THE PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

We find the following notice of the action of the Presbyterian General Assembly (Old School), which lately met in Columbus, Ohio, in the Crisis, a Democratic paper published in that city:

With thousands of others, we express our deep regrets, that this body of ancient and respected Christians, assembled here at our Capitol, should have fallen into the snare of the evil one, and made politics instead of Christ's Gospel the great I Am of their proceedings.

We had hopes, and yet we cannot tell on what they were based, that at this hour of our nation's sorrow and mourning, this Assembly of time-honored Christians would have offered up their solemn and sober prayers for our whole people—for the restoring of good order and peace among men—for the suffering soldier and sobbing wife and mother, and grasped in the wide domain of their professions, the spirit which saves the souls of men.

But what have we had? Political wrangling—sectional divisions—party hates and the cannibal appetite which feeds on blood. Did God send His only begotten Son on earth to preach politics—to divide nations into political factions—to save souls by lines of latitude? If He did so, then we were led to in our youth, and we spread that lie in our manhood. We thought a man might be a Christian and be an Englishman, a Frenchman or a Dutchman; we did not know that Governments made the standard of Church membership—we did not know that in entering the Church sanctuary, the applicant must be catechised as to his politics or whom he would support at elections.

Dr. Breckinridge carried his measure by 199 to 20. But this great majority does not change the character of the question—men do not go to Heaven by majorities; St. Peter does not sit at the gate to count up election returns. He searches a little deeper into the applicant's papers than the vote of his fellows, even were it unanimous.

We see nothing now left to prevent the Northern part of the Old School Presbyterians uniting in full accord with their brethren of the New School.—The latter, anticipating this result, sent them a friendly invitation from Cincinnati, where they are also in session, to join their congratulations.—We think they had just as well do it to save the expense of building two churches instead of one in the country villages.

FROM GENERAL BANKS' COLUMN.

Correspondence of the New York World.

WINCHESTER, VA., June 20.—No fighting has occurred in the Valley of the Shenandoah since my last, but a fearful looking-for of Jackson has ruffled the quiet of many minds. Officers and soldiers seem to be pervaded with ill-boding solicitude, and many have packed their trunks, holding all things in readiness for another exodus into Maryland. Our experiences of the past month have scarcely sufficed to place things in so certain an aspect as to prevent this very undesirable state of feeling. For a whole day the anxiety was intense. Sutlers who had lately lost their supplies were making solicitous search for transportation, and possible contingencies were being provided for by the purchase of horses and wagons. No demonstrations were made which were very apparent, but one was asking eagerly of another what he had heard from Front Royal or Fremont, and listened with all attention to the reply, which was some uncertain intimation of a withdrawal of forces from Mount Jackson, and an advance of Jackson on Front Royal. General Williams, with his staff, had proceeded to the latter place, and General Banks, it was rumored, had been suddenly summoned from Washington, and would be here in the morning on a special train, after traveling all night.

All this seemed to portend something important, but the excitement has subsided somewhat, and those who have just returned from Front Royal report that all is quiet at that point. The withdrawal of Shields and Ricketts has, however, left that place at present unoccupied, and our forces are upon this side of the Shenandoah, and three miles from the town. Banks' column has been gradually moving in that direction, and a bridge will probably be constructed across the river in a few days.

Fremont has meanwhile moved down to Strasburg, which was rendered necessary by the withdrawal of our forces in the Luray valley. A successful attack on Front Royal would have exposed the command to being cut off by Jackson. Our forces are now within easy supporting distance of one another, and the right wing of the army at Strasburg advanced no farther than the left wing at Front Royal. Our forces, it will be seen, are in the exact position which was occupied when Jackson forced us so rapidly to abandon the valley, and which, it would appear from this fact, is considered a strong position.

That a desperate attempt will be made, within three weeks, to drive us out again, I think most probable. It is the general opinion of the people to whom many private channels of information bring intelligence, which is very often to be relied upon, and the abundant wheat crop of the valley, which is rapidly ripening, can seem no mean prize in the estimation of the army, whose prospect of continued supplies of food is by no means certain. Jackson, too, promised the people of Winchester to return again after a few weeks' absence, and they look for his coming with confidence and pleasure.

