Death of Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte.

Jerome Napoleon Bonapart, of Baltimore, who has been for some months confined to his house by an incurable cancer in the throat, from which he has suffered for years, died on Friday morning, the 17th inst., at his late residence in this city, corner of Fort and Centre streets aged 65. He was born in England while his mother was awaiting the favorable intercession of her husband with his brother, then Emperor of the French, which was never obtained.—The romantic but sad story which attended upon the marriage of his parents is familiar to every one—how the popular and courted Jerome Bonaparte, commanding a French frigate, landed at New York in 1803, and was feted by our people in his tour of sight seeing through the country; how he fell in love with Miss Elizabeth Patterson, of Baltimore, who is still living in this city, and who at the time of her marriage was a young and blooming belle and daughter of the wealthy merchant, William Patterson, Esq. They were married December 24, 1803, by bishop Carroll, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, and with a solemn marriage contract drawn up by Hon. Alexander J. Dallas, witnessed by the prominent citizens of Baltimore.

The youthful couple remained in the United States for a year or more, traveling over the various sections. In the spring of 1805, after the empire was declared by Napoleon I., Jerome returned to Europe with his bride, but by an imperial edict all the ports of France were closed to her, and she was not allowed to visit France, as the marriage had not met the imperial sanction, and as it came directly in conflict with the views which the ambitation and self aggrandizement of the founder of the Napoleonic dynasty had prompted in regard to his rendering his tenure of power more secure by forming brilliant matrimonial alliances for his brothers with the families of the ruling monarchs.

The Church of Rome whose sacraments had been insulted by the despotic action of Napoleon I., refused to recognize this virtual divorce, and Pope Pius VII., invariably declined to approve the attempted marriage of Jerome, which took place August 12, 1807, with Frederica Catharine, daughter of the King of Wurtemburg.

He was made King of Westphalia, subsequently, and as monarch was quite successful. When his brother was exiled to St. Helena, in 1815, Jerome, Sr., resided near Vienna and called himself Prince de Monfort (a Wurtemburg title) In 1852 the present Napoleon III called him to France. He was made a marshal of the empire and the president of the Senate, and in the failure of the succession of direct issue to the Emperor he became heir to the throne. He had one son by his second wife, Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul, commonly called Prince Napoleon.

The young mother, Mrs. Patterson Bonaparte, returned to her fathers house in Baltimore in 1811, and the lad Jerome whose death we now notice, received every educational and social advantage which wealth, talent and fond affection could give. He graduated at Harvard University in 1826, and studied law, but never practised it. He soon after his graduation married Miss Susan Mary Williams, of Roxbury Mass., whose fortune was very large, and which added to his own, made him one of the wealthiest men in Baltimore. He has resided in this city since his marriage, attending to his business interests and agricultural pursuits. He had two children by this marriage, a son, Jerome Napoleon, born in 1830, and another son, Charles Joseph, born in 1852. The oldest of these sons entered Harvard College, where he remained for a short time, obtained an appointment at West Point, where he graduated high in his class in 1852. Having visited France, with his father, he received the favorable notice of Napoleon III., and resigning his commission in the service of the United States, he entered that of the French as sub-lieutenant in the army. He took part in the operations of the French and English allies in the Crimea, and served at the siege of Sebastopol in General Bosquet's division. For gallant and meritorious conduct he received a decoration from the Sultan. His appearance is military, but not Napoleonic, like that of his father, he being tall and slender.

Some years ago the present Emperor consented to a Conseil de Familie, to consider and settle the question as to the recognition of the Baltimore Bonapartes, and of course the decision was, as he desired, against it. It fully recognized by the court of France, it would have given Jerome of Baltimore precedence over his half-brothers and the Princes Mathilde, the children of Jerome's second marriage. The refusal of Pope Pius VII., to confirm the order of Napoleon I., declaring the American marriage null and void, is still maintained by the Papal court.

Mrs. Patterson Bonaparte never had an interview with her husband since his departure from her at Lisbon in 1806 but once in 1820, when during a visit to Europe, she was gazing on the treasures of art in the Pitti Palace, at Florence Italy, she met him vis a vis in one of the galleries. He turned to Mrs. Bonaparte No. 2, or rather the Princess de Monfort and remarked in an undertone, audible, however to our country woman, "that lady is my former wife."

