BALTIMORE.

TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 1862.

NEW PUBLICATION.

We acknowledge the receipt of the first four numbers of a periodical now in course of publication by G. P. Putnam, New York, edited by Frank Moore, author of the Rebellion Record, and entitled, "Notable Men of the Time"—being biographical sketches of prominent military and naval men, statesmen and others, who have distinguished themselves in the American Crisis of 1861 62. The numbers already published contain portraits, engraved upon steel, of Dupont, Winthrop, Weller, Halleck, McCall, Burnside, Gov. Andrew and Joseph Holt. The agent in this city is A. H. Stockman, 41½ German street.

From Jas. S. Waters we are in receipt of "The National Quarterly Review," for March, 1862, edited by Edward J. Sears, who is also the publisher of the same.

NO MORE PASSES TO THE SOUTH.—We are requested to state, that for the present no more passes to go to the South will be granted by Major-General Dix.

A DISAPPOINTMENT.—A large number of persons assembled at the Holliday Street Theatre last evening to witness the performance of Mr. Forrest, but by some misunderstanding that gentleman failed to reach the city in time to appear.

FROM WASHINGTON.

From the National Republican of Yesterday.

FIGHT NEAR FAIRFAX.

We learn that a skirmish between some Union forces in reconnoissance and a party of rebel cavalry, yesterday, resulted in taking thirteen rebel prisoners. We have no further particulars.

RAISING THE POTOMAC BLOCKADE.

We have the gratification to state that General Hooker officially reports that all the enemy's batteries in front of his lines are entirely abandoned, and their guns spiked. Some of the guns of which we have taken possession appear to be valuable pieces. This virtually opens the Potomac, and raises the so-called blockade of the Potomac.

[The above refers more probably only to the abandonment of Cockpit Point. The official telegram published yesterday says nothing of guns being either taken or spiked.]

NEW MADRID.

The Confederate force at this point is not supposed to be a part of that which evacuated Columbus. Southeastern Missouri swarms with Confederates, and, indeed, their possession there has not, until recently, been disturbed, being covered by the Confederate occupation of Columbus.

COLUMBUS.

The extraordinary success of the Confederates in evacuating Columbus without the loss of a man, provokes many criticisms upon the management of General Halleck. In order to give him the benefit of the defence made by his friends, we copy the following account of his arrangements to capture the Confederate force, from the Chicago Tribune, a paper in his interest:

"Gen. Pope, in Missouri, left Commerce, but a few miles above Cairo, and marched his strong column to New Madrid, a point on the Mississippi river due east of Union City, on the Missouri side. A large force from Paducah, and withdrawn from the Cumberland, proceeded to Mayfield, and thence the advance directly westward upon Columbus. Nor was this all, for a third strong column of troops, flushed with victory on the Tennessee and Cumberland, seized, or were about to seize, Union City, cutting off retreat by railroad to Memphis. Thus it will be seen that the Confederates were cooped like rats in a trap, and had they remained, could have been overhauled at leisure. They wisely withdrew."

If, in addition to these arrangements, a force of gunboats had been on the spot, the enemy's retreat by the river, without great loss, would seem to have been impossible.

Special Wash. Correspondence of Philadelphia Enquirer.

ARMY SURGEONS.

The monster petition from the cities and towns of New England, in favor of the introduction of homœopathy into the army, stands in its frame work in one corner of the room of the Senate's Committee on Military Affairs, and is certainly not a homœopathic dose of autography. Petitions are now beginning to come in, praying that "botanic" physicians and surgeons be officially recognized, and the "Sanitary Commission" are earnestly at work to secure the appointment of Sanitary Directors. On Monday a party will go before the Military Committee, and their President, Rev. Mr. Bellows, of New York, will explain their desires.

THE ENGINES AND WRECKS AT MARTINSBURG.

