ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE BEFORE RICHMOND.

A TERRIBLE FIGHT—THE REBELS ATTACK OUR ENCAMPMENTS—HEAVY LOSS ON BOTH SIDES.

Gen. Keyes' Headquarters,
May 31, 12 o'clock, Midnight.

Yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock, the Confederates made an attack in force upon our encampments, directly in front of their lines. So sudden was the attack that, although every possible exertion was made by the infantry, aided by artillery, to hold their positions, after a half hour's fighting Gen. Casey's entire division vacated its encampment, and retired in confusion to the rear, a few hundred yards distant. Here a second stand was made by the troops of Casey's and Couch's divisions, those of the former being mainly concentrated in front of the line, while the latter were deployed to the right and left, with a view of preventing a flank movement on the part of the Confederates at either of these points.

The firing of musketry and artillery, from the Confederate side, now became quite general; and, as our troops fell back, those of the Confederates advanced upon us, at the same time discharging their muskets and halooing in the most savage manner.

Our soldiers finally reached the first rifle-pits, and into these they rapidly fell, and disputing every inch of ground over which the Confederates sought to pass. Twice had our men been driven back, and twice had they recovered their ground, hurling back the foe with deadly loss. The principal portion of the troops of General Couch's division, among which was the brigade of General Peck, gallantly defended the railroad on the right, by means of which route the Confederates were endeavoring to effect an entrance on our rear. Here also General Naglee's brigade made a brave stand, until the overwhelming forces of the Confederates caused a momentary check, and caused them to fall back. Yet stubbornly and persistently the troops previously mentioned maintained their ground here, and, as the sequel will show, successfully held the point against entrance by the foe.

The attack was first made upon the left, and it was here that the heaviest fighting was had. The enemy pushed on their columns, and by which the Confederate troops entered, was heavily timbered, and the ground was of a soft and swampy character. From this reason the foe was necessarily concealed, and the deadliness of much of our fire was thus rendered non-effective. The batteries of the 1st Pennsylvania artillery successfully defended the encampment of Couch's division long after those of Casey's had evacuated theirs. Those were Flood's, Brady's, McCarthy's and Miller's batteries, and the fire hailed in upon the advancing Confederates was of lightning rapidity.

All this time the Confederates had been threatening to flank us at either point, and thither our force had been diverted. Now the rattle of musketry was terrific upon the right, and then it became louder and deadlier on the left. The troops on either side were running first backward and then forward, according to the effectiveness of either side's fire. The battle was emphatically a running one on the part of the foe, as well as our own, raking and regaining ground almost every fifteen minutes.

The battle had now been raging several hours. The reinforcements for which General Keyes had sent were now coming up, those of General Casey's command—of General Heintzleman's corps—being in the advance front.

Their appearance was vociferously greeted by the tired and bleeding troops, and they immediately went to the front, amidst the raging fire, and nobly endeavored to stem the tide. Barry's and Birney's Brigades were disposed of in the front and to the right on the railroad, and here a brave stand was made by them to defend our ground against further incursions.

Generals Heintzleman, Keyes and Hooker, who were upon the ground, endeavored to stem the retreating current now rapidly setting in, but in consequence of the superior force of the Confederates and the lateness with which reinforcements arrived, failed so to do.

Night was also coming on, and the scene became truly fearful. Wounded soldiers were being borne in every direction, and the ambulances were running between Higgins' and Sawyer's houses as fast as possible. So fast did the Confederates advance upon us, prepared as they were to give us battle, and having yesterday set as the occasion for such, and so rapid was the stampede among Casey's troops, that a number of our dead and wounded were left upon the field. The soldiers had not even time to gather up their knapsacks or haversacks, and these, with camp utensils, were left upon the ground.

Bailey's battery, of the First New York Artillery, was captured by the Confederates, and taken possession of by them. The loss in Kearney's division, who marched as they were, right into the face of the enemy, is, no doubt, also large. So soon as our troops were wounded, they were taken to the railroad and immediately sent to the White House.

