. Berry, No. 25, khown as the China tea store, estimates his loss at not less than $10,000. Mr. Seldner, dry goods' dealer, No. 27, loses about $6,000. Rosenfeld & Co., corner of Baltimore street and Market space, were successful in getting a quantity of their stock out of the way, and consequently their loss is only about $1,500.—Smith Bros., & Co., clothiers, sustained considerable loss by their stock being damaged.

All persons doing business on both sides of the street suffered more or less loss, but in the excitement last evening it was found impossible to ascertain individual losses. A large amount of the lumber and debris that was forced down Harrison street found a lodgment in front of the Maryland Institute, and there it accumulated until it became piled up to the second story windows, and extended out to the city passenger railway track. Among the debris thus accumulated are portions of houses, bridges, boxes and every description of wrecked lumber.

FREDERICK STREET.

The flood rushed down Frederick street with great fury, from Gay to the basin, inundating all the cellars, and in some cases reaching up to the second story windows, and in many cases families were taken from the upper stories of dwellings in boats. Every one residing on this street suffered more or less. At the corner of Baltimore street the force of the water became much broken by its forcing itself into the main channel on that street, but before reaching Baltimore street, in many instances the pavements were washed away, as well as the earth down to the foundations of the buildings. At the corner of Frederick and Fayette streets the roof of a house lodged.

The business men on S. Frederick street all lost more or less heavily by the destruction and washing away of their stock. Mr. Nicholas Magers, No. 11, tobacco dealer, estimates his loss at $5,000 in leaf tobacco, his cellar was filled with mud and water, the latter being four feet on the first floor. R. Sands & Co., No. 44 South Frederick, estimate their loss at $1,000 on stock, and the building received some damage, Robert Turner, feed merchant, was a heavy loser in the destruction of his stock.

DAVIS STREET.

The people living on Davis street, a short street running east from Saratoga, (where the water rose to a height of over 13 feet, and in some instances covering the freight cars of the Northern Central railway,) all lost heavily—Mr. Frederick Claprose, corner of Davis and Saratoga, lost $2,000, all he was worth, and the savings of many years. Thomas B. Griffith, No. 16 Davis street, estimates his loss at $200. Henry Feidet, on Saratoga street, near Davis, loses $300, and Francis Von Waldner, corner of North and Saratoga, losas $400. The occupants of dwellings in this neighborhood were compelled to take refuge in the second stories of their houses, and many of the women and children were rescued in boats. Michael Iago's restaurant, corner of North and Bath streets, was overflowed to the second story. Whilst Mr. Jarret, police commissioner, and others were in a boat rescuing a party from the second story of Iago's house, a man called from the upper story of a house in the naighborhood, and said he had been robbed. The party went to his assistance, and entering the apartment, it bore every evidence of thieves having been there, as the marks of muddy feet were seen on the floor—The room was examined, but the lost money could not be found, and the poor man was about giving up in despair, when his wife entered the room having the money, some five hundred dollars, in her possession, she having taken it from where it was concealed when the flood commenced.

CALVERT STREET.

The water on Calvert street extended from Calvert Station to within a few feet of Lexington street, several squares, causing considerable damage to the furniture of persons residing between the two points. In a number of houses between Saratoga and Mulberry streets, the water rose nearly to the second story, and so sudden was the rise that persons were unable to remove their furniture, they being compelled to seek refuge for themselves in the upper portion of their houses. The principal losers were Turner & Mason, proprietors of Stewart's Stables. The entire lower portion of their establishment was submerged. All of their horses were saved except one, but their carriages, some of which were very valuble, were considerably injured, feed destroyed, &c. Their loss is estimated at from four to five thousand dollars.—The furniture of Mr Turner, in the house adjoining the stables, (No. 63,) was also materially damaged, the loss upon which is estimated at $1,500. Mr. Turner and family are absent from the city. The loss of Mrs. Bissell, who occupies a portion of the same house, is also heavy.

NORTH STREET.

