BALTIMORE.

MONDAY, MARCH 10, 1862.

EVACUATION OF MURFREESBORO—THE FIRST MAIL FROM NASHVILLE.

Correspondence of the New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, March 4.—Murfreesboro, Tennessee, was also abandoned on or before the 1st. McCook's advance, on the 26th ult., was several miles beyond Nashville, marching to Murfreesboro. I trust we can redeem not only the central, but also the lower tier of Secession States in ninety days before the sickly yellow-fever season of the Gulf section.

General Buell will assure the people of Tennessee, as he has the citizens of Nashville, of safety and protection, both in their persons and property. General Andy Johnson is just the man to cooperate with Generals Buell and Grant in restoring Tennessee to her former condition.

The first train from Nashville arrived here yesterday. The railroad to Nashville is reported completed, with the exception of the bridge over the Cumberland, which, you know, was destroyed by Floyd on the 13th ult. It was valued at $250,000. The wire bridge, also destroyed then by his order, was worth $150,000. The citizens of Nashville will never forgive "the great thief."

Twenty-five hogsheads of tobacco were received here yesterday by railroad, being the first receipt of tobacco from Southern Kentucky since the time of its invasion. While loyal ladies here are toiling for our wounded, the Southern Rights ladies are toiling for their wounded and the Donelson prisoners. They have already sent hundreds of dollars and several new suits to Buckner. The loyal ladies of Louisville acknowledge the receipt of six boxes of hospital clothing and stores for the sick soldiers of Kentucky, from the "Women's Central Relief Association" of New York city, and of two boxes from Mrs. Dr. Parker and Mrs. George Robbins, of New York city. The last report of the loyal women of Bourbon sums up 382 articles of bedding and clothing, and countless sundries sent to the wounded at Donelson.

This city requests the Legislature to meet Kentucky's quota of the war tax with State bonds. The Senate's Exoriation bill passed the House yesterday—45 to 36.

TAXATION IN 1862 AND AFTERWARD.

The Chicago Tribune, a leading Republican paper, in a late issue, contained a letter from its Washington correspondent, which drew a very gloomy picture of our national finances. We make the following extract to show the tenor of the letter:

"Notwithstanding the repeated victories of our arms—each more decisive and more worthy of exaltation than its predecessor—there is a settled gloom covering the two subjects of slavery and finance. General Halleck's reproduction of his hateful order No. 3, and the sudden advance in the premium on gold, together with the large shipments of that article to Europe, foretell disaster in the lap of triumph. That slavery should be stronger the day after the Confederate armies are destroyed than ever it was before, and that universal bankruptcy and public repudiation should be the reward of the loyal States, is hardly a pleasant banquet for this generation, or a pleasant page of history for future ones. The ablest financiers in Congress are becoming convinced that nothing short of sweeping confiscation of Confederate property can save us from flat bankruptcy all around. The public debt, at the close of the fiscal year in June, 1862, will be not far from $750 000,000, on which the interest will be at least $50,000,000 per annum, and if we suppose the war virtually closed at that time, the increased military and naval force necessary to be maintained, over that of former years, will bring up the annual budget, exclusive of interest, to $120,000,000. Hence there must be raised by taxes and imposts about $170,000,000 per annum to keep the debt stationary. This would not be so hopeless a prospect if we could keep our specie at home, but events are daily proving that we can not fill the channels of trade with paper except at the cost of expelling our gold—a dollar of coin for every dollar of paper, till the former is all gone. The paper is depreciating pari passu, thus compelling the Government to pay more for every thing it has to buy than it did under the specie standard. The Government has to pay to-day one hundred cents for the same quantity of every thing it buys, that it formerly bought for ninety-five and one-half cents. All the yardsticks in the country have been cut off, all the pound weights clipped, and all the peck measures false-bottomed to the amount of 4¾ per cent., and this figure is constantly increasing. Thus the war is made more expensive than formerly and the difficulty of paying the public debt increased. If the war should be protracted till June, 1863, the debt will reach the enormous figure of $1,500,000,000. This is the estimate of Mr. Fessenden, the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, without, however, taking into account the increased cost of maintaining an army on a scale of inflated prices."

THE TAX BILL.—We find in a Boston paper the following estimate of the tax to each family of four persons of economical habits, arising from the revenue tariff, as reported:

From 200 lbs. Sugar, tariff		$5.00
" 6 lbs Tea,	" say	1.00
" 50 lbs. Coffee,	" say	2.00
" Spices,	" say	75
" Dried Fruit,	" say	1.00
" 4 bbls. Flour, tax		80
" Meat—say ½ a beeve, 2 hogs, 1 mutton		50
" 2 gals. Spirits, (alcohol, whiskey &c.)		60
" 50 lbs. Soap, tax		25
" 12 gals Kerosene Oil, tax		1.20
" Hardware, Crockery, &c., tax, say		50
" Clothing, say $150, at 5 per cent.		4.50
" Silver Plate, tax		50
" 1 Silver Watch, tax		50
Railroad travel tax, say		1.00
		$20.00

An average of $5 per head; this, multiplied by the 32,000,000 population of the country, gives us the round sum of $160,000,000 revenue. This estimate is a very moderate one, and only applies to the necessaries of life. There are various other articles which are considered indispensable to a family which are not included in the estimate. As the Southern States are not yet subdued, and no revenue can be derived yet from them, we must take the population of the loyal States as that which must bear the burden for the present.—Twenty-two millions of people to bear an annual taxation of $160,000,000—some estimates make the sum necessary much higher—will be equal to a tax of over $7 per head to each member of a family.—This tax will reach every one, for being laid upon every article of consumption, it cannot be avoided.

THE CONFEDERATE DEFENCES BELOW COLUMBUS.

