FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE EAST.—The Alexandria correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 21st of March, says:

To-day intelligence has come that the Prince of Wales had reached Thebes on his back way to Cairo, where he may be expected within the next few days. The party proceeded up the Nile to the first cataract, the limit of their voyage. The first sight of an Egyptian temple which the Prince enjoyed was at Esneh, where, during the necessary halt at night on the upper voyage, the great Roman portico of the temple was well seen by torchlight. From Assouan he visited Philæ, the holy island, on the front edge of Egypt and Nubia; and, after exploring its picturesque group of temples, returned the same day to Assouan, and immediately commenced the descent of the river. Edfou, which within the last few years has been entirely cleared by order of the Viceroy, now presents a complete plan—the only one in existence—of an Egyptian temple, and thus affords to travellers in Upper Egypt something of the same information which could formerly be obtained only by the sight of the rock temple of Abou Simbil, in Nubia.

This instructive example of Egyptian architecture was the first which the Prince witnessed on his downward voyage, and was a good preparation for the magnificent confusion of Thebes, which he reached for the night of the 15th, with the intention of remaining three days. The first was spent on the eastern bank of the river, among the ruins of Karnac, and the day being Sunday, his Royal Highness attended Divine service, which was performed in the great hall of that splendid temple by Professor Stanley. The second and third days were to be devoted to the temples and tombs on the western bank, after which his Royal Highness intended to return to Cairo, visiting the chief objects of interest on the way. The Prince has also been enabled to combine his love of sport with the other objects of his tour, especially at Edfou and between Esneh and Thebes. The health of the Prince and suite continues unimpaired. The Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Coburg arrived at Thebes, from Cairo, on the same day as the Prince of Wales arrived from Assouan, and the uncle and nephew had thus an opportunity of meeting for a few hours on the banks of the Nile.

THE FRENCH CROPS.—The Echo Agricole says:—The accounts which have reached us during the last week of the state of the crops are excellent. In almost every part the appearance of the growing wheat is magnificent. The weather, which became fine towards the end of the week, has removed the fears which had been excited by the long continuance of rain, and has allowed the sowing of clover to be carried on most favorably in the north of France. The spring field-labors have been in general executed on good conditions. The grass crops are growing rapidly, and the lucern is already very fine. The wheat, which had been affected by the late frosts in the east of France, has recovered under the beneficent influence of the mild showers of spring. An old farmer in the centre of France, writes us word that he has 'never seen a finer prospect for the growing crops.' It must not, however, be forgotten that those are as yet only hopes, which would rapidly vanish on a return of bad weather."

THE ENGLISH IN JAPAN.—Letters dated January 31 have been received at Plymouth, from an officer of the screw steam corvette Charybdis, 21, Captain the Hon. George D. Keane. She had left Yokahama, and arrived at Jeddo, in Japan, where she lay four miles from the shore. The officers were allowed to land only for the purpose of going to the residence of the British Minister, and then it was necessary for them to be armed with sword and pistol. They were not permitted to go into the city without a special invitation by the Minister. An armed escort accompanied them when they did go, and they were not allowed to enter any of the shops. Thirty marines from the corvette were protecting the Minister's house. The Imperial Government continued faithful, but the numerous armed retainers of the nobles were constantly threatening aggression. Fourteen marines kept guard at the house of the British resident at Yokahama. The British seamen were healthy.

COURTESY TO A DEAD TIGER.—The most redoubtable foe encountered by the natives is the tiger, and they are consequently very superstitious with regard to him, and are reluctant even to speak about him for fear of evil consequences. Images of the tiger are carved in wood and placed at the foot of large trees in the forest, or worn as charms, which are supposed to protect the bearer against his attacks. Still the Gold occasionally kill a tiger, and appease very proud of the achievement; when this happens they fasten the animal to a wall of their houses, and the whole family passes in review before him, doing homage by bending low, and ceremoniously addressing him as "My Lord".

[illegible] to open a depot for the sale of the Scriptures (near the Exhibition building) in various foreign languages, as well as in the six languages required by the inhabitants of England, Scotland, Ireland and the adjacent islands. Colporteurs will be employed in London in various ways. Various societies intend to make strenuous efforts, in order to get the Bible and other religious books and tracts into the hands of the visitors in their own vernaculars. It is stated, as an historical fact, that the committee of the Manchester Art Treasures Exhibition refused to allow the exhibition of the Bible, in 100 different languages, in a case.

