MARYLAND MATTERS.

From the last published letter of the Baltimore correspondent of the New York Post, we make the annexed extracts:

MARYLAND MEN IN CONGRESS.

You will notice that Leary, Crisfield and Webster, of the Maryland delegation in Congress, dodged the vote on the emancipation bill for the District of Columbia. This means more than meets the eye. These gentlemen have shown a clear appreciation of the future on the subject of slavery in this State. They see that it is speedily doomed, and they have rightly refused to let their voices be heard against the extinction of the curse at the national capital. Mr. Crisfield has one hundred slaves, and represents the lower district on the Eastern Shore, and he is now in a position to lead the rising anti-slavery hosts that are already beginning to stir in our State. This is also true of Messrs. Webster and Leary, though I believe they are not large slaveholders. The vote of May and Calvert does not surprise anybody; it would have been a miracle for either of these persons to vote for liberty to the slave anywhere; but the vote of Frank Thomas against the bill grieves and shames his Republican friends in this State. His bold and manly stand against the Confederate cause and its corner-stone, slavery, at the Front Street Theatre in this city last fall, just one year after the Republicans were mobbed in the same house by the very men who applauded him to the skies, had won the heart of every anti-slavery man in Maryland; and we looked to him to carry our standard forward in the future; but shortly after Congress met in December he began to waver, and all through the winter and spring he was found voting with the pro-slavery side of the House on every question that looked to the real suppression of the rebellion, and he now has enrolled his name among the thirty-nine upholders of slavery at the capital of the Republic. These are indeed the times that try what men are made of. Western Maryland, anti-slavery by instinct and interest, will have to look for some other leader in the coming conflict between slavery and freedom. She will find him.

EXCESSIVE PRICE OF CANDY IN BALTIMORE.

Bishop Whittingham was outwitted yesterday in Mount Calvary and St. Paul's churches. They are the chief seats of secessionism and rebellion, and to avoid the offence, to their ears polite which the Bishop's recent prayer would afford if uttered in their hearing, it was given out that the Bishop's service would be held at eleven o'clock, and Divine service at twelve meridian. Of course, none of the faithful went to the Bishop's service, and the prayer was read to empty benches. At twelve Mount Calvary bell rang forth most violently the hour for Divine service, and the pro-slavery and rebellious Christians poured into their cushioned seats, overjoyed at their escape from being obliged to thank God for Federal victories. In Grace church Dr. Coxe took the bull by the horns, and announced that he should comply with the Bishop's order, telling the congregation that those who did not choose to participate in the service were at liberty to retire, when instantly there was such a rustling of crinoline doorward that it seemed like the rushing of a young gale. More than half the assembly vacated their seats. Dr. Coxe has never failed to meet the issue boldly, when presented, always taking the side of the Government. He it was who refused to administer the Sacrament once last winter, telling his congregation that their frame of mind was such as to forbid the celebration.

A SHARPSHOOTER'S STORY.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM ONE OF BERDAN'S NEW YORK SHARPSHOOTERS.

We find in the Albany Evening Journal a long letter from Wm. L. Sankey, a member of Company B of Berdan's 1st regiment of Sharpshooters, now on duty before Yorktown. We copy a few passages:

SHARP PRACTICE ON THE MARCH.

When we arrived at Big Bethel our regiment was sent ahead to reconnoitre, and we had to march through a horrible Virginia swamp for about five miles, when we discovered eight Confederate batteries commanding the road. We waited until the whole force came up, and reported progress. We were all pretty tired, as we had marched about fifteen miles with our heavy knapsacks, and the day being very warm the perspiration rolled off us in streams. General Porter ordered a company of sharpshooters to go and take the principal of the batteries. Colonel Berdan called for Company B, made a short speech, saying that he had more confidence in us than any other company, and gave us the honor of the first brush. Well, we started, tired as we were, and proceeded to within about a quarter of a mile of the battery. The Confederates perceiving us, sent a few shells, which passed harmlessly over our heads and exploded a short distance from us. The shells made a very loud noise, and when we heard them whizzing toward us, we all dropped flat on the ground and thus escaped. We immediately deployed as skirmishers and closed in towards the fort. There were only two pieces of artillery there, and as fast as a head would appear over the earth-work our boys would pick him off. As we all took cover behind stumps and other friendly projections, the Confederates could not see anything to shoot at, and seemed to think it high time to be off. They hitched up the horses to the cannon and left, we could not tell how. There was about a hundred cavalry just behind the embankment, and they took to the road at an alarming speed. Most of them threw one leg over the saddle and laid the other side of their horses, but when we commenced to fire upon them, we left many an empty saddle. I fired five shots, and am well satisfied that I finished the career of two Confederates. It got so smoky that we could not tell whether our shots took effect or not. The enemy must have thought there was a large body of us, as we each had a five-shooter. The rifles did good execution that day.