Not the slightest improvement in loyalty can be discovered, even while watching carefully to discover some indications of it. The presence of the army among the people makes them worse and worse in their disaffection. Hardly a case can be mentioned of the conversion of a Secessionist.—The opinions of the people are expressed openly and bitterly. We have come among them to steal their property, run off their negroes, and kill their husbands, brothers and sons, and for all this they hate us most thoroughly. To them the destruction of a good government seems no crime at all, and they affect the attitude of injured innocence towards the invaders whom they regard as a horde of unprincipled vandals, capable of the worst enormities and crimes. Without reflecting upon the usual attendants of war, each individual case of depredation is enough to condemn a whole army, and those who send out such armies to fight are all execrated in the same category, and with the same resentment. It is hardly possible to exaggerate the depth and bitterness of the passion which rules the most of those with whom I come in contact.

This state of feeling, which to many seems so discouraging, is to me by no means unhopeful. So much deceived have they thus far been, that not a doubt is entertained of the establishment of a glorious Southern Confederation. With this chimera before their eyes, it has been impossible for them yet to entertain for a moment the thought of the possibility of coming back into the Union. They have not yet, many of them, thought of a reconstruction of the Government as a possible fact.

Horse-stealing, pig-killing, chicken-shooting, and many other frequent practices about camp, have had a very unenviable influence, both upon our friends and foes in the valley. There is scarcely a man of any wealth that does not estimate his private losses from the army at several thousands. I know a Union man, who resides on an estate inherited from his father and grandfather, in the greatest respectability, who has suffered from the army immensely, and it is not surprising that the unnecessary and wanton damage which he has sustained has been a severe tax upon his patriotism. So much had his farm been beset by soldiers who had strolled away from camp, that a party of cavalry were sent there to scour through the place and clear out the vagrants. I am glad to say that this occurred in the case of the German division, whose education offers an excuse for them; but such depredations are not altogether confined to these, and they cannot fail to have an impression upon the inhabitants which it will be hard to efface in bringing them back to a state of loyalty again.

The fidelity of the negroes to the Union is really amusing. They consider the present aspect of affairs as very encouraging. At a religious meeting not long since, a chapain addressed a promiscuous audience of whites and blacks. He expressed his joy that all were met together as one. "Bress de Lord for dat," shouted out one of the brethren. Many remarks were made of similar bearing, which drew forth similar ejaculations from the negroes. One of the latter remarked: "Things is getting better and better every day, but they is not quite right yet."

A preacher of the colored persuasion lately prayed in public at Winchester: "De Lord bress de President ob de United States, and let dis rebellion be squashed," and the sentence was closed with a vehemence which indicated that he felt the importance of what he asked. These indications are interesting, as showing the attitude in which the negro stands, who is an important character on the stage in the present play.

GEN. HUNTER'S NEGRO BRIGADE.—Gen. Hunter has stopped short, after hearing from Washington, in his project to make soldiers of negroes. A negro brigade has been organized, is uniformed, and draws its rations. The uniform consists of a dark blue coat, blue trousers, conical broad-brimmed black hat, and black haversack, no stripe or trimmings of any sort and no bright buttons. But these negroes are used for the most part in the quartermaster's department, unloading vessels and performing other labor of this sort. The quartermaster of the post reads to the colonel for a detail of so many men; and the number, be it one company or more, marches down, without music but in step and order. The regiment never appears with arms, and it is said that none have been issued to it as yet. What is the use of wasting money in uniforming these working negroes we are not told.—New York Express, June 23.

The Pianist Liszt has emerged from his seclusion at Weimar, and is now in London attending the Great Exhibition. He has allowed himself to be engaged by the principal English piano-forte makers, such as Broadwood and Collard, to exhibit the powers of their instruments. He plays three times a week, and the two hours at each time. Alfred Jaell, equally well remembered in this country, is engaged to play upon American pieces.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq. LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 17, 1862.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D.,

Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. Je21-tf

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of "enlightening the world with lamp-black." OUR Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SOUTH, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us, and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our Job PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings. SAMUEL S. MILLS,