HORRIBLE DEATH BY LIGHTNING.—Four persons were at work last week in a field near Nantes when a storm drove them to take shelter under some trees. One of them, a woman, was killed by the lightning, which had struck the oak under which she was standing, the electric fluid having carried her round the tree and into its branches, where a part of her hair, her cap, handkerchief, and several other articles of her clothing remained suspended; her wooden shoes were shivered to pieces, and the lower part of her stockings carried away. The lightning had also broken the back of the unfortunate woman, and stripped her entirely naked.

The gardener of the Rev. J. T. Bennet, of Cheveley Rectory, England, in order to frighten small birds from a bed of seeds, had erected an effigy of a man with extended arms, but on going to remove it a few days back he was surprised to find that a robin had actually ventured under the hat, and snugly built its little nest upon the head of the scarecrow. The nest was suffered to remain undisturbed.

The Vienna papers state that, on the return of the Prince of Wales to London, a deputation of the regiment of Austrian Hussars of the late Count Schlick is to wait upon him to present him with the diploma of his nomination as chief of the regiment.

ANOTHER CONFEDERATE PRIVATEER.—The New York Herald publishes the following, dated London, April 7th:

The Pacific is off with a full cargo of saltpetre, powder, cannon, rifles, swords, shot, blankets, and other war stores, for Nassau, N. P. She is the last of the mutual joint stock piratical fleet, of Gladiator fame, and goes out as the last dying groan of English secession. Let me describe her:—The Galway liner Pacific—long, low, paddle steamer. Sharp lines; great speed; black, with white streak or bead line; high bulwarks; rail lined with brass; guards lower paddle-boxes large, top painted cream-color; stern round, covered with carved work; figure-head, winged woman; one funnel forward, one aft of paddle-boxes, painted white, black tops; house between foremast and forward funnel; aft house between aft funnel and mizzenmast; two boats each side aft paddle-boxes, one forward, painted black; two masts; stump bowsprit (very short); square sails on foremast, also top-sail and topgallant sails; mainmast fore-and-aft (schooner) rig; masts and funnels do not rake a great deal; mast bright black; mastheads and top spars black; length about two hundred and fifty feet. Taking in grape-shot and balls; nothing disguised. Taken on board, one by one, in hands.—Offence is partial uniform. Lying ahead of her is the ship Josiah Bradlee, of Boston, whose captain must be aware of what is going on. Think we have nothing that could overtake her should she get the start. Captain Thomson, Vice-President of your Neptune Mutual Insurance Company, formerly commanded her, and will give you any details omitted.

LARGEST BALL DRESS OF EUGENIE.—Our lady readers will be interested in this description of one of the latest ball dresses, worn by the Empress Eugenie:

A robe of white tulle, covered with trimmings up to the knees, looking like a veritable cloud, with diamonds scattered all over it. The sash was not worn round the waist, but as a scarf. The lower part of the body was of sky blue, with wide points before and behind, and covered with diamonds. Blue velvet bows were placed on the shoulders with migrating diamonds. The necklace of diamonds upon blue velvet, rather close round the throat. The coiffure was a bow of blue velvet, upon which were diamond wheat-ears; at the side, leaves of the same color, as the bow, forming a half wreath; in the chignon of these leaves were pendants, which produced a very striking and brilliant effect. Some curls escaped from the back hair, which was fastened up in a mass with diamonds, forming a diadem. Diamonds, in the form of light shade and not been seen in the hair, but the effect produced was very beautiful. Instead of a single pearl, is called coiniture bayadère, a very narrow dressed at the back of the head, and tied in a bow at the front.

CONVICTION OF A POLICEMAN FOR MANSLAUGHTER.—On Tuesday, the 15th, a policeman who was tried at the Court of Oyer and Terminer on an indictment charging manslaughter in killing Paul O'Neill, by striking him on the head on the 16th of March last, was convicted of the offence in the fourth degree, and recommended to the Court. Upon polling the jury, it appeared that their verdict about 8 o'clock in the evening was unanimously recommended the defendant to the mercy of the Court. Upon this verdict the ball was extended until Tuesday morning, when sentence will be pronounced.—N. Y. Tribune.