During the reign of Louis Phillippe the deceased resided in Paris under the of Napoleon to the imperial purple he has been the honored guest of his cousin at the French Court, where his eldest son Jerome Napoleon, is attached, although not actually in the French army.

Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte has for the last few years suffered from that disease, of which death came more as a merciful release than a dreaded visitation.

In personal appearance he was singularly reminded the portraits of the first Emperor. He had the same features and stolid look characterized the greatest soldier of modern time, and when excited by feelings of either anger or pleasure he had the same fiery expression. He resembled Napoleon more than any of his family—the same shape of the head regularity of features, bronze countenance, dark eyes of peculiar tint, and a figure cast in the same square mould—and Louis Phillipe, during the time he was in Paris, found it requisite to use every precaution in police management to prevent an outbreak of popular feeling.

His Mother, who is 90 years of age, has all her faculties, and cherishes the hope, it is said that her grandson may yet attain to the position of Emperor of the French, which would present the singular anomaly of an American ruling France. During the late civil war in this country the deceased allied himself closely with the Federal interests.

Mrs. Sarah C. Williams, the mother in-law of Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, who resided with him, and born in feeble health for some time, but no immediate fear of death was felt by her friends.—It has been rather markable, soon after the dissolution of Mr. Bonaparte yesterday a member of the family proceeded to her room to inform her of the fact, she was found dead in her bed.

For the Gazette.

How a Man may do Right and yet be Wrong.

We have no wish nor inclination to interfere in the beautiful fight of our high born of the Star and the Journal. We confess to a deep interest in the contest, but we profess to be thoroughly impartial in our feelings towards the two combatants, so much so indeed, that we declare whichever gets the worse, we shall wish it had been the other. We were not a little startled to see the very object of all this shedding of precious print-ink step upon the arena, to see Helen herself come out from behind the walls of our Congressional Troy into the field where our Hector and Achilles are pummelling each other in such fierce style. Colonel Hambleton, our respected representative of the first district, and our esteemed fellow-citizen of Talbot, has thought it necessary to publish a letter in the Journal and Cecil Democrat, defending his course in voting for a continuance of the income tax, at a smaller rate per cent, and with a larger exemption, than that prescribed by the present law. He justifies his course, in this matter, on the ground of favoring the poor at the expense of the rich, of acting with good motives, of exercising his best judgment, in the absence of instructions, and of following or moving with sound members of the democratic party.

Now all this is very fine, but it is not democracy—like as the French officer, and with he witnessed the charge of the light brigade at Balaklava—it is very grand, but it is not war. Why surely, Col. H., would not lend his democratic vote towards the establishment of distinctions between man and man—to the branding this one as a pauper in the eye of the law, and that one as his privileged superior, although that superiority is only in the payment of a tax from which the other is exempt because of his poverty. Does he not catch a smell of the perfume that hangs to the skirts of an aristocracy? Ah! we had forgot, that in these latter days democracy affects the fondness of the flower of a nobility, and at their revolts at the reeking smells of the cabbage of laboring poor. May not the rich men—the distinguished 90,000—wear their tax receipt as a badge of nobility? Men have prided themselves upon something of much less value. Our income tax books may become another doomsday book, and he who has his name there enrolled may belong to another or due of nobility.

The Colonel in his letter has been so indiscret as to say the Income-tax law is constitutional. We regard this as almost a fatal blunder on his part. Can any law—we put it to him as a democrat—passed by a Republican Congress be constitutional? Has not every law, of any great importance, of the past nine or ten years been unconstitutional? Why did not Col. H. himself declare, but a few days ago, that a law to prevent fraudulent voting and other election abuses, was unconstitutional? No man can properly represent the democracy in Congress, who does not declare, without hesitancy or reserve, that any thing that has been done, that is now doing, or that may in the future be done by Republicans, is in direct contravention of, and antagonism to the plain letter of, the constitution.—We shall yet get to believe at last that the constitution itself is unconstitutional, if we listen to our democratic friends.

