BALTIMORE.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 1862.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

The steamer Georgeanna, Porter, from Old Point, reports that the Confederate steamers Northampton and Curtis Peck came down on Monday under a flag of truce, bringing upwards of 800 released Federal prisoners, who were at once ordered on board the steamer Kent to proceed to Baltimore. The Confederate prisoners, about 200 in number, captured near Williamsburg, were to be exchanged. The flag-of-truce steamers passed below City Point, the Monitor, Naugatuck, and other gunboats, proceeding up James river. The Confederate steamers Yorktown and Jamestown were at Richmond. Nothing later had been received at Fortress Monroe from General McClellan. Several passengers came over from Norfolk on Monday, and arrived here on the Georgeanna, bringing some newspapers.

The United States bark Gemsbok, Lieutenant Commanding Cavendy, from Hampton Roads, arrived at this port yesterday.

FROM THE PENINSULA.

Special Despatches to the Philadelphia Press.

THE BATTLE OF WILLIAMSBURG.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Captain Hart, Assistant Adjutant-General, and chief of the staff of General Sickles' Excelsior brigade, arrived in this city this morning from the peninsula, and brings some interesting partiulars of the battle of Williamsburg. He states that General Hooker's division left their camp, four miles this side of Yorktown, on Sunday afternoon, May 4th, and made a forced march until 12 o'clock that night, when they halted within a few miles of Williamsburg. Here the men rested until daylight next morning without shelter, and exposed to a heavy rain storm.

As soon as morning broke they resumed their march, the road leading them through a dense cedar woods, with the difficulties of which they had to contend, as well as the pelting rain, and mud knee-deep. The New Jersey brigade, commanded by General Frank Patterson, was in the advance, and about eight o'clock, as it emerged from this woods on an open plain, breastworks were discovered crossing the road in front.

Two batteries were at once got into position on the right and left of the road, and for three hours an artillery fight was kept up, until our pieces had sunk so deep in the mud that they could neither be used with advantage nor moved to another part of the field. The main body of the Confederates were concealed in a ravine to the right of their works, running back towards Williamsburg, and the approach to this ravine was defended by rifle pits and an abattis or jungle, formed by felling large trees and bushes, behind which their sharpshooters concealed themselves, and kept up a deadly fire upon our men.

About 11 o'clock an attempt was made to dislodge them from this position, our men making a fierce charge upon it, and driving them out of their rifle pits, and following them into the jungle or ambush as they retreated. It was here that our brave soldiers suffered so terribly, in attempting to maintain the ground they had won, and to overcome the obstructions placed in their way. The enemy outnumbered them, and, lying in ambush, poured in upon them a withering fire. Hundreds fell, but still our men fought on. General Heintzleman was on the field, and acted like a hero. He was everywhere in the thickest of the fight, cheering the men.

There was no "reserve" to draw upon, and the only chance was that reinforcements would come up. Knowing that this hope inspired the men, General Heintzleman, whenever he saw a regiment wavering, would take two or three companies from another part of the field, where the fortunes of the day were not so imminent, and rushing to the relief of those who were hard pressed, would animate them with new energy and determination by his aid, and the promise that reinforcements from the main body of the army were in sight and coming up rapidly. In this way the battle was maintained until 5 o'clock, (although, according to all military principles, the Federals were whipped at three—being outflanked and nearly surrounded,) when reinforcements did arrive, and the victory was won.

The official loss of the Excelsior brigade alone is 773 dead, wounded and missing. The first regiment of this brigade lost nineteen out of twenty-seven officers who went into the fight. Five of its captains were killed and two wounded, one fatally. The regiment numbered 800 men, and now musters but 300. This is but one instance. Many other regiments suffered as severely. The loss of the New Jersey brigade is thought to be as great as that of the "Excelsior." They were in the action all day, and Gen. Patterson is said to have fought them splendidly. He reached the army on Sunday just in time to take command, and in a few hours had an opportunity of proving himself a gallant and skilful officer, and of winning the enduring respect and confidence of his men.

Another account says:

The battle was a hardly contested affair. Our troops were exhausted; they had fired their last cartridges, and were slowly but steadily being driven back, when the fortunate arrival of the brigade of Gen. Birney changed the order of things. The 38th New York, and part of the 40th, were sent to the front and right of the road to drive the Confederates out of the woods, which they did in gallant style, after a severe fight. But on the left of the road the Confederates had gained a lodging in the timber, and drove the right of Gen Hooker back. The left wing of the 40th New York was ordered to their support, under the command of Capt. George W. Mindel, of Gen. Birney's staff. They charged gallantly up the road, subjected to a destructive fire from sharpshooters and batteries, and drove the Confederates off the ground, silencing their battery.