The 104th Pennsylvania sustained the first fire of the Confederates, and this regiment, together with the 93d Pennsylvania, is terribly cut up. There are others in similar condition.

The loss of the Confederates is severe. Scores of them were seen to fall during the fight, and their dead bodies their comrades advanced, only to fall in turn before the well directed fire of our soldiers.

Towards nightfall the firing on the Confederate side ended, and no attack was made up to midnight.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNOR STANLEY, OF NORTH CAROLINA.

From the Boston Courier, June 5.

Supposing Governor Stanley to have been sent to North Carolina to carry out the absurd designs of Northern fanatics, the course adopted by him would be inconsistent with the object proposed.—But if the purpose be simply to effect the restoration of North Carolina to the Union, then nothing but his course could possibly tend to that object. The people of North Carolina are those to be affected by his administration, and to those he will undoubtedly continue to address himself, as he has thus far done, in conformity with the laws of that State. The people of that State look upon the missionary enterprise instituted there, including the opening of schools for the instruction of negroes, as an outrage, as it was an express violation of laws enacted by them for their own protection; and Governor Stanley will continue to regard those laws and the wishes of the citizens of his native State, without the least consideration of the lawless purposes of fanatics, whether in Washington or elsewhere. We observe by the correspondence of the Tribune, that a delegation of these mischief-makers has waited upon Mr. Secretary Stanton, who, it is said, informed them that his instructions to Governor Stanley said nothing about enforcing the "local" laws of North Carolina. We suppose not—but we are at a loss to know what other laws he was to enforce, or had any right whatever to enforce there—supposing them not inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States.

We do not expect the fanatics to learn anything, or to accept anything which is conformable to the common reason and judgment of mankind, and our national affairs are to be adjusted, if at all, without reference to them. The people of North Carolina are not prepared to receive the "higher law;" and the action of Governor Stanley is one of those decisive tests which interpose, and will interpose, between that that higher law and the Constitution and the laws of the land. The Tribune correspondent adds that Governor Stanley "has not yet taken any action which sanctioned such proceedings as those of Governor Stanley." A judicious speech, indeed! In case he should resign, perhaps the people might be gratified by having Mr. Holt in his place.

We see also by the correspondence of the Times, that one Helper, brother, it is said, to "Impending-Crisis" Helper, has addressed a whining letter to Gov. Stanley, impertinently deprecating his policy. The cringing creature talks of "the gracious offer of the President in his late proclamation," as if the elected Chief Magistrate of a free people were a despot to bestow royal grace at his pleasure!—This Helper closes his letter by saying, that if his suggestions are not acceptable, he will prepare as soon as practicable to leave the State—to which he received the following prompt and moving reply:

OFFICE OF THE PROVOST MARSHALL,
NEWBERN, N. C., May 31.

H. H. Helper, Esq.:

SIR—I am instructed by his Excellency the Military Governor of North Carolina, to inform you that he requires you to leave this Department in the first vessel going North.

Capt. C. G. Loring, Jr., Assistant Quartermaster, will furnish you with the necessary order for transportation.

I am, very respectfully, yours,
DAN MESSENGER,
Provost Marshal.

THE RESULT.

STANLEY'S ACTS REVOKED—PROMPT ACTION OF THE PRESIDENT.

Special Despatch to the New York Evening Post.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The excitement which was caused by the arbitrary acts of Governor Stanley in North Carolina is sensibly allayed to-day by the prompt and decisive action of the Government. It is definitely announced to-day that the President has instructed Mr. Stanley to recall his obnoxious orders, to re-open the schools for the contrabands, and to stop the remanding of fugitive slaves to their masters. The friends of Governor Stanley are not at all pleased with this countermand.—They declare that he will resign his office rather than recall his orders. There is much congratulation, however, among those who believe that the Governor's course in North Carolina was eminently despotic and inhuman. But the better opinion is that he ought to be severely punished before he is allowed to resign.

The number of wounded men in the hospitals in Washington is nearly four times as great as we had from the bloody field of Bull Run.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.
BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.
I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.
I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.
Yours, truly, HENRY FISHER, No. 15 North Bond street.
