NEWS ITEMS.

LANCASTER, PA., Sept. 5.—An outbreak took place this A. M., at six o'clock, at the Lancaster County Prison, which resulted in a fight and the escape of one prisoner. Just after the watchmen had been changed a negro prisoner, named Coleman, managed to destroy the two locks of his cell; at the same time another negro prisoner open his cell door, and the two men, armed with shoemakers' knives, attacked the watchman of the corridor, and tied him to his chair; they then took the keys from his pocket and opened a closet where pistols were kept, and also opened the cells of three white convicts. The alarm had been given by this time and Levi Sensing, the keeper of the prison, and his assistants, appeared, whereupon a fight ensued, in which the negroes used the pistols, but fortunately without inflicting injury. The convicts had opened the real gate of the prison but were overpowered before any of them, except a white man, named Curtis, could escape. Curtis was awaiting his trial for larceny, and will probably be recaptured.

General Terrell, the Third Assistant Postmaster General, in order to remove the dissatisfaction expressed against the present postage stamps proposes to change them, and with that view he has directed the Bank Note Company which furnishes to prepare the designs for new issues. The heads of Washington, Jackson, Franklin, Lincoln and Jefferson are to be restored in place of the present designs, to be represented as profile busts; each to represent the varrious denominations. The stamps are to be larger than those now in use, and oblong. Instead of one hundred and fifty being printed on a sheet, there will be only one hundred. The former color red, will also be restored. A month or two may elapse before the new stamps will be ready.

Henry S. Dickerson, convicted in June, 1866, in the Circuit Court of Dorchester county, of the murder of Capt. Pritchett, died in the Maryland Penitentiary on Friday morning, of consumption, at the age of forty-five years. The jury found him guilty of murder in the second degree, and he was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment. His time would have expired on the first of July, 1880. His family will be notified of his death and his body delivered to them if they desire it.

THE COAL MINE HORROR.—One of the most appalling disasters that ever occurred in the mining regions in Pennsylvania took place in the Avondale mine, at Plymouth, twenty miles south of Scranton, on Monday. The only entrance into the mine in question is one well like opening or shaft, by means of which fresh air is carried into the excavation deep down in the earth; the miners also ascend and decend through this aperture. To encumber this one opening in any way is to deprive those in the mine of the chance of escape.

It would naturally be supposed that the greatest possible care would be always taken to keep this one channel of life free from even the possibility of obstruction. But the very reverse of of this was the case at Avondale; the mouth of the shaft was covered with wooden buildings one hundred feet in height and two hundred feet in length. Long use and exposure to heat rendered these structures highly inflammable. It would take but a spark to set this timber box in a blaze, and this fatal spark of fire was by some means or other communicated to the colossal match on Monday. In a very few minutes the murderous structure was a mass of flames, the crackling timbers went crashing down the shaft filling up that aperture, and depriving the miners below of air, besides sending dense volumes of smoke into the subterranean galleries. Two hundred and [illegible] men and boys were thus consigned to the most horrible of all conceivable deaths. This fearful occurrence sent a thrill of horror through the mining region. Thousands hastened to the scene of the disaster, and worked bravely to succor their fellows from the impending doom. Two noble-hearted men lost their lives in their heroic efforts to aid the entombed miners. Their failure proved that it would require a long time to get in to the wretched two hundred, and they are given up for dead.

There is an agony of sorrow in the neighborhood of Avondale. Hundreds have been widowed and orphaned by this awful calamity, and even, at this distance, the heart sickens, as the mind takes in the details of the fearful occurrence.

Shocking and frightful as the affair is, it seems almost cruel to charge any one with being, directly or indirectly concerned in bringing it about. There has been, however, criminal carelessness in this matter, for, to encumber the only entrance to a mine with any combustible obstructions whatever, is wrong; yet the mouth of the Avondale shaft, which is 327 feet in depth, was covered with dry wood enough to fill it half way to the top with glowing embers, in a few minutes.

The eminent danger to all miners in a similar condition, is obvious, and steps should at once be taken to remedy the evil. Or, if it is impracticable to remove all buildings from the mouths of shafts used for ingress and egress, smaller apertures should be especially dug for the express purpose of ventilation, so that when the main shaft becomes obstructed, as at Avondale, there will still be an avenue for air to the men below. With such an atmospheric channel, two hundred of our fellow-beings would not have perished miserably at Plymouth.

It is said that the cause of the disaster will never be known, as every person in the mine must be dead, numbering upwards of two hundred. The first intimation outsiders had of trouble in the mine was a tremendous volumne of fire burst up the shaft, giving the engineers barely time to escape with their lives. From this the tremendous frame buildings that covered the shaft were set on fire and then all hope was lost. It is supposed from the dryness of the mine that the foul air ignited from the furnace and in such an event the small particles of coal and coal dust, the flames penetrated every avenue. At last accounts seventy-two dead bodies had been discovered, and exploring parties were still going down as fast as they could venture.

