PROGRESS OF DESPOTISM.

The most astounding proposition ever made in Congress is that of Senator Wade, on the 25th instant, to the effect that it shall be made a misdemeanor in any person, who has been subjected to arbitrary arrest and imprisonment by an officer of the Government, to bring a suit, or attempt to bring one, for the purpose of obtaining redress. The object of this proposed act is to protect the infamous tyrants, who have treated innocent American citizens as felons and slaves, from being reached by the punishment which is due to their crimes. The attempt to shield them from penalty is as despotic as their acts were tyrannical. If Cameron, Seward, Lincoln and their fellow despots are innocent, why needs Congress interpose in their behalf? If guilty, why should Congress discriminate in behalf of the wrong-doers, and prevent the injured party from obtaining redress?

What right has Congress to interpose for the protection of Cameron, Seward and others who have violated the laws of their country and deprived their fellow-citizens of their personal liberty? Just as much right, and no more, as it has to declare, no matter what offence one citizen might commit against another, it should be a misdemeanor in the aggrieved party, and punished as such, to seek any redress of the grievance.

We wonder if Senator Wade thinks that human nature has become extinct in the American people. We wonder if he supposes that if Congress chooses to become a party to the despotism and tyranny of the Executive and to approve of and confirm the acts of despotism and of tyranny which have been committed by members of the Administration, and to make it a punishable offence to call in question those acts of tyranny and of despotism, the people will tamely, submissively and acquiescently submit to such an outrage.

Just as the South has been driven into rebellion by one phase of abolition fanaticism, the people of the North will be driven to desperation, which will end in open war between fanaticism and conservatism, if the abolitionists in Congress persist in violating the constitutional rights of the people. The purposed attempt to interpose by legislative and Executive power between an aggressing and an aggrieved citizen is a stretch of assumption of arbitrary power which we, for one, have not contemplated even in abolitionism; but we are satisfied now that it will stop at nothing to carry out its ulterior designs.

We are prepared, and so might the people be, to hear any day that a coup d'etat has taken place at Washington, and that the abolitionists have adopted and put in force a new form of Government. They would be justified by the acquiescence of the people in their recent assumptions and exercise of arbitrary power in presuming that they would be sustained by the people in any step they might deem best to take to destroy the Constitution and the Union, and to establish such a form of government as would subject the people to the will of the governing power. But let them try it if they dare. Let the abolitionists in Congress, aided by abolitionized Republicans, enact and attempt to enforce unconstitutional laws. It is needless to predict, and as needless to declare, what will be the result.

We be to fanaticism when it makes such an issue with those who have kept and mean to keep their oath of fealty to the Constitution. But as such an issue is probable, judging from the course in Congress of the abolitionists, it is well to be prepared for the worst that might happen. Conservative men, Republicans, Know-Nothings, and Democrats, if you would preserve the Constitution of your country from subversion, and with it the political rights which were wrested by force of arms from the tyrants of other days, you must take heed of what is transpiring in Congress, lest while you cease your vigilance in the temple of liberty, the enemy take possession and subject you to a despotic rule more odious and intolerable than that which it took your fathers seven long years of war to be released from nearly ninety years ago.

Let no one imagine that it is improbable that an attempt will be made to subvert the Constitution.—Is it not done already, first in arresting and incarcerating citizens without due process of law, or without any process of law?

Second, in depriving them arbitrarily and illegally of the constitutional writ of habeas corpus?—Third, in the attempt made now to deprive them of redress of grievances suffered in violation of other constitutional rights?

It does not need that the Constitution be changed in verbal terms to subvert or destroy it. If the governing powers, or either of them, [illegible] the people acquiesce in this violation, the Constitution is as much subverted and destroyed as if the Executive and Congress proclaimed the fact in words or interpolated the Constitution by changes of their own suggestion. Take the case of Napoleon's coup d'etat for example.

Louis Napoleon changed the Government of France from a Republican to an Imperial Monarchical form by his own fiat. Was this not a subversion, a destruction of the existing form of government? It is true the people acquiesced—apparently so at least. But what did the constitutional people of America or even of England think of them when they did so? They looked upon the French people with amazement and contempt. Yet we in the United States have acted more abjectly, more compliantly, cowardly, than did the French people under Louis Napoleon. We know, or presume that we know the value of constitutional government and of constitutional liberty. They did not, for they had not experienced its benefits long enough to appreciate its value. Hence they could not estimate the loss to which the coup d'etat subjected them, and hence, too, their excuse for acquiescing in a change of government which they did not experience as an evil.

