OFFICIAL REPORTS ON FOREIGN WINES. The result of the inquiries on the wines of France, Switzerland, Germany, and Italy, instituted by the Customs, for the purpose of ascertaining their respective strengths, with a view to the duty question, as regulated by the alcoholometer, has just been published. The report on French wines is from Mr. R. A. Ogilvie, and he acknowledges that the scale of duties previous to the late alteration was a source of general complaint throughout France, chiefly owing to its unequal pressure, the finest and most valuable wines being admitted at the lowest rate, while the inferior kinds were much more highly taxed. As regards the total production of wine in France, Mr. Ogilvie furnishes a table which shows the extraordinary variations that occur from the weather and other circumstances. Thus, in 1847 the produce was 1,188,000,000 gallons, and in 1854, when the blight made its chief ravages, only 242,000,000. Owing to the great rise in the price of wine, a very considerable quantity of land has been planted with vines during the last two years, and when this land begins to bear, which will not be until the third year, the crops will be proportionably increased.

The advance in prices, the great extension of railroads in France during the last few years, and the opening of the export trade to England, has given an enormous impulse to the wine business, one of the results of which is that in many parts the manufacture of brandy by the distillation of wine is entirely given up, and the whole is now sold for drinking. The price of wine in many places is more than double, and in some parts four times what it was ten or twelve years ago. Still, wines may be obtained in most districts of France at a very moderate rate. The ordinary wine of good quality is generally sold on the spot where it is made from 1d. to 3d. per bottle, while the better sorts, such as those of the Valley of the Rhone, range from 9d. to 2s. per bottle. In the country round Macon very good wine may be bought for 4½d. per bottle. These prices, however, are solely for the wine in the cellars, and do not include even the value of the cask. Among the generality of wines superiority of quality does not usually produce at the place of growth its fair equivalent of price; on which account it is gradually becoming the universal object of the grower to produce quantity in preference to quality.

As respects the production of wine in Switzerland, the subject is dismissed in a few words. The climate in the otherwise favorable spots is too cold to produce any superior qualities, and the total quantity made in the country is not sufficient for the consumption of its population. With regard to German and Hungarian wines the report is from Mr. J. W. Douglas. The Rhenish growers, he states, pride themselves on the purity of their wines, and do not practise mixing or adulteration, but the dealers buy up the poorer sorts, and in some localities are notorious for spurious manufacture. It is quite exceptional to have two good seasons consecutively, but the years 1857, '58, and '59 were all good, and the growers have therefore large stocks on hand. Yet they are not anxious to sell, except at their own price, and the wines are not in fine condition until three or four years old. Before the recent French treaty there was not much Rhenish wine in cask exported to England, although it was so shipped to the United States, where there is a large demand among the German settlers, but subsequently there have been considerable shipments in the cask to this country, and it is believed that this kind of trade must be still further developed, so that the better sorts of wine may be bottled in England, and therefore, by the saving of freight and other expenses, be sold much cheaper than at present.

The sparkling wines, however, must be bottled when new, and at that stage they will not bear carriage in cask. The regulation, therefore, that imposes the high duty on all wines in bottle will act very prejudicially on these popular descriptions. In Hungary the observations of Mr. Douglas led him to conclude that the Hungarian, like the Rhenish growers, do not adulterate their wines. He says: "Indeed, they are generally so good that they would certainly be deteriorated if alcohol were added." But the dealers mix it with water, and this treatment has obtained for Hungarian wines a character they do not deserve. It is believed that pure Hungarian wine, as an article of commerce, is actually as yet unknown in England. While possessing a great resemblance to the wines of Burgundy and the Rhine, the better wines of Hungary have greater body and strength, and would be more likely to suit the English taste, but to succeed in England they must be imported direct from the growers. Such wines, it is computed, could be delivered in bond, 1857, 1858, and 1859 having all been fine, and the average yearly produce is estimated at 400,000,000 gallons, of which at least one-third is available for export. Upon demand, too, the production could be almost indefinitely increased.