COL. BERDAN BURNED OUT.

In front of Yorktown we built huts for ourselves and slept soundly, I assure you, for we were all very tired. The Colonel slept in the hollow of an immense tree, which from some reason or other caught fire about twelve o'clock, and as a number of our boys were sleeping around the foot of it, we were roused out and forced to make our beds elsewhere. The tree burned for several hours, making a very large blaze, which caused General Porter to ride over to see what the matter was.

A RECONNOISSANCE.

The Confederate batteries around here number 42 and surround us in the shape of a horse-shoe. Yesterday was a nasty rainy day, and this is about the same. There is nothing of importance going on, only now and then a few shots are exchanged between the Confederate batteries and our gunboats on the York river. Yesterday about eighty picked men of our regiment were sent out with General McClellan to reconnoitre. They have not yet returned.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE EMANCIPATION BILL.

From the Boston Courier, April 16.

The New York Times seems to think that the "divergency" between the provisions of the Emancipation bill for the District and the recorded opinions of the President are "not so serious as to influence Mr. Lincoln to defeat the bill." How this may prove is yet to appear; but the divergency is complete in the most essential particulars. In the Illinois Legislature, in 1837, Mr. Lincoln was one of two members who signed a protest against certain resolutions, and in that protest declared that, although Congress had the power to abolish slavery in the District, it "ought not to be exercised unless at the request of the people of said District." This bill totally disregards their wishes. In 1849, Mr. Lincoln introduced a bill into Congress providing for a submission of this question to the votes of the District, the matter to be determined according as the majority of the inhabitants should vote. This bill takes the question altogether out of their hands. The measure proposed by Mr. Lincoln provided full compensation to the owners; this bill assigns only arbitrary and limited payment. Mr. Lincoln has just affixed his signature to a resolution recommended by himself, in regard to emancipation, showing that his opinions are unchanged as to compensation, the wishes of owners, and indeed recommending specifically gradual emancipation, and this in reference to the colonization of the blacks. This bill makes the liberation immediate and unconditional. We can hardly conceive of more thorough divergency than between its provisions and Mr. Lincoln's long entertained opinions, so recently again emphatically expressed. The divergency amounts to absolute antagonism.

GENERAL McCLELLAN.

From the New York World, April 17.

The intelligent and loyal people of the North will shudder to hear that General McClellan is still the object of a vindictive and jealous hostility—that his military operations are crippled by those in power, and his military rank and place coveted by those who have only the prestige of defeat. These schemers, civil and military, had better be warned in time. The people will suffer no further injustice to one upon whom already so much injustice has been wreaked. His patience and their silence had better not be misconstrued. They will be avenged upon the man or men who have made, and are still making, the good of the nation and the success of the army subordinate to their own selfish ambition. It had better be understood that he will not succeed to Mr. Lincoln's place in 1864 who has made the most proclamations, nor he be the general commanding who has made the most military blunders and incurred the worst defeats.

DELIVERY OF LETTERS IN LONDON.—The London City Delivery employs 1,500 letter carriers, 20 mail men with horse and cart, and 600 sub-postmasters. The city is divided into ten districts, and hourly deliveries are made. The utmost punctuality is observed in every part of the operations, and no removals of employees are made except for cause. The system, in its working, is one of the most perfect as well as the most simple that could be devised.

MELANCHOLY DEATH.—Frederick Hamburg, a citizen of Uniontown, on Thursday morning last was found on the road near Dallas' mill, frozen to death. He was, perhaps, about fifty years of age, and of intemperate habits. He left a wife and several children.—Carroll County (Md.) Democrat.

RELIABLE NEWS.

BALTIMORE, March 29, 1862.

Mr. Geo. Pearson—Dear Sir: Being troubled with a severe SORE THROAT and Cold (which settled on my lungs), I tried your MEDICATED TAR DROPS, and can speak very flatteringly of their having relieved me in a few hours, and curing me in three or four days. I cheerfully recommend your justly celebrated Tar Drops to all similarly affected, who will find them pleasant, simple, very efficacious, and the cheapest remedy I ever used. Yours, very truly,
