TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1862.

ARRIVAL OF THE WOUNDED OF SHIELDS' DIVISION AT WASHINGTON.

From the Washington National Republican, June 16.

On Saturday evening, about 10 o'clock, a number of freight cars attached to a locomotive arrived from Virginia, filled to overflowing with sick and wounded soldiers, who were wounded at Port Republic, to the number of two or three hundred, closely crowded together in the cars and outside of them. From Surgeon S. B. Sidger and the men generally we glean the following particulars:

Most of these men belong to Ohio regiments.—Some of them are from Indiana and some from Virginia. They belonged to the advance of General Shields' Division, which was composed of two or three brigades, made up of fragments of regiments, numbering in all only about 2,500 men.—They were ordered by General Shields to destroy the bridge over the Shenandoah, at Port Republic, which Jackson's army, in its retreat, would have to cross.

Instead of destroying the bridge, as commanded, the Colonel in command ordered his men to hold the bridge, and refused to let them burn it. This proved to be a fatal mistake. Jackson, hotly pursued and harrassed by Fremont, came to the bridge with an overpowering force of 15,000, and engaged our weak force, which fought with a courage and desperation unprecedented in the present war. The troops of Jackson, maddened to desperation by the knowledge that they were hemmed in unless they broke the barrier before them, dashed at our men three different times, and as many times were repulsed by our force in their centre, while Jackson's numbers enabled him to flank our force, which, after being terribly cut up and nearly surrounded, were obliged to leave the field, retreating in good order, one regiment being obliged to cut its way through, having been completely surrounded by the enemy. This occurred last Monday.—The enemy were closely pursued by Fremont, and it was understood that on the same day the latter buried 800 of the enemy's dead, killed in the morning's fight, and which the flying force of Jackson had no time to bury. It is believed that had the bridge been destroyed as directed, Fremont would have captured the entire army of the enemy. Prisoners captured by Shields' force, and brought to this city yesterday, say that Jackson had told his men if that bridge were destroyed they would have to lay down their arms.

Overpowered, and driven by a force five times their number, the force of Shields had to retreat. Their sick and wounded were put in wagons and sent to Front Royal, a distance of about fifty miles, without opportunity to dress their wounds or attend to the sick. This occupied until Friday. Here they stayed all night, and the next morning were put on the cars and sent here by the way of Manassas and Alexandria. They arrived here about nine o'clock on Saturday night. At Front Royal they had telegraphed to the authorities here that they were coming; and again, at Manassas, they notified the officials at what time they would arrive here; but on their arrival no one appeared. They stopped on Maryland avenue, between Seventh and Tenth streets, when Surgeon Hays, who was in charge, immediately proceeded to headquarters for information in regard to their disposition. He returned after a time without being successful, and the men were informed that they must lie in the cars all night, notwithstanding they had not had their wounds dressed, partaken of any refreshment all day, or had sufficient room to avoid contact with each other.

After waiting a long time for the authorities to move, and the soldiers suffering for want of food and attention, the citizens were notified of their condition, when the neighborhood was aroused, and with that noble-hearted, generous sympathy which characterizes the citizens of the Seventh Ward, the people, en masse, set to work to provide for the brave men in distress. Tea, coffee, meat, bread, and every necessity and luxury, were provided; bandages were supplied in profusion; private houses were opened; Potomac Hall and Ryland Chapel were speedily transformed into impromptu hospitals, and the crowded cars were soon relieved of the greater portion of occupants.

Yesterday morning we visited the scene of these labors, and found that some twenty or more noble young men, and a number of ladies, had been up all night administering to the wants of the soldiers. No ambulances or officials had, as yet, made their appearance. Another bounteous repast was being served out to the sufferers. Ladies, like angels of mercy, were flitting to and fro, with words of cheer to the distressed. Ryland Chapel presented a scene to touch the heart. On the seats reclined the sufferers, while ladies were bathing their brows and fanning their heated faces. One sweet looking little girl, anxious to have a part in the good work, was moving about among the less disabled soldiers, distributing copies of a Sabbath school paper. The Episcopal Church was opened for the soldiers Sunday morning, and a large number were placed in that cool and comfortable retreat. We would like to specify by name some of those who were specially active in kind offices, but these noble acts were so universal, and pervading the entire community, with here and there an exception, that we forbear to particularize. Too much praise cannot be given to the ladies and gentlemen of the Island for the prompt manner in which they responded to the call of suffering humanity.