DEATH OF SECRETARY RAWLINS.—Gen. Jno. A. Rawlins, Secretary of War, died in Washington at 4 o'clock, on Monday evening last.—His death will not only be felt as national loss but as a personal calamity to thousands throughout the land. His gallant and noble services throughout the war, his close personal relations with Gen. Grant, the wise discretion and systematic industry, which he brought to the discharge of the duties of the various and important posts assigned to his charge, had given to him a reputation throughout the country as a valuable and efficient officer; whilst to the many who knew him personally he was greatly endeared as a high minded, agreeable gentleman, who drew toward him in the bonds of the strongest friendship all with whom he was more intimately connected, and who never failed to win the respect of those who were even casually and officially brought in contact with them. A severe bronchial affection, contracted whilst in the service, eventuated in consumption, from which for four years past Gen. Rawlins has been a constant sufferer. During all that time his life has hung as it were on the thread, and has, perhaps, only been prolonged by the steady resolution of the man, which resisted the inroads of disease so long as there were responsibilities to meet or duties to be performed by which he could aid the Administration of his chief. His death, though thus expected, is abted in none of its afflictive severity, for the very steadfastness and resolution with which he sustained its approach had quieted the fears of his friends, and led them to hope that he might still be spared to years of usefulness to his country and pleasurable association with them.

Soon after the death of Secretary Rawlins, his body was embalmed and dressed in the uniform of a Major General. Col. L. M. Dayton, Chief on Gen. Sherman's staff, and Capt. P. B. Johnson, of the Medical Department, sit up with the corpse.

President Grant, accompanied by his private secretary, Gen. Porter, arrived at Washington by special train from Baltimore at 5 o'clock and 12 minutes, and was met at the station by Gen. Sherman. He at once proceeded to the residence of Gen. Giles A. Smith, where he learned that Secretary Rawlins had been dead an hour. The President was much affected while gazing on the lifeless form of his friend, and expressed deep regret that, owing to the non-delivery of telegrams at Saratoga, he was prevented from sooner starting for Washington. President Grant on returning to the Executive Mansion, transmitted the following despatch:

"WASHINGTON, September 6, 1869.

"Mrs. Mary E. Rawlins, Danbury, Connecticut:

"Your beloved husband expired at 12 minutes after four o'clock this afternoon, to be mourned by a family, friends who loved him for his personal worth and services to his country, and by a nation who acknowledged their debt of gratitude to him. On consultation with friends it is determined that he shall be buried in the Congressional Burying Ground, as the most appropriate place, unless you have other suggestions to make. The time of funeral not arranged, but probably take place on Thursday next.

U. S. GRANT."

☞ THE Annual Fair of the Frederick County Agricultural Society (of Maryland) will be held at Frederick City, beginning on the 12th of October and continuing four days. The success of last year's Fair warrants the opinion that the approaching one will not only equal but excel it, and we are assured that the prospect of a good display in every Department is very flattering. The fair will be held on the new ground of the Society, which is beautifully situated in the Eastern suburbs of the city, on the Baltimore Turnpike, near the Rail Road. The ground is improved by large Exhibition Halls, extensive Stabling, (open and enclosed Stalls, and a fine track for Trials of Speed. Water is supplied by the City Water Works, and Forage may be purchased on the ground or in the City.

Liberal arrangements will be made by the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road for the transportation of Passengers, Stock, Machinery, &c.

The Society has appropriated a very liberal sum to be awarded as premiums for Trials of Speed, which will doubtless attract a number of the best horses. Competition is open to all BOARDING.—Mrs. Satterfield, formerly of Easton, has opened a Boarding house No. 39 N. Calvert Street, Baltimore, where she will accommodate boarders by the meal, day or week. For a number of years she kept a boarding house at 128 Calvert street, which was generally known by Eastern Shoremen as Mrs. Satterfield's boarding house. She invites her friends and old patrons to give her a call.

☞ It will be found that after hot words a coolness springs up.

AMPHIER FIRE IN BAY HUNDRED.—On Sunday morning last, about [illegible] o'clock, the tobacco house, portable saw mill, a two horse carriage, and small [illegible], and about [illegible] bushels of wheat, belonging to L. F. Pascault, Esq., in Bay Hundred District, was entirely destroyed by fire. Several times the fire caught to the main dwelling but by great exertion on the part of the neighbors, further progress of the flames was stopped. [illegible] Mr. Pascault saved from destruction. A small carriage was saved only by being out late at night by his son and left in the yard. We learn that Mr. Pascault was not home at the time and it is supposed that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

SALES.—There will be offered at the residence of Mr. L. J. Catrup, on the road leading from Easton to Dover Bridge, on Wednesday, the 15th inst., a larg lot of as fine a stock as there is in the county. Mr. Catrup is one of our most successful farmers, and his stock is in fine condition. Those wishing to purchase will find this a rare chance.

Thos. J. Clark, Esq., as Trustee, will offer at public sale, on the the 28th inst., that valuable track of land, formerly owned by George Hale, Esq. This farm is located near Easton, and speculators will do well to give it their attention.

