THE TOBACCO TAX IN MARYLAND.

The Baltimore correspondent of the New York Post writes as follows. The ignorance displayed by the writer is only equalled by his impudence:

I see that Kenjucky and Maryland are up in arms against the proposed tobacco tax, and their planters of the weed talk as if they were to pay it, and not the consumer. Thus is revived the old fortyfable theory of Calhoun, who insisted that the cotton planters paid the whole of the national taxes collected under the customs duties system. These slaveholders—for it is they who are making this fuss—seem to think the world was made for their especial benefit. Not content with robbing their slaves of their wages, they are unwilling that the product of the slaves' unpaid labor should contribute a single dollar to pay the expenses of the war which their bloody heads are waging against the integrity of the nation. Nay, they do not come to Congress with reasons on their lips for opposing the proposed tax, but they come with the swaggering air of bullies, and, like their predecessors, they hector, insult, abuse and threaten, if their demands are not complied with. I hope Congress will pay no more heed to their blustering than to the bluster of the March winds around the Capitol. Look at the heavy tax on tobacco in European countries. Is there any less consumption there of the weed? Not a bit of it. Those countries tax this luxury enormously, and, in some cases, they get almost half their entire revenue therefrom, and yet no lover of tobacco complains. It is true these very planters used to have the insolence to assign foreign governments for daring to tax tobacco thus heavily, and to insist that it was they, and not the consumer, that paid this tax. It is time that such insufferable dictation should be put an end to.

The same profound reasoner thus refers to Maryland and the slavery question:

Tony Kennedy, our Senator, Saulsbury, of Delaware, Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, the Baltimore Clipper and its Washington letter writer, Henry Hardy, are in the agonies of dissolution, as the hour draws near to kill their idol, negro slavery, in the District of Columbia. They are suffering terribly under "negro on the brain." You will have seen their howling and spasmodic utterances. Kennedy predicts the growth of grass in the streets of Baltimore if some three thousand slaves are set free in the District of Columbia, and yet he admits that slavery is doomed in Maryland. Nice logician he! Henry Hardy, the correspondent of the Clipper, an Englishman, abuses without stint the whole of Congress who are going to vote for the abolition of slavery in the District; but the best joke of the season is the appeal of the Clipper to President Lincoln to veto the bill and turn his back upon the principles of his life—a paper that, during the Presidential canvass and long afterwards, denounced the President as a filthy abolitionist! But the hour of all these idolators of negro slavery draws to a close. May it speedily come! is the earnest wish of every truly loyal man. Mr. Hickman was right when he said that Maryland and Kentucky stood in the Union to avoid a worse fate. The loyal men of Baltimore—the men who prefer the Union to slavery—are more astounded at the speech of Senator Willey, from Virginia, against the District bill, than at Senator Carlile's hostility to it; but it is only another proof of what we may expect if the serpent, now scotched, is not slain outright.

THE COTTON SUPPLY IN ENGLAND.

Manchester Correspondence New York Times.

Your readers will be quite surprised to know that the importations of cotton into England have been actually of greater value in 1861 than in 1860, and the American supply being in the year 1861 valued at £27,000,000, and for the year 1860, £30,000,000, shows a falling off of only £3,000,000 for 1861—whilst the East Indian supplies have risen from £300,000, 1860, to £900,000, 1861. The American reader will, however, find the explanation of the above as to American cotton in the fact that it is since the close of the year 1861 that the crop of 1861 should begin to arrive in market.—Hence we find that since the 31st December, 1861, the amount of cotton received from the United States is less than the one-hundredth part of the receipts for the corresponding period of the previous year, and the amount received in the last month (February) was only the two-hundredth part of what might have been expected but for the blockade. Thus we see that it is only just now that the actual pinch is upon the manufacturer and cotton dealer. Up to this time they have in fact suffered no material damage. To be sure, more than 100,000 poor operatives have been thrown upon the poor rates, by stoppage of mills in this county of Lancaster; but the great proprietors congratulate each other, quietly, that in view of their previous over productions, and the Indian and other Eastern markets glutted with cotton fabrics, that the shortening of time or stoppage of mills, in consequence of American difficulties has really been a advantage to them, and will probably prevent a crisis from excessive manufacture, which must have soon overtaken them, and in which both master and men would have suffered much worse than they have done.

This they say of the past; but this view of the case throws no light upon the future; and Manchester, under its present organization of labor and machinery, can no more live without American cotton than it can live and work without coal from the mines of England.

From the Baltimore American, March 29th

The Secession Prisoners in Baltimore.

