WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

ARRIVAL OF THE HOSPITAL BOAT D. A. JANUARY—THE SICK AND WOUNDED—SCENES ON BOARD.

The steamer D. A. January arrived at our wharf last night, from Pittsburg, with several hundred of the wounded and sick.

Among the wounded is Captain Wm. Copp, of the 9th Indiana, a relative of Samuel Copp, Jr., of this city. He was in Gen. Nelson's division, which arrived on the battle-ground Sunday night, and fought through Monday. He says there is no doubt of the death of Gen. Bragg in Monday's fight. He heard it from three Confederate prisoners. He says also that Johnston, the so-called Provisional Governor of Kentucky, is dead. He died as he lay within six feet of Capt. Copp, on board the Hannibal. He was shot through the loins — Van Dorn, with a part of his forces, is represented as having reached the battle-field on Monday. The Confederates expected a reinforcement of thirty regiments, but only got three. They were strengthened by ten regiments on Monday. The whole Confederate army in the battle was one hundred and twenty-three regiments, or about 75,000 men. These facts Capt. Copp obtained from a brigade quartermaster, named Winternuth, who was taken prisoner. Our total killed and wounded are now estimated at 8,000, and that of the Confederates as about the same or more. They carried off many of their wounded on Sunday night, while ours remained on the field. Gen. Wallace, of Illinois, at last accounts, was still living, with slight hopes of his recovery.

The D. A. January is in charge of Dr. A. H. Hoff, Brigade Surgeon, who deserves the highest credit for his efficiency and his constant attention and kindness to his patients. The boat is kept very cleanly, and the wounded seemed to be very comfortable, indeed, though a majority of the cases were of a severe character. This latter may be inferred from the fact that he has been compelled to make eleven thigh amputations since the boat has been coming from Pittsburg. We passed through the cabin and along the guards of the boat frequently, and the only indication of suffering that fell upon our ears was the occasional faint cry for water. To the eye, however, evidences of the terrible nature of the ordeal through which our brave soldiers have passed are not wanting. Here and there along the wards the faces of the slightly wounded might be seen in the repose of welcome sleep, but in the countenances of a large majority traces of extreme pain and suffering were plainly visible. Yet they bore their terrible afflictions with stout and resolute hearts, cheered and sustained by the kind words and promises of the surgeon, who, as he moved quietly along, was watched by them with the greatest solicitude.

As we first entered the cabin, we were struck by the pallid and ghastly face of one of the poor fellows stretched upon the floor at our feet. As we passed him, he faintly begged for water. He breathed with great labor and was suffering, as the Doctor told us, with some internal injury. In half an hour later we saw him again, the Doctor bending over him and trying to get him to tell his name. It was with great difficulty he articulated.

"Tell me now, quietly and slowly; don't be in a hurry," said the Doctor, in the kindest tones.

"Company—, First Ohio Cavalry," he struggled out.

"And what is your name?"

"H-i-r-a-m H-e-n-k-e f-e-l"

The Doctor hurried back to record his name, and as we returned we were startled to find him dead!—his body straightened by the last throe and his fixed eyes staring coldly and vacantly upwards.

"Poor boy," murmured the Doctor, as he reached down, and, gathering up his blanket, cast it over his body and face.

Dr. Hoff has needed nurses very much, and still needs them. Those who have been with him have been very efficient, but they are tired out and want relief. A lady, Mrs. S. L. Norton, deserves especial mention for her kindness and untiring attention to the soldiers.

A correspondent, writing from St. Louis, says:

The sight of the wounded was very affecting. It is said—I do not know with what truth—that they report but little fighting on Monday; that the Confederate forces worked until they removed the captured camp equipage, cannon, stores and ammunition, when they retreated, burning a bridge over which a large force of Federal cavalry had passed who have not been heard from. Wounded men are not reliable, however; and their dejection may arise from their physical condition.

ARMY OF SOUTHWEST MISSOURI.

A letter from this army, dated the 4th, says:—Five hundred cavalry and the-mountain howitzers returned yesterday from Huntsville, where they had gone in search of the enemy, but they could not be found. Our information is, that General Price has gone to Memphis, and that some 6,000 of his cavalry are going north of the Arkansas river, intending to make a dash at Rolla, or some other exposed point. They will find the Union troops ready for them.

A PROSPECT.—Any sensible man, anything but a bladed and benighted abolitionist, can see that the inevitable result of permitting a horde of black brutes to overrun the State will be a great injury to the poor white men. But we seem to be in the hands of the negro-lovers and a man's misfortune is to be white. A poor white devil of a soldier could sicken and die in hearing of the drunken revelry of the White House, a few weeks since, while the Government was making appropriations for the feeding and clothing of thousands of Southern negroes.—Carlisle Volunteer.

A RAILROAD "SINK."—The Lafayette Journal says a portion of the track of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad has sunk out of sight three times. The space where this occurs is about two hundred feet long. After being two other tracks, the Company inserted piles. These have also sunk out of sight. They are now driving down piles of over sixty feet in length, and yet have not found hard ground. The place where this occurs is supposed to have been once occupied by a lake, over which vegetation has spread a thin crust.

COUNTERFEITS.—We would advise our readers to positively refuse all two's on the Columbia Bank, and all one's on the Farmers' Bank of Reading. There are so many bogus notes of these denominations in circulation, and so well executed, that as a precautionary measure, in were best to refuse all.—Hanover (Pa.) Citizen.

Mr. Geo.