The engines and cars burnt by the Confederates at Martinsburg, last summer, are now being removed to Cumberland and Piedmont for repairs. The track will soon be cleared, and the road thrown open in March. The company are now building over four hundred new cars, to replace those destroyed, and expect to be fully supplied with motive power and cars to carry on all their business without delay. The region in possession of the Confederates so many months will always be of great interest to the curiosity-seekers, and, with the natural romance of the route over the mountains, will make one of the most attractive routes pleasure-hunters can find.

POTOMAC FISHERIES.

It is evident that the Potomac fishermen expect the shad and herring to "run the blockade," as they are leasing at high rates all the fishing grounds above the Confederate batteries.

Special Despatches to the New York Tribune.

MASON AND SLIDELL'S PROPOSITIONS FOR RECOGNITION.

The slavery question has new interest from the letters received last night from Europe. It is now understood that Messrs. Mason and Slidell have made propositions in London and Paris calculated to enlist the sympathies of religious people and of liberals. They offer as the condition of recognition—

1st. The protection of the marriage relation among slaves.

2d. The removal of all statutory impediments to manumission.

3d. Prospective emancipation.

Of course free trade is thrown in to boot.

FIRE IN ALEXANDRIA.

At 2 o'clock this morning a fire occurred on King street in Alexandria City, resulting in the total destruction of four large brick buildings, and involving a loss of about $98,000, as follows:

Messrs. Coles & Ramsey, grocers, lost $40,000; Messrs. Gillin, Ackin & Brown, tailor's goods, $6,000; Messrs. Merwin & Bray, firearms, $20,000; H. Cook & Co., on stock of drugs and buildings, $40,000; Isaac Eichberg, clothiers, $3,000; Stewart & Corse, on building and stock dry goods, $20,000; Mr. Taylor, on building, $10,000; loss of other occupants and storekeepers in neighborhood, $10,000. A new York concert saloon on the second floor fell among the ruins.

THE POTOMAC ARMY.

The President has determined to perfect the organization of the Army of the Potomac by dividing it into five corps d'armee, commanded by the senior Generals of division, namely, Major General Banks; Brigadier Generals in the Regular Army—Sumner and McDowell; Brigadier Generals of Volunteers—Heintzelman and Keyes. The two last named outrank all the other Brigadier Generals of Volunteers. Next to them on the Army register, stand the names of Generals Andrew and Fitz John Porter, and below them, again, those of Generals Franklin, McCall, Hooker and Blenker. General Scott, who was always averse to what he called "newfangled notions," and who had never commanded an army sufficiently large to admit of a division into several bodies, thirty or forty thousand strong, opposed the organization of corps d'armees while he was General-in-Chief. Upon his retirement it was supposed that General McClellan, who, up to that time, had been strongly in favor of an organization, the value of which he now admits, would at once constitute them, and at one time he did, according to common report, at the time he did, whom he desired to put in command. Constitutents have corps which he was about to assume, on various pretexts, or two of those then named the President, which it would be injurious to his Generals, seconded by the Select Committee on the Conduct of the War, desired the organization of the army to be perfected—so, and not announcing his determination to the Cabinet, and consulting no one except Secretary Stanton until the several commanders had been designated. Every one of the objects that could be effected by this division is accomplished by the assignment of Gens. Banks, Heintzelman, Sumner, McDowell, and Keyes to the corps. While the separate corps will be most ably commanded, the conclusion of the war will get neither wrong nor dishonor from politics learned at the feet of Breckinridge and religion sucked from the New York Observer.

In our issue of this morning will be found the opening spring advertisement of that old and extensive wholesale Bonnet Establishment of Messrs. Armstrong, Caton & Co., Baltimore street, near Charles. Notwithstanding the very depressed condition of trade, these gentlemen, with their accustomed enterprise and energy, have opened a large, varied, and general assortment of Bonnets, Ribbons, Flowers, &c., unsurpassed in style, beauty and elegance by any former season.

Having selected and purchased their stock for cash, with great care, and being enabled to offer greater inducements this season to purchasers, they invite the entire trade to call and examine their stock, knowing that it has been selected with that care, from European markets, which cannot fail to please the taste of the most fastidious.