We, citizens of the United States, will have no such excuse for submitting to a deprivation of constitutional government and yielding our personal and political rights to an usurped power. No hoaser, no meaner, no more servile act can be committed by mortal man than the submission of the American people to the deprivation of their constitutional rights by Executive decress and acts of Congress. It shall never be done with our consent or acquiescence, be the cost of non-conformity what it might.

AN HEIR OF THE IRISH PEERAGE IN THE POLICE COURT FOR CRIME.—This morning a boy about fourteen years of age, named Charles Beresford, was arrested and taken before the police magistrate, charged with obtaining goods by false representations.

This lad is the presumptive heir to an Irish peerage and a rich estate. His mother was a Nova Scotian, the wife of Major Beresford, a retired officer of the British army, who lived at Hamilton, C. W. Some ten or twelve years ago, when the lad was an infant, the wife fled from Canada with one Gallagher, employed as a coachman by the husband. They brought the child with them to this city, and with a little money which the woman had they purchased a piece of land in the neighboring town of Ironkequoit. There they lived for a time, and then moved to this city, where they now reside. Gallagher was a Nova Scotian, like the woman, and is disposed to be an industrious man. He has found employment as a laborer, and somehow the refugees have got along ever since.

Major Beresford procured a divorce from the Canadian Parliament, but the Ecclesiastical Court of Great Britain annulled it. He may, however, have procured one since under a late act of Parliament. For a long time after the flight of this couple from Canada Major B. tried to obtain possession of this boy, his son, but he did not succeed, though a large sum was offered for his delivery in Canada. He did for a time, set apart and pay his wife living with Gallagher, an annual stipend, but of late years that has been stopped, it is said, and her only reliance has been upon the man with whom she fled from the house of her husband. As a consequence she has lived in reduced circumstances.

Beresford was an old man when he married this woman, and must now be upwards of seventy while she is less than forty. His uncle held the peerage, but the Major was the heir, and this boy now under arrest, being his oldest son, would follow him, and will attain to the estate and peerage even though he remains here till the death of his father.—Rochester Union, 29th.

CRUSHES ENCOURAGED IN NEGROES FOR WHICH WHITE MEN ARE SOMETIMES HANGED.—A Des Moines correspondent of the Chicago Times writes: This town—being on the line of the underground railroad from Northern Missouri to Canada, via Grinnell, the Iowa Oberlin—is becoming infested with a set of lazy, thieving "contrabands" and vile villainous as they are, or have got to be, in the absence of the wholesome restraints incident to a time of peace, they absolutely receive a greater degree of consideration, and a more certain immunity from the consequences of crime, from the negro-worshipping class of our people, than white men who have made themselves amenable to punishment. To illustrate: Some two or three months since two white men were arrested here on a charge of stealing horses in Missouri. There was no testimony against them to which a jury would for a moment listen with a view to convict. Still, one of them was sent to jail on suspicion, the other discharged, and the property taken from them; how it was disposed of I do not know, as no claimant ever appeared for it; the lawyers probably got the lion's share of it. This action may have been all right; I do not find fault with it; but a day or two since, three runaway negroes, or "contrabands" in military phrase, arrived here from Andrew county, Missouri, with four horses in their possession, which they confessed to have stolen before they left. So far from being arrested for their acknowledged crime, they were applauded—their horses were sold in the street at public outcry, by a city official, who purchased the sale with the understanding that these were stolen, and the proceeds were paid over to the dusky thieves, grinning and chuckling at the success of their successful issue of the matter. These negroes were lodged in this town by a party of the "underground railroad" with their ill-gotten gains, consisting of two horses, saddles, bridles, blankets, and twenty dollars, and the leaving of twenty-five dollars in Missouri notes, in denomination of five dollars, with the assertion that they had stolen the property from their master, because he was a rebel, and they were going to Canada where they could live free from the control of such masters. The Treasury officials have recently issued a circular, intimating that no more Missouri notes will be received in payment for lands, and that the issuing of twenty-five dollars in such notes, in denomination