☞ At a meeting of the Republican State Central Convention, just held in the city of Baltimore, among others, the following resolution was passed:

Resolved by the State Central Committee, That the counties of the State and the city of Baltimore be requested to send delegates to the State Convention, to be held in the city of Baltimore, on Wednesday, October 13, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for State Comptroller.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.—A shooting affray between white men took place at the colored camp meeting, at Moses' Chapel, near Greensborough, on Thursday night last, which resulted in the death of a man named William Cornish, better known as "big Bill Cornish." It seems that Cornish, in company with several others, went to the camp on the evening in question with the determination to murder a colored man named Montgomery Gibson, and were chasing him around the ground when Mr. Wm. W. Medford ran into the tent where Gibson was and advised his friends to secret him somewhere. Cornish and his 'crowd' stepped into the tent just in time to hear Medford's advice given, and demanded to know if he (Medford) took up for the d—d niggers? Without awaiting an answer Cornish struck Medford with a stick he held in his hand and shoved him out of the tent on the ground. Whilst in a prostrate condition Cornish was about stamping Medford, when the latter drew a huge single-barrelled brass pistol, loaded with shot, which he had in his pocket, and discharged it, the load taking effect in the jaw, breaking it in two, lacerating and cutting the tongue nearly into. Dr. Belson was called in and did all he could to relieve the man's sufferings, but he died on Sunday. No blame is attached to Medford, on the contrary, the expressed sentiment of this entire community is in commendation of the act. It was clearly self-defense. After the occurrence of the shooting, the managers of the camp armed themselves with clubs and drove the rioters from the ground.

Since the above was put in type, we learn that Cornish is still alive and likely to recover.—Denton Union.

RIOT AT A COLORED CAMP.—A camp-meeting was held by the colored people at Tell's branch, near Federalsburg, last week, and during its progress was marked by a most shameful riot. There are many conflicting reports in circulation, and it is difficult to give a correct account of the affair; still we think the following will prove, in the main, correct. On Tuesday a young colored man severely chastised a son of Mr. Thos. Willoughby, residing near the camp, and so severely bruised him that his father procured a warrant for the arrest of the colored man. This seemed to greatly incense many of the colored people and threats were made but were not put into execution until the Friday following, and then though no fault of Mr. Willoughby's, he was present at their meeting on Friday morning, quietly observing what was transpiring around him, when two young white men entered the preacher's stand, and, drawing their bottle, proceeded to take a drink. This added fuel to the flame, and a crowd immediately set out after these offenders. Some of the crowd fell upon Mr. Willoughby, assuming him with being one of the parties, and beat him over the head and body most unmercifully. One blow knocked him senseless to the ground. When consciousness returned he found himself surrounded by the crowd, and recognizing many of them had others arrested, which he was succeeded in proving their innocence. The guilty ones had doubtless fled. After getting away from the crowd, Mr. W. started to return home but was met at his gate by one of the party of colored men who presented a pistol close to his head and dared him to enter his own gate. This whole affair is a most heartrending one, clearly without provocation, and we sincerely trust the guilty wretches may yet be made to feel the extreme penalty of the law. Mr. W. is recovering from his wounds.

MANHOOD:

IN THE YOUNG AND RISING generation, the vegetative powers of life are strong, but in a few years how often the pallid face, the dark lustre, and emaciated form, and the impossibility of application to mental efforts show the baneful influence. It soon becomes evident to the observer that some depressing influence is checking the development of the body. Consumption in [illegible] or perhaps the youth is removed from school and sent into the country. This is one of the worst movements. Removed from ordinary diversions of the ever-changing scenes of the city, the powers of the body, too much enfeebled to give zest to healthful and rural exercise, thoughts are turned inward upon themselves.

If the patient be a female, the approach of the menses is looked for with anxiety, as the first symptom in which Nature is to show her saving power in diffusing the circulation and visiting the cheek with the bloom of health. Alas! increase of appetite has grown by what it fed on; the energies of the system are prostrated, and the whole economy is deranged. The beautiful and wonderful period in which body and mind undergo so fascinating a change from child to woman, is looked for in vain. The parent's heart bleeds in anxiety, and hastens the grave but waiting for the victim.

Sleep Refreshing, Dreams Frightful, no Speculation, but a hurried Transition from one Question to another. Confusion of Ideas. These symptoms if allowed to go on, which they inclined invariably to do, more so, follow Loss of Power, Fatuity, and Epileptic Fits, in one of which the patient may expire.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU cleanses and invigorates the blood, strengthens the weak, restores the health and vigor of youth, purifies the system, and purges out the corruptions that lead to disease.

During the Superintendence of Dr. Wilson at the Bloomingdale Asylum, [illegible] patients; reason had been restored to them and both died of epilepsy. They were of both sexes, and about twenty years of age.

Do I not say that these excesses are not frequently followed by those direful diseases insanity and consumption? The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of these assertions. In Lunatic Asylums the most melancholy exhibition appears. The countenance is actually sodden and quite destitute—neither Mirth or griefever visits it. Should recovery follow, it is rarely, if ever, that the mind is restored to its former vigor.

"With woeful measures wan Despair
Low sullen sounds his grief beguile."

Whilst we regret the existence of the above diseases and symptoms, we are happy to offer an invaluable gift of chemistry as a preventive of the consequences.
