BALTIMORE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1862.

From the St. Louis Republican.

A KNOWING NEGRO.

Of all the reliable and intelligent contrabands who have made their way to the Federal lines, to enlighten the loyal public upon affairs in Dixie, Jeff. Davis's coachman seems to carry off the palm. This colored person, who first found entertainment and ready listeners in McDowell's army at Fredericksburg, has proceeded as far as New York, and the light of his countenance has been diffused in the office of the Tribune of that city. Whether the coachman—Wm. A. Jackson—is on his way to Canada, or whether he designs making a tour of the Northern States as a lecturer on the Southern customs, or whether it is his intention to remain in the Empire City, as an object of interest and curiosity, it is not ours to aver, not knowing. The Tribune has given us the result of a tete a-tete with the coachman aforesaid, and we are thereby led into a number of secrets in reference to a great variety of things.

It seems that Jackson is equally at home in his knowledge of Confederate diplomacy, statesmanship, civil and military administration, and, in short, everything that concerns Mr. Davis, his Confederacy, his social and business habits, his household and kitchen arrangements, etc. The negro Jackson appears to have been deep in the confidence of the secession Executive, and though we are told that Mr. Davis' office is in the Custom House at Richmond, we are obliged to conclude, from the coachman's narrative, that the principal part of his most secret and important business is, or has been, transacted in his stable, where Jackson could have the benefit of his conferences without being distracted from his duties of currying horses and greasing carriage wheels. In fact, this contraband says that just a little while before he left, he "heard Jeff. Davis round to the stable talking to General Cooper."

According to the coachman, the President of the Confederate States of America gets up between 8 and 9 o'clock of a morning, takes a mint julep, and has sassafras tea for breakfast, which is served at 10. About the middle of the afternoon he indulges in a light lunch of crackers and cheese—probably "Swelzer kase," with mustard—varied with an occasional herring. This abstemiousness enables him to afford a magnificent dinner at 7, when he devotes his appetite chiefly to ash cake and sherry, which makes him feel so good that he actually converses with his family. The dinners, however, we judge, are too rich, for Jeff. is troubled with dyspepsia, on account of which he frequently takes equestrian exercises on a bay horse.

The coachman knows all about Lady Davis—who go to visit her—where she buys her bonnets and trimmings—how she spends her time—what she thinks of the Confederacy's prospects—her opinions of the various Confederate Generals—when she is going to Europe—how she gads around among the newspaper and Government offices—and a great deal besides, which shows that Mrs. D. and her husband's coachman have been very intimate and confidential friends. [The Tribune says Jackson is of unmixed African descent.]

But the contraband charioteer is not only thoroughly and elaborately posted in reference to the political, social, sanitary and military "situation" of Jeff. Davis' household. He is profoundly posted as to the military condition of the Confederacies—their fortifications, strength of numbers, strategic and tactical plans of certain movements, &c. He knows all about Generals Joe Johnston, Lee, Beauregard, Magruder, Wise, Floyd, Toombs, and the rest, and can describe their personal peculiarities as well as appearance and status in the army. Memminger and Hunter likewise have the honor of his acquaintance. His opinion of John Minor Botts is that he (John Minor) is a good man, adding his sage and erudite conviction that if all had been like him there would not have been any war.

We suggest that the friends of this Jackson, (who must not be confounded with any of the Jacksons in the military service, nor with any of the brothers of the Jackson who assassinated Ellsworth,) prevail upon him to write a book. He has certainly material enough, aided by a lively and ingenious fancy, if assisted by the Tribune editor, to make up a racy and interesting volume, which would have all the freshness and attractiveness of a romance.

THE BRITISH CROPS.

The London Economist of the 17th of May says: Notwithstanding a constantly continuing decline in the corn market for the last few weeks indicates the favorable opinion entertained by the trade of the prospects of the wheat crop, the farmer, who notes from day to day the progress of his growing wheat, is not altogether without apprehension. On the strong and fertile soils, where has become too luxuriant, under the influence of the excess of moisture which has again occurred; while on strong land imperfectly drained, the plant has a yellow hue. Many farmers are cutting the flag by way of lightening the straw, and nothing but a long succession of dry weather, of which at present there appears no prospect, can prevent much of the wheat plant from becoming dangerously heavy.

In Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Leicestershire, Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Huntingdonshire and Northamptonshire, there have been some violent hail storms, during which hail stones of extraordinary magnitude have fallen, and the damage done to some of the heavier wheat and bean crops in many places is said to have been serious. Later in the season the injury would have been comparatively in the actual stage of the growth of the crops it may be hoped that no permanent injury will result. Until wheat shoots into ear, the plant can recover from a good deal of knocking about, and with dry weather we still look for an abundant wheat harvest. The tendency to violent and extreme changes of temperature, which is the chief characteristic of the season, constitutes the main source of anxiety. Barley and oats sown before the rains of March are most vigorous, and promise to be large crops, while such as have been sown subsequently to the early glut of rain are springing up rapidly and regularly. There is much complaint of want of sunshine. On many days, when no great quantity of rain has fallen, the absence of sun rendered the drying of the land extremely slow.

This has retarded preparations for turnips and has impeded mangold planting. The latter root, where early sown, appears to be springing up pretty regularly, and where a full dressing of manure has been given, good crops may be regarded as tolerably certain. The mangold crops will, however, require the horse and hand hoes to be promptly used as soon as the weather will permit. Potato planting, too, is somewhat in arrear, and with the rain which has fallen during the present week, there will be much difficulty in getting all the ground intended for potatoes properly planted. On the continent of Europe, the cotton crops are said to be looking well, and the supplies of grain in the United States of America are reported to be much larger than were generally expected. So far as present appearances go, we calculate upon moderate prices for grain during the coming year. The hay crops of last year have also proved extremely light. Though the hay-stacks were evidently less in bulk than the average, few farmers were prepared for the deficiencies of weight which cutting out has shown to have occurred in last year's hay crop.

OVERDOING IT, RATHER.

It is already a matter of record that the "rebel barbarities" at Winchester, during the retreat of General Banks' troops, are for the most part fancy work; but, as if regardless of that record, a correspondent of the Boston Traveller, thus piles up the agony:

* * * "The march through Winchester (he says,) was a savage one. The 2d were the rear, but all fared much alike. Citizens shot from windows, threw hand grenades, struck at our men with clubs—citizens? Women did it; women shot wounded men; women threw hot water on them; women killed prisoners."

Superadded to this, is a repetition of the exploded story "that the rebels set fire to the hospitals" while sick men were in them, that "prisoners were murdered in cold blood," etc. The publication of such statements as these—unless properly substantiated—must have a tendency to prolong and embitter a war, already sufficiently embittered—and if anything would justify our Generals in excluding newspaper correspondents from their camps, it seems to us, they have it here.—N. Y. Express, June 3.

We think it well to recall to memory, once in a while, the professions upon which the Republicans went into power. Thus, the fourth resolution of the Chicago platform, set up two years ago, reads as follows:

"That the maintenance inviolate of the rights of each State, and especially the right of each State to control and order its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment exclusively, is essential to that balance of powers, on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depends."

It would be difficult to say how more completely their members of Congress could have tried to nullify this fundamentally constitutional declaration, than they have done during this whole session. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing from Bath county, Ky., justly says:

"We think that the present Congress is doing the Union more harm than the whole of Jeff. Davis' army, and I think it would prove a blessing to the country if they would adjourn and go home."—Boston Courier, June 3.

We hope it is not "reasonable" to express some gratification, that all the statements circulated through the newspapers of cruelty to our wounded soldiers are not true. Thus we see that the telegraph states that a prisoner escaped from Winchester contradicts the stories about the brutal treatment of Colonel Keely and his command, and about the burning of the hospitals. We should not be surprised even to learn that the statement about the killing of nurses in the hospital should prove equally unworthy of credit.—Boston Courier, June 3.

THE HARDEST FIGHT.—A letter from Nashville says: "The hardest fight the Union men here in Tennessee have is to defend themselves against the infernal machines sent down South in the shape of abolition speeches and actions in Congress."

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH. BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862. I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S, MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me. I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind. Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER, No. 15 North Bond street. PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 Liberty street, Baltimore. Sold also by the principal Druggists at 10 cents per package. m10-tf

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of "enlightening the world with lamp-black." OUR PRESS, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SUN, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our JOB PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings. SAMUEL S. MILLS, m22 1m BOOK AND JOB PRINTER, Office—122 Baltimore st., 2 doors from North.

SPRING AND SUMMER CLOTHING OF THE FIRST QUALITY.—We would call the attention of our readers to the Merchant Tailoring Establishment of Mr. GEO. MCKAY DREE TRAL, N. This gentleman has already obtained among his numerous customers a high reputation for having Broadcloths, Cassimeres and Vestings of the first quality, as well as cheapness, neatness and durability of workmanship. We take pleasure in recommending him to the notice of our friends and readers. ap24-tf