On North street the water rose still higher than reached by it on Calvert street, in some instances entering the second stories of the buildings situated in the lowest portions in the street A number of the flour and grain dealers suffered heavy losses. George Young & Co., No. 80 North st., were among those who suffered most, their loss being estimated at several thousand dollars, though the firm were unable to determine yesterday the exact amount. The loss of George Small, No. 64 North street, is estimated at $6,000.

PERSONS DROWNED.

An unknown man was found drowned at Pratt street bridge, and another at Concord street, both bodies being taken to the eastern police station. Another unknown man was found on the premises of Mr. Hugh Botton, McElderry's wharf Late last evening, when the water left Harrison street, the body of a German named Abraham Keyser, residing at 43 Harrison street, was found on the pavement of the house adjoining his dwelling, Coroner Carr was notified, and will hold inquests on the bodies this morning. It is feared that other bodies have been washed into the basin, and that others still may be found in many cellars now filled with water.

MARKET SPACE.

Here the loss is heavy, both sides of the space being occupied by parties engaged in business of various sorts. At the fish-market space the water rose up to the roof of the market, a distance of some ten feet. For three hours a man was observed upon the roof, he having taken refuge there, and the current being too strong to venture out to him in a boat, he was only rescued when the flood had greatly subsided. It was impossible last evening to ascertain the individual losses.

THE CITY BRIDGES.

The Charles street bridge, rather a frail wooden structure, was first swept away. The flood left Belvidere bridge and the stone bridge on Eager street uninjured. The Madison street bridge, Monument street bridge, Centre street bridge, Hillin st., bridge, Gay st., bridge, and Fayette st., bridge were each in succession swept away. These were all iron bridges of a substantial character. The Baltimore st., bridge fortunately was uninjured, as also the Lombard and Pratt st., bridges.

DAMAGE TO FACTORIES, ETC.

The manufactories, stores and dwellings on the line of Jones's falls all suffered more or less damage. On the west side of the falls the manufactory of the Pearl Hominy Company was damaged to about $2,000. The tannery establishment of Appold & Sons was injured by an overflow of the vats and loss of stock swept away. Loss not ascertained, probably $10,000. J. H. Heald & Co.'s tannery was damaged, it is supposed, about 20,000, the vats being overflown and the office and parts of another building swept away.

Deanmead & Sons had the outer walls of one of their machine shops washed away, and lost machinery, tools and stock to the amount of $5,000. Bayfield & Gregg, tanners, had their vats overflowed and a building carried away. Loss not ascertained, probably about $20,000. Smith & Curlett, soap and candle manufacturers, suffered a heavy loss from the destruction of their stock by water and from damage to their machinery. Parlett & Mullhofer, carriage dealers, corner of North and Saratoga, lost about $2,000.

The Monument Mills, on North street, owned by H. M. Warfield & Co., suffered severely. The dam, race, head-gate, etc., were carried away, and much valuable machinery damaged by the water and mud. The water was thirty feet deep in the building, being up to the burr floor. The damage will amount to a considerable sum. With their accustomed enterprise, Mssrs. Warfield, as soon as the water subsided last evening, had a large force of workmen engaged in clearing away the debris, and in the shortest time possible will have their mill in operation.

INCIDENTS.

About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon a party of men engaged a furniture car driver to carry them through the flood, then rapidly falling to the east side of Jones's falls. When near the Maryland Institute, the little gray mare attached to the wagon was unable to stem the current, and the entire party were about being carried down the stream, when two young men, Michael Murry and J. Lakehorn, plunged into the surging stream and cut the harness, thus relieving the animal, which was swept down the stream, and is supposed to have been drowned. The party in the wagon were subsequently rescued by boats.

Col. E. H. Webster, collector of the port, was caught by the storm in the public store, corner of Lombard and Gay sts. During the height of the flood, on looking from the second story window, he observed a man borne along Frederick street, struggling for life in the surging waves. The colonel at once jumped from the window and succeeded in rescuing the man and placing him on terra firma.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The fire commissioners and the men of the department were actively engaged during the continuance of the flood, and the steam enjines were employed in pumping out cellas during the afternoon and night. The machins were placed where most needed after cleaning the cellars of the city buildings. It is to be hoped that all service in this way will continue to be rendered.

GAS CUT OFF.