Another mistake, we take it, has been made by Col. H. in his letter. He speaks of his conscience. He knows well enough or he ought by this time, that this affords no rule of conduct for a democratic politician. Conscience indeed! That is a power in some parties and with many persons. With the Col. we know that it is very potent at the commanding in his private affairs. We believe he is in them is ruled by it; but when he thinks to carry his conscience into his party—his democratic party—he makes a woful mistake. Democrats, for leaders, want no such milk sops, as talk about conscience. They think as Brinsley Sheridan says in the play, that conscience has no more to do with politics than it has with gallantry—that in winning a mistress, or a place, one may be equally unscrupulous. They make a point, and think it witty, to ridicule the Republicans as belonging to a party of great moral ideas, to a party of corruptions. If Col. H. wishes to be a Democratic leader, a office holder he must not temper with such a dangerous thing as a conscience. Policy, expediency—party exigency, party success, these are the commanding motives of the democratic democracy—unremitted indeed, for it pays no such objects as conscience confined up to frighten the timid boneamps. There is one point which the Colonel makes, which has the true ring of democracy, viz "He says "we must legislate mainly for the benefit of the people, not their conscience." Now, this is genuine metal. The democrats do legislate for their people—and where they have power, most successfully too. We will give them this credit, that though their consciences are small, their pockets are very capacious, and their legislation is such as to satisfy both the one and the other. Col. H. is very pallied for a democratic politician, for he has the true legislative instinct he is neither unscrupulous nor greedy.

Yet another mistake has been made by Col. H., a mistake which like the last mentioned honest has the mends of all others except his personal friends. He says, in the absence of instruction he exercised his judgment. How came he to have an judgment without setting as a democratic legislator. He had no more right to this than his conscience.—Judgment and conscience are for detestable radicals. They have always acknowledged themselves to be possessed of these two devils, for there is no exorcism except adjournment, so the democratic party and getting or trying office therein. In the case of Col. H. the exorcism is not complete. He was too long a member of the old whig party, a party identify itself by those two demons so abhorred by the democrats. He was so long accustomed to think for himself, without the dictation of any master, that now he finds it exceedingly hard to divest himself of his old habits of independent thought.

Nothing has given us a stronger assurance that our imported fellow-citizen has lost his political death, for the democrats are determined to kill him off, for his political heresy in having a conscience and judgment, than the fact that he has taken to re-to its condition of early innocence. He is still fancying that he is an old line whig and like Sir John Falstaff, when dying, he will still be "A babbling of green fields."

What the democrats exact is obedience to orders, not discretion in the performance of duty. To be sure he may be followed, as did with Woodward, Kerr, Bridges, &c. But these gentlemen too, may be endowed with the fatal gifts which are so condemned by the party. You should have followed Fernando Wood, or Brooks, and men of their stamp. There you will neither find conscience nor judgment. They are the true exemplars of Democratic principles.—"A woman who deliberates is lost"—so the poet says. It is the same with democratic politicians, who thinks for himself is discarded. The proper way is for them to shut their eyes and follow their leaders.

But there is no necessity for all this contest. Our democratic friends have in their passionate fray forgotten that they may have no representative in Congress at all, from this district. It is likely Talbot may send a Representative to Washington, but he may not be the estimable gentleman that now holds his seat, but some other his near neighbor.

RAPHAEL.

A HORRIBLE AFFAIR—Child Eaten by a Panther.—We learn that a horrible affair took place last week on the Middle Fork river, in Randolph county, some fifteen or twenty miles from Beverly.—Two little boys, aged ten and six years, sons of Mr. Samuel Corrence, went out in the evening to drive home the cows. When but a short distance from the house they were attacked by a large panther. The oldest boy immediately gathered up the younger one in his arms, but the panther seized him and tore him loose. The boy seeing that he could not save his little brother, ran to the house.—The father hastened back with him, and when he got to the spot, found his child almost entirely devoured.—Parkersburg (West Va.) Gazette.

A new postal treaty with the North German Confederation will go into effect on the 1st of July, by which letter postage from the United States will be reduced to ten cents, via England, and seven cents direct.

An infant about a twelve month old, was murdered on Monday afternoon, near Boyerstown, by its nurse, a girl of thirteen.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

MADNESS! PARALYSIS! DEATH! may cease from using preparations for coloring the hair charged with acetate of lead and sulphur. You may know them by the heavy metallic sediment which has to be shaken up before the disgusting compound can be applied. The "Journal of Chemistry" says there are thirty of them in the market. There is but one dye in existence which contains no deleterious substance, and that is which has been carefully analyzed by Professor Chilton, and declared by him to contain no lead or any other hurtful ingredient. See his manuscript certificate, at Cristadoro's, 6 Astor House, New York.

Cristadoro's Hair Preservative, as a Dressing, acts like a charm on the hair after dyeing. Try it. June 18 1-m.

A RADICAL REVOLUTION.