From the Milwaukee News, May 10.

MARYLAND AND MASSACHUSETTS.

Our Republican morning cotemporary terms the bountiful donation of Maryland to the families of the soldiers killed by a mob in the streets of Baltimore, "the poorest, meanest kind of justice," and proceeds to extol Massachusetts philanthropy as a quality infinitely superior to that of Maryland.—Unfortunately our Republican friends have forgotten that the modern history of Massachusetts furnishes a test of the disposition of that State to do justice to the victims of mobs. Not many years ago a mob—a purely Massachusetts mob, inspired solely by fanatical religious prejudices—assaulted the Catholic convent and church in Charlestown, in that State, near Boston, and applied the torch to the whole property, leaving it, together with many dwellings of quiet citizens, a heap of smoking ruins, and turning the helpless inmates homeless into the street. There never was a more unprovoked and merciless outrage committed upon more worthy and defenceless women.

What did this noble, chivalrous, benevolent and philanthropic State of Massachusetts do about it? Appeal after appeal went up to her ostentatiously benevolent Legislature for redress—in vain! To this day no reparation has been made for the loss of property on that occasion, much less for the suffering and indignity visited upon a large number of her innocent and benevolent women. That is the difference between Maryland and Massachusetts. The one opens her treasury liberally to Massachusetts wives whose husbands suffered while flourishing their foreign bayonets in the faces of the people of Baltimore. The other refuses redress to her own women when their sacred retreats are torn down over their heads deliberately and without the semblance of a provocation.

Northern people have about long enough loaded to Massachusetts, and crawled on their knees at her beck. She was the first State which threatened disunion, and she has threatened it repeatedly since. She was the first to organize disunion societies and sectional parties and conventions. Her capital was the first city in modern times where it was necessary to call upon armed men to execute the Federal laws. Her charity is of that kind which burned witches in Salem and hung Quakers on Boston Common; which appropriated millions to inaugurate a local strife in Kansas; which excludes foreign-born voters from the polls for seven years, and denies the right of suffrage to its own poor whites, whose labor the State owns and sells at its pleasure.

She might with profit to herself go to Maryland to learn the true principles of religious freedom, of political liberty and of unpretentious charity. For in all these respects, Maryland is a mode State, and infinitely the superior of Massachusetts!

DEPARTMENT OF THE RAPPAHANNOCK.

DESERTERS FROM THE CONFEDERATE ARMY—THE CONFEDERATE FORCE IN A FIX—SYMPTOMS OF UNIONISM—THE WOMEN STILL REBELLIOUS.

FREDERICKSBURG, May 10.—Three Confederate deserters came in to-day. They confirm the statement you have already received relative to the Confederate force. They state that the Confederates intend giving us battle when we cross the river, but it is not probable that they have been made acquainted with the General's plans. Indeed, it is rather uncertain whether any definite plan of action is marked out. The Confederate force between here and Richmond seems to have placed itself in rather an unpleasant position. McClellan in their rear, Banks pushing up from the Valley of the Shenandoah, and our column threatening an advance, there seems nothing left but surrender or ignominious death in a last ditch.

A Union sentiment is growing in this neighborhood, but so faintly as to require careful nursing.

The mills of Fredericksburg are running, and some of the storekeepers have opened their stores, but business is not remarkably brisk.

Mrs. Lacey, whose husband is an aid in Gen. Gus. Smith's staff, visited her home to day by permission of Gen. McDowell. She was accompanied by her children, who manifested much regret at being obliged to leave the place of their birth. The lady, however, only expressed regret that she had not two husbands and two such places to sacrifice to further the success of the Confederate cause.

Mrs. Smock and her daughter, who lives some three miles out of Fredericksburg, were to-day detected in making signals to the Confederates, and arrested by our pickets. Her house has long been a rendezvous for the enemy, and yesterday, a Lieutenant of their cavalry was arrested while attempting to escape from it.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.

BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.

I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.

I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really such a remedy that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.

Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER,

No. 15 North Bond street.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 Liberty street, Baltimore. Sold also by the principal Druggists at 10 cents per package.