In the carrying away of the Chase-street bridge, the gas-pipes passing in to Old Town were severed, depriving those north of the bridge of a supply of gas. All that portion of the city, including Gay street north, had to use candles last night.

JONES'S FALLS BEYOND THE CITY.

All along the whole length of Jones's fall's, for miles beyond the city, imilence destruction has ensued. All the bridges, commencing with that at the first tollgate on the Falls turnpike, (nearest the city,) extending up the stream to the Relay or Swann lake, are gone, while factories, mills, and their dams in many instances, experienced great damage, some dams being entirely washed away. Timanus dam at Rock Mill, the dam at Mount Vernon Factory, the dam at the Clipper Cotton Mills and the dam at Woodberry Cotton Mills are all gone. The Woodberry Factory and the Park Mills, at the same point, sustained much damage, the lower floors of both, where were the engines and machinery, being overflowed, while the gasometer was floated off and the race washed out. The Druid Mill, at the same point was not injured, but a large amount of coal and some material out side was washed away. The machine shops of Poole & Hunt are situated at Woodberry also, but their only loss was of coal, lumber and wood.

At the Clipper Factory the water was up to the second floor, and many hands in the building had to be taken out in boats. The machinery and goods were of course much injured, and a lot of building materials carried away.

At Mt. Washington, further up, and about six miles from the city, the mill was inundated above the second floor, and houses were swept off and cattle, horses and hogs came floating down.

The Woodberry, Clipper and Park Cotton Mills, belongs to Wm. E. Hopper & Son, of this city, and the Druid Mill to H. N. Gambrill, Sons & Co. At the Mt. Vernon Cotton Mills, belonging to the Mt. Vernon Company, the lower floor was overflowed and the machinery thus injured. The Falls turnpike is largely a wreck, and must be impassable for some time by carriages, the banks at points being washed down. The houses along it for the two miles and a half as far as Mt. Vernon, were all more or less injured, the water in many reaching the second story. All the quarries along the falls were filled with water.

About 132,000 cubic feet of earth were washed out on each side of the dam at Swann Lake) and a portion of the water pipe was washed out near Mt. Vernon Factory. The Water Company estimate the cost of making the repairs at about $10,000.

NORTHERN CENTRAL RAILROAD.

On the Northern Central railroad, the iron bridge at Melvale, four miles out, was swept away, also a double arched stone bridge above Woodberry, and the wooden railroad bridge at Mt. Washington. The bridge at Swann Lake is uninjured. The water forced its way along the railroad track from the lake south, damaging the track somewhat. In consequence of the damage the company have given notice to shippers that no more freight will be received for transportation at present.

WESTERN MARYLAND RAILROAD.

The flood in the country through which the road passes was very great, though there is not supposed to be any great damage to crops.—The road itself was broken at a point half a mile this side of Owings's Mills, by the washing out of the trestles from under a bridge, which prevented the passage of the trains. On the Reisterstown turnpike, three miles this side of Owings's Mills, a culvert was washed out

TEACH THE WOMAN TO SAVE.—There's the secret! A saving woman at the head of a family is the very best saving bank yet established—one who receives deposits daily and hourly with no costly machinery to manage it. The idea of saving is a pleasant one, and if the woman would imbibe it at once, they would cultivate and adhere to it, and thus, when they were not aware of it, would be lying the foundation of a competent security in a stormy time, and shelter in a rainy day. The woman who sees to her own house, has a large field to serve in.

The best way to make her comprehend it is, to keep an account of all current expenditures of herself and family. Where from one to two thousand dollars are expended annually, there is a chance to save something if the effort is only made. Let the house wife take the idea, act upon it, and she will save many dollars, perhaps hundreds, where before she thought it to be impossible.

"Uncle Jemmy," said a waggish blade to one of the best old men who ever lived or died, "I'm told you are very fond of apple dumplings."—"Why," said the patriarch, "when I lived in Virginia I liked them better than anything in the world, and could eat eighteen or nineteen at a time; but, somehow, since I came to Georgia, my appetite has so failed me that I can never eat more than fourteen or fifteen before they begin to clog upon my stomach."