Hitherto wine has not been produced in Hungary with a view to exportation, and so greatly is the yield in excess of the consumption that, in some places, the growth of corn has supplanted that of the vine, as it pays better. "Yet," it is stated, "with all its disadvantages, there is probably no country in which so great a proportion of good wine is made; and if an export trade with England were once established there would doubtless be a general improvement." The report on the wines of Spain and Portugal is from Mr. Chas. Brenard, who commences with the observation that the large shippers and vineyard proprietors of Spain and Portugal are, and have been for a long period of time, manufacturers, rather than simply producers of wine. The practice said to be followed in other countries of merely watching and aiding nature in the development of fermentation has here superadded to it a system of mixing and fortifying that tends to produce an intoxicating rather than a purely exhilarating beverage. Hence in those countries an investigation to ascertain the strength of the pure and natural wines is attended with difficulty. Mr. Bernard is disposed to think that a diminution of this system of sophistication might prove advantageous, but the shippers and rearers of Spanish and Portuguese wines will not admit that a drop more spirit is used than is absolutely necessary for their preservation.

The inquiry concerning the wines of Sicily and Italy was intrusted to Mr. Frederick Davies, who died at Pisa before he had completed his report. He had visited, however, the greater portion of the district allotted to him, and the conclusion arrived at seems to be that the great bulk of Italian wines is of inferior quality; that they are generally made without much care and with imperfect apparatus, and that they are considered unfit to bear a sea voyage. The number of samples transmitted by the four officers who were thus selected by the Board of Customs to visit the wine-producing countries, with a view to determine, as far as practicable, what may be deemed the greatest natural strength of wine, was 125—namely, from France, 56; Switzerland, 3; Germany (the Rhine), 7; Bavaria, 4; Hungary, 11; Austria, 5; Spain, 18; Portugal, 13; Sicily, 2; Naples, 2; Papal States, 4; total 125. Of these 125 samples it appears that 14 represent wine containing less than 18 per cent. of spirit; 89 represent wine containing 18 and less than 26 per cent. of spirit; and 22 represent wine containing 26 and less than 40 per cent. of spirit. Under the duties as recently altered, all under 26 per cent. is admitted at 1s., and from 26 to 42 the rate is 2s. 6d. per gallon. Wine of every description in bottle is charged the higher sum. Annexed are the proportions of samples from each country:

	Less than 18 per cent.	18 and less than 26 per cent.	26 and less than 40 per cent.	Total Samples.

From a return just issued, it appears that the quantity of foreign wine entered for consumption in the United Kingdom, from January 1 to April 3, 1862, was as follows: Imported from France, 428,385 gallons; Spain, 1,052,385; Portugal, 611,121; Germany, 59,776; Holland, 60,444; other countries collectively, including wine vatted in bond, 222,308; making a total of 2,434,399 gallons.

A DUEL IN PHILADELPHIA.

Rumors were afloat yesterday, based on apparently authentic sources, giving the particulars of a duel which took place on Thursday morning last, near this city. It was stated that, on Monday last, two gentlemen were engaged in conversation at the Continental Hotel, when the position assumed by England towards the United States was noticed, and bitterly commented upon. One of the party present, an officer of the Grenadier Guards (now stationed, we believe, in Canada) took offence, and used an insulting expression, which was resented by the American spokesman. A challenge appears to have been the result. The combatants, with their respective friends, left the city about daylight on Thursday, and drove to Litzenburg's farm, in Montgomery county. Here, at 5 o'clock A. M., all the arrangements were completed. A spot of ground was chosen, which was partially surrounded by woods. At that early hour, there was no danger of intrusion. Ten persons, in all, were present.—Twelve rounds were fought with pistols, both parties being skilled in their use, the one from military experience, and the other from practice at a club in this city. Several scratches were given and received, but, before any serious result had ensued, an agreement was proposed and accepted. An amicable breakfast was the result. The name of the English officer has not transpired, nor has that of the American, who is alleged to have been a retired merchant of this city. Speculation is rife as to the personnel of the parties.

The Cincinnati papers publish the names of another large batch of sick and wounded soldiers from Gen. Halleck's army—363 in number—just up from Pittsburg Landing.

LATEST FROM KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE KY., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D.,

Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. Je21-tf