Has been accomplish in hair dyes. The horrible compounds containg Lead, Salt and Sulpher are discarded. The leading chemist implore the public not use them, and Professor Chilton, whose reputation is second to that of no analyzed chemist in America, has recommended as a perfectly innocuous article, which may be used without fear. Remember, it is the only one that has been analyzed and found wholesome. Its effects are instantaneous, and the colors it imparts natural.

ASTOUNDING REVELATIONS.

Two scientific publications are in the field against the hair dyes of which lead is the basis. The New York Medical Gazette and The Journal of Chemistry, bitterly denounce them. Yet the hair may be safely dyed. Have you seen

PEREMPTORY

Trustee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate.

BY virtue of a Deed of Trust from Jonathan Leonard and wife, the undersigned, Trustees, will offer at public sale, to the highest bidder, in front of the Court House, in the town of Easton, on Tuesday, the 26th of July, between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock, P. M., all and singular, that Farm, or Plantation, or Tract of Land, known as

"Rich Park,"

situate on Island Creek, in Oxford Neck Talbot county, and containing the quantity of

of land, more or less, whereon Jonathan Leonard now resides.

This farm is one of the best in the county, eligibly and conveniently located, being directly upon the waters of Island Creek, which abounds in all the delicacies the salt water affords, fine oysters being bedded in front of the house, with a landing for large vessels immediately upon the shore, within one-and-a-half miles of the proposed new depot, on the line of the Maryland and Delaware Railroad, and within two miles of the town of Oxford. Churches, mills and school houses in the immediate neighborhood. The soil is most excellent, being admirably adapted to the growth of wheat, corn, grass and fruit. It is generally known as one of the BEST WHEAT FARMS in the county.

The improvements consist of a most SUBSTANTIAL BRICK

Dwelling House

with Kitchen, large Barn, Granary, large and commodious Stables, and TWO TENANT HOUSES on the premises.

The fencing is good, and there is

Wood and Timber

sufficient for the use of the farm.

Trustee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate,

NEAR EASTON.

BY virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Talbot county, sitting in equity, the undersigned, as Trustee, will offer at public sale, in front of the Court House, in Easton, on Tuesday, 28th of June, inst.,

that valuable farm adjoining the town of Easton, known as the

BENNY FARM,

containing the quantity of

46 ACRES,

3 Roods and 5 Perches

of land, more or less.

This farm has a good and comfortable

DWELLING HOUSE,

and all necessary

OUT BUILDINGS in good repair. It is within 500 yards of the northern limits of the town of Easton, and about one-half mile from the Depot of the Md. & Del. Railroad, one mile and a quarter of the public landing at Easton Point, and 2½ miles of the steamboat landing at Miles River. This farm is one of the most desirable in this vicinity, and affords advantages to the grower of vegetables rarely met with. The soil is fine, and easily cultivated.

—ALSO—

6 FINE GRASS LOTS,

adjoining the above, and the lots of Rd. Thomas, Capt. Hardcastle, Ed. Dawson and others, laid on the north side of Potter's Field, each containing the quantity of about more or less.

2 1-4 ACRES,

TERMS of SALE.

The terms of sale prescribed by the decree are—One-third of the purchase money in cash on the day of sale; the balance in equal instalments of twelve and eighteen months, with interest from day of sale; the deferred payments to be secured by the bond of the purchaser with security approved by the Trustee.—Stamps and title papers at the expense of the purchaser. On the payment of the whole purchase money, and not before, a good and sufficient deed in fee simple will be given.

PHILEMON T. KENNARD,
Trustee.

Coughs, Sore Throat, Etc.

No medicine or treatment can equal the powerful curative power of

Dr. Sims'

White Pulmonic Balsam:

It cures with a rapidity unequalled by any other remedy offered for Throat and Lung diseases. It is recommended by over 2,000 persons in Wilmington, and hundreds in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities and communities throughout the country. Mr. Pennington, of Wilmington, Illinois, writes that there is not (with a few exceptions) a family in that city who will be without it if possible to procure it. Such is its popularity wherever it is known—and this popularity arises from the fact that it universally cures all who use it. There is no case of CONSUMPTION, COUGH, SORE THROAT, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH, and other PULMONARY DISEASES, where this system is adopted, that this Balsam will not cure if administered according to directions. We guarantee it all we represent it to be, and invite a trial from the afflicted every where. Price, 50 cents, medium size, and $1 for large size bottle. Prepared only by