Between Columbus and Memphis the Confederates have erected no less than five somewhat formidable fortifications. A strong water-battery, mounting twelve 32 and 42-pounders, at Hickman, was erected to protect the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad, connecting at Union City with the Mobile and Ohio, and at McKenzie, fifty miles. But the same necessity which demanded the evacuation of Columbus applies with equal force to Hickman. Island Number Ten, forty miles below Columbus, is mentioned as one of the points of defence much southeast, with the Memphis and Ohio Railroads, relied on by the Confederates. But we doubt whether at this late day they will attempt the construction there of the works requisite to withstand an attack from our gun and mortar boats. The Memphis Appeal, in referring to the probability of a stand being made at this island, says:

"Island No. Ten is a strong position, not far from Hickman, Kentucky, about forty-five miles below Columbus, and one hundred and fifteen miles above Fort Pillow, and one hundred and eighty-five miles above Memphis. It completely commands the Mississippi River for miles above, and can be so fortified with heavy guns as to be made impregnable against any river attack. As it is demonstrated in the late battles at Forts Henry and Donelson that the Federal gunboats are not invulnerable to rifled cannon and heavy columbiads, the position is well chosen, and with the aid of a good land force can be maintained against the approach of Foote's flotilla."

The Confederates have next an extensive work near the State line separating Kentucky from Tennessee, upon which five hundred negroes, under the superintendence of an able engineer officer, are said to have been set to work in September. Fort Pillow, a short distance below this fort, is a strong earthwork, with bastions, walls and trenches, mounting thirty guns on barbette. At New Madrid, Jeff. Thompson has raised redoubts and embankments, but of no very formidable character.

The strongest fortification in the possession of the Confederates above Memphis is Fort Randolph, sixty miles above Memphis, and one hundred and eighty-eight below Cairo. This is a very strong position. It is built upon the third Chickasaw bluff, more than one hundred feet above the river, and immediately south of Island No. 34, the lower part of which commands the three mouths of the Hatchie river, a stream (navigable at good stages) that empties into the Mississippi just above the town of Randolph, at the upper edge of the bluffs. These bluffs form natural parapets for batteries, and command a view of the Mississippi river for six miles each way. By silencing whatever guns may be placed on the island, iron-clad boats, in the present condition of the Lower Mississippi, might enter the northern mouth of the Hatchie out of the range of Fort Randolph. The town of Randolph, near which the fort stands, consists of half a dozen or so dilapidated frame houses, and is approached in the rear by several good roads, but the country behind it being full of ravines and gorges is capable of being fortified to an almost indefinite extent. The position, however, is of no manner of use or benefit, except to dispute the navigation of the river. It has no railroad communications, and, as an army stationed there would have to depend on the river exclusively for the transportation of supplies, it would not require long to starve it out.

Memphis has been strongly fortified. Nature has done much for it in the way of defences. The city is situated immediately below the mouth of Wolf river, on the fourth Chickasaw bluff, from thirty to forty feet above high-water mark. Extending in front is a beautiful terrace or esplanade, nearly a thousand feet wide, forming a glacis of sufficient compass to accommodate a large army facing the landing. Heavy cannon have been mounted upon the most eligible sites about the city, and the exposed portions greatly strengthened by skillful engineers.

But the same military necessity which required the evacuation of Bowling Green and Nashville will in due time compel the Confederate troops to withdraw from Memphis. It can be approached from the Tennessee river by two lines of railroad. We look for its speedy occupation by Federal troops, but not until after one bloody and hotly-contested battle.

EFFECT OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.—Washington, March 8.—The President's message respecting slavery in the States occasions much debate and anxiety among the pro slavery members of Congress. It is believed that it will carry the Confiscation and Emancipation bills now before Congress triumphantly through. Several conservative Republicans were hesitating to vote for emancipation in this District, but the message from the President shows them that Mr. Lincoln is in favor of the measure before the Senate, and it will pass. The significant part of the document is in one of the last paragraphs, and the Slave-State men here regard it as openly threatening to destroy the institution of slavery unless the resistance to the Government should cease within a very short time.—The President coincides with his Secretary of War on the subject of slavery, and Mr. Stanton openly declares his purpose to be to overthrow slavery, if thereby the cause of the Union and a legitimate government can be aided.—Special Despatch to the New York Evening Post.

THE CONFEDERATE FORCES ON THE POTOMAC.—At Centreville there are 55,000 infantry, 11,000 cavalry, and 120 pieces of cannon, light and heavy. Behind the batteries along the Potomac there are from 12,000 to 15,000 men. At Gum Springs, between Leesburg and Centreville, there are three regiments of infantry, with a squadron of cavalry. At Leesburg there are three regiments of infantry, one battery, and 400 cavalry. At a point five miles south of Brentville, that is to say some ten miles south of Manassas, there is one brigade of infantry and 3,500 men. These forces do not include any part of Jackson's army, forming the Confederate left wing, against which General Banks is operating. At Manassas there is not a single full regiment, whole companies and even regiments having gone home on furloughs of ten, twenty and thirty days. All the troops from South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee and Louisiana, have gone home within the past two or three weeks. Very few of the men whose term of service has expired are reenlisting.

DIED.

On the 8th instant, PATRICK CAUGHY, aged 92 years, a native of county Down, Ireland, and for the last 68 years a resident of Baltimore city.

His friends, and the friends of the family, are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from his late residence on this (Monday) morning, at 10 o'clock.

The majority of these children had but one parent living, many had neither and most of them could neither read nor write. During the past month the Agent has received between sixty and seventy letters from persons having children of the society, all of whom express themselves as exceedingly gratified with them. The Society has a demand for twelve children, mostly girls, for Queen Anne's county, and the Agent is making up a party to go there.