We regret to find that some mistakes and misrepresentations have gotten afloat in this community with reference to the reception and treatment which the Rebel prisoners from Winchester have received at the jail. Unlike those who have occasionally figured here at the hotels as the representatives of the "oldest families," the "F. F. V.'s," from the old Dominion, these poor fellows have fared but badly, so far as any practical benevolence is concerned. When they arrived here—and in a most deplorable and destitute condition, too—they mustered amongst themselves some eighteen hundred dollars in Confederate funds, which, of course, was of no value as money here. An effort was made by some sympathetic friends to dispose of it in the character of souvenirs or remembrances of the war; but after beating up secession quarters thoroughly, the whole amount realized was only two hundred dollars in good money, the remaining sixteen hundred of trash being returned to them. Destitute of almost everything, but particularly of a change of linen, an effort was made by some of those more especially in sympathy with them to supply what was needed; but somehow the secessionists have not, in the case of these poor fellows, come to the rescue, not having furnished more than one garment in five of the many wanted.

As to the charge that they are being feted and wined by Baltimore Secessionists, and that Major Ludlow should treat them with more severity, the facts are that but one lady came with a couple of bottles of champagne, but this was refused; and only three passes have been furnished to those who applied to see them, whilst those who from curiosity or a worse motive have sought to visit them have been denied entrance. The public may rely upon this statement as comprising the essential facts in the case.

Now, since Secessia has actually turned the cold shoulder on these misguided men, who have come to suffering, we venture to appeal to the Union people of Baltimore in their behalf. We shall not be accused of Secession sympathies, we are quite sure, and so we trust that in making an appeal on the score of mere humanity, something may be realized to render their situation—miserably destitute as they are—at least toleerable. Had they come brilliantly heralded, as have others who have figured here, who have been feted and toasted because supposed to be in affinity with Upper-tendom, such an appeal would not have been needed; but perhaps it is not surprising that with Secessia in a condition of collapse, generally, this portion of the anticipated "Army of Deliverance" meet with but a cold reception.

We trust, then, that our citizens will do what they can under the Scriptural injunction—"Love your enemies." That any Secession sympathies or sentiments will be subserved by so doing is quite impossible under the right but kindly supervision which has been adopted by the officers of the Government in properly guarding them from improper influences, and it would not be creditable to our city that any of any class were allowed to suffer for want of the common necessaries of life whilst shut out from all chance, by the fortunes of war, from procuring needed relief. Supplies of clothing received for the prisoners, we understand, will be carefully distributed according to the wishes of the donors, and should be furnished at once, as we learn it is the intention of the Government to remove them to Fort Delaware before Monday next.

Messrs. Editors—The above, which denies that any relief was afforded to the Confederate prisoners, "so far as any practical benevolence is concerned" on the part of native Virginians residing in Baltimore, and, if you please, "Southern sympathisers," from my own knowledge, I unhesitatingly pronounce an infamous, malicious and unmitigated lie; and I hold myself personally responsible for what I say. My name being endorsed upon this communication, you are at liberty to show it to the proprietors of the American.

JUSTICE.

The President has officially recognized Jose Maria Duran as Consul-General of the Mexican Republic, to reside at New York.

MARRIED.

On the 27th instant, by Rev. Dr. Dunnit, GEORGE W. BURNS to JENNIE M. LOCKINGTON, both of this city.
On the 27th instant, by Rev. Dr Martin, WM. W. BONE, of Baltimore county, to MARY M. BUCKINGHAM, of Howard county.
On Tuesday morning, 25th instant, at the First English Lutheran Church, by Rev. John McCron, DAVID STREET to Miss MARY E. MEITART, both of this city.
At Washington, on the 27th, by the Rev. Mr. McCauley, Mr. T. MCKEEE, of Baltimore, to Miss SALLIE R. EDMONSTON, of Washington, D. C.

DIED.

On Friday night, the 28th instant, Mrs. MARY MARGARET MIDDELKAUFF, aged 49 years, 10 months, and 21 days, wife of John A. Middelkauff, of this city.
Never were the value of religion, and the calmness and serenity of the Christian's death more strikingly and beautifully exemplified than in the death of this estimable lady. In early life she proclaimed her faith in Christ by uniting herself with the German Reformed Church, of which she was a consistent member to the day of her death. And that God, to whom she devoted herself in the spring time of life, was her hope and consolation in her dying hour. She was of an amiable and gentle disposition, beloved by all her associates, and her loss will be a source of poignant grief to all. Of her relations in the home circle it is unnecessary to speak further than to say that she was one of the best of mothers and wives. She leaves behind her a devoted husband and children, whose loss is irreparable; but they have the consolation of knowing that their loss is her eternal gain.
On the 28th instant, THOMAS C. MORRIS, in the 79th year of his age.
On the 28th March, 1862, at his residence, No. 28 Essex street, Canton, WILLIAM WILEY, at the advanced age of 78 years. He was one of the Old Defenders of 1814 who stood nobly at his post, and belonged to the 6th Regiment of Volunteers.
On the 27th instant, after a severe illness, ROBERT WHITEFORD, in the 68th year of his age.
On the 28th instant, PHILIP BRADLEY, in the 39th year of his age.