Three died on the passage here, and were interred by the Government undertaker yesterday. One was in his dying agonies when we left him yesterday. Many others are horribly wounded, some giving indication that they must have been in a perfect storm of bullets, as they were wounded in a half dozen different places. One man had a bullet hole through his head, just below the base of the brain; another one in his lungs, which are protruding from the hole in his breast; and others wounded in all conceivable forms. One man had the fleshy part of his thigh horribly mangled by a large shell, which tore through the body of the man in front of him.

Very few of the soldiers are sick, the most of them being wounded. They were all removed to hospitals yesterday afternoon.

The question was repeatedly asked, who is responsible for this neglect? It cannot be said that the proper notification was not given, for the surgeon in charge telegraphed twice on the subject, and to the first despatch a response was received from authorities here asking what time the train would arrive, which was answered, stating the precise time. These men did not arrive in office hours, but that is surely no reason why they should be neglected. We hope that the Government will not suffer the like to occur again, especially as this is the second time we have had occasion to call attention to the same cruel neglect.

ARRIVAL OF CONFEDERATE PRISONERS.

Yesterday, about noon, a train arrived on Maryland avenue, from Manassas, with about sixty Confederate prisoners of Jackson's army, taken at Port Republic. Their arrival was the signal for a few secessionists to manifest their sympathy for these Confederates, whose hands are red with the blood of the brave men who have gone forth in defence of our country. We are not in favor of insulting or taunting an enemy whom we have in our power, as was done with our brave boys in Richmond; neither do we favor treating them as friends; and we cannot help characterizing the scenes which we witnessed on Maryland avenue yesterday as disgraceful in the extreme.

Women who had kept clear of our unfortunate wounded and suffering men, and refused to supply a want or alleviate a pang of the distressed, now crowded eagerly around the Confederates, proffering the choicest dainties from their table and larder. Men in health and strength, who were well provided with rations on their journey here, coming fresh from the field of deadly strife, where they had been murdering our brothers, received all the sympathy and attention of those traitors in our midst. One traitor, calling herself a lady, we presume, came into the Episcopal church under a misapprehension of affairs, and offered a well filled basket of luxuries; but upon learning that they were Union soldiers, indignantly withheld her gift, and walked out to the car of the Confederates. The pressure upon the Confederates was so great, and the gifts so profuse and frequent, that the officer in command of the guard forbade the approach of the sympathizers.

Such a storm of indignation among the Secesh! Mutterings not loud, but deep, were freely uttered. We happened to get into a crowd of these animated feminines, and we secretly prayed for the protecting interposition of Picayune Butler's famous order to deliver us from the insults to loyalty. One young beauty's "heart was choking her," so great was her hatred of Yankee rule. Another asked the guard if many of these Confederates would take the oath of allegiance? He thought a large number would. "I hope not," was the response, with inverted nose, "I never would take such an oath."

About two o'clock the prisoners were marched to the Old Capitol prison, escorted by a guard, and accompanied by a female sympathizer in a carriage.

About one hundred more are expected to-day.

A GENERAL BANKRUPT LAW.

The New York Post is again urging upon Congress the importance of passing a general bankrupt law, and reasons as follows:

"The condition of things in this city calls loudly for relief, and there is no other door to it than this. It is estimated that at least one-third of our merchants are insolvent. So large a proportion of the most active and enterprising class withdrawn from the general work of society, must necessarily leave things in a state of prostration. We have seen a list of over nine hundred New York houses that have failed in the year 1861. Many of these had from two to six partners in the firm, and some as high as eight. Their affairs were mostly in the hands of assignees. Their wealth, their ledgers might possibly yield by careful management and negotiation, if they were allowed to resume charge of them before all channels of correspondence with debtors are entirely obliterated, may be very uncertain; but it will be much less for the creditors under the combined skinning operations of lawyers and sheriffs."

In republishing the above, the New York Express remarks:—"Then, indeed, we have paid dearly for the (bogus) whistle."

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of enlightening the world with lamp-black." Our Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SUN, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us, and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our JOB PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings.

STILL ANOTHER TRIUMPH.
BALTIMORE, May 1st, 1862.
I have experienced so much benefit by using PEARSON'S, MEDICATED TAR DROPS, that I believe it not only a duty but a pleasure, to make it known to others. I was afflicted with a Sore Throat and Dry Cough, which debilitated me so that I could get no rest. My friends told me that I had the consumption. I am now happy to inform you that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS have cured me.
I find that your MEDICATED TAR DROPS are counterfeited, and I caution the afflicted to be on their guard. This is really a shame that so efficacious a remedy should be injured by unprincipled men. I am glad, however, to see that your signature is now on each package, and I advise those who purchase to bear that in mind.
Yours, truly,
HENRY FISHER,
