GENERAL McCLELLAN'S ARMY.

Correspondence of the New York Express.

TWO-AND-A HALF MILES SOUTH OF THE CHICKAHOMINY, June 21, 1862.

A supply of horses has made more complete the batteries. We lose no ground, if we make but little progress. The enemy occupy a splendid position, one of their own choice, and from which it will not be easy to dislodge them. The enemy's forces are certainly increasing, and the effect may be that nothing but a regular and protracted siege, possibly to last through the summer, will place us in the possession of Richmond. However, Gen. McClellan often moves in ways we know not of, and may move when and where least expected. Several changes are taking place in the transfer of troops which it is not wise to mention.

ADVANCE GUARD, LEFT WING ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 21.

There has been no onward movement since my last, the picket fighting having resulted in nothing but the loss of several men, killed and wounded. These little skirmishes, which occur nearly every day, would excite but little attention were it not for the fact that a Confederate advance is almost momentarily expected. In consequence, each heavy discharge of musketry rouses all our camps and quickly brings the men to position in battle order. The impression is general that in the Fair Oaks fight, Casey was surprised, and the soldiers now occupying his old camp testify their appreciation of the lesson by always saying, "The Rebels can't catch us in such a trap as old Casey was caught in."

There may be some injustice in this wholesale censure, as the friends of that General contend that he was not only not surprised, but that one of the most gallant and stubborn fights on record took place under his direction. Of this latter claim there can be no doubt in the mind of any one who visited the field on Sunday, after the enemy were driven back towards Richmond. The sights have already been quite fully described, though it would be impossible to convey on paper even a shadow of the awful picture. One of our best known Generals, who now occupies the old ground, is warm in his defence of Casey, for whom he claims all the honor due a brave and able soldier. When the official reports are published we may arrive at a more satisfactory conclusion, and until then Casey will probably remain, with his division, in the rear.

Speaking of the old battlefield reminds me of its present condition. The almost numberless graves and trenches where dozens of bodies were thrown in together, promiscuously, the heaps of ashes from the carcases of burned horses, emit a stench which makes the entire surrounding atmosphere insufferable. In passing them, one instinctively shudders, and seeks escape. Upon that fatal field, but a foot or two beneath the surface, rest the corrupted remains of nearly a thousand men, and the rays of an overpowering sun operate most fatally. The sanitary condition of the position is awful to contemplate, and if a pestilence is not bred, it will be a most singular and anomalous circumstance. As the location is an advantageous one, our Generals are disposed to retain it, and over the graves of lost companions the soldiers have pitched their tents, and await the near-approaching struggle.

It looks strange, indeed, to see men so regardless of horrors, bivouacking with graves for pillows, or sitting by camp fires upon heaps of earth, which cover so much of mortality. Does not this exert a depressing influence upon men hourly expecting to hear the long roll beaten, or the bugle sound? Is not this continual evidence of a soldier's possible fate, enough to make even brave men timid? These are questions one often hears the civilian ask; but amid every scene of horror, at a time so prolific of horrors, I have yet to see the volunteer who seems to give the matter even a passing thought. Encamped in the grave-yard of cherished friends, his nonchalance is surprising; a study, in fact, to the theorists and speculators we meet and hear in civil life. To my mind, association with the dead blunts the finer feelings of a soldier's nature, and makes him regard with a careless eye those things which, at home, are productive of distress and sorrow.

For another example, you may take the swamps near Fair Oaks, where the contest was so severe. I wrote, after the battle, of the horrible sights which there met my eyes; of dead men, friends and foes, piled upon each other in the water grown putrid from the corruption of their bodies. The water has become comparatively pure now, and is used for bathing purposes by the soldiers. At almost any hour on a sultry day, a dozen men can be seen bathing in the very spot where lay those hecatombs of the dead, while the miasma rising from half-buried corpses is, particularly to the unaccustomed, positively sickening. If the contemplation of such fearful realities amounts to anything at all with the volunteer, it is merely secondary, and certainly has no effect upon his abilities. These instances only go toward illustrating the hardening influences of war upon those who participate in its angers. Of the effect upon society, after we are again blessed with peace, it will not take long to tell. We can but hope for the best, while fearing the worst.

Anticipating battle almost every moment, I feel authorized in saying that if a general engagement should take place this week, it will be commenced by the Confederates. McClellan is nearly ready for a final movement, and thoroughly prepared for an advance by the enemy. The day of settlement seems to be drawing very near. One cannot help shuddering at the awful story so soon to be told.

From the New York Times, June 26.

THE SENATE AND SENATOR SIMMONS.

Mr. Simmons, of Rhode Island, who has not heretofore enjoyed a reputation for that spotless purity which should adorn the Senatorial toga, but who has thus far escaped any very marked exposure, has at last been brought fairly to the bar of public opinion. There were contracts for arms to be awarded. As a Senator and the Chairman of one important Committee, and a member of others, Mr. Simmons was able to exert high influence at the War Department, and did exert it. The result was the allotment of a very profitable contract for Springfield muskets to a friend of the Senator, for which the friend was charged by the Senator a commission of $50,000, and the commission was paid. The facts brought out by the Contract Investigating Committee, Mr. Simmons admits to be correct; so the case is in all respects agreeably snug and complete.

In view of the facts, Mr. Trumbull, yesterday, brought in a bill punishing such Senatorial jobbery. This is very well, but does not reach the case of Senator Simmons. Mr. Trumbull would have exhibited much more of his habitual sense, had he first moved a resolution expelling James F. Simmons from the Senate.

Something, and indeed very much, is due to the protection of the public; but in the present instance protection seems to be more immediately demanded by the dignity of the Senate, and the security of legislation. Mr. Simmons, with a reputation badly tainted beforehand, and now convicted of a transaction in all respects venal, paltry and disgraceful, should not be allowed to sit for a moment in the Highest Legislative assemblage of the nation. It is not a mere question as to the company Senators may choose to keep. The culprit has a potent voice in legislation. He is chairman of the Committee on Claims, a position which places within reach of endless temptation a virtue so very far below proof. He is a member of the Finance Committee, where, in moulding taxes and tariffs, he is exposed to constant seductions. He has proved himself unfit for such places of trust, not simply by the fact of his jobbery, but by the assurance with which he admits the fact, as one requiring no justification. Surely, if a case ever authorized the prompt action of the Senate, this does, and the country will indeed be shamed if no action is taken. In that case, the only consolation will be, that after a few months the term of Mr. Simmons will expire, and that of Governor Sprague will begin. The antitheses of two characters could not be more perfect.

The Doylestown Democrat says:—"Quite a large number of 'contrabands,' we are told, are now in Bensalem, and some of the peculiar friends of the blacks have been urging farmers to discharge their white farm hands and employ the blacks, because they can hire them for twenty-five cents a day till fall, and then discharge them. After working for twenty five cents a day till fall, when work is no longer to be had, the natural inference is, these poor blacks may seek shelter in the poor-house for the winter. Verily this is a queer kind of philanthropy—first turns off the white man and impoverish him for want of labor, and then rob the negro of what he is justly entitled to, because he does not know the true value of his labor, and cast him upon charity when the chilling winds of winter come upon him."

DEPRECIATION OF PROPERTY.—A splendid estate was sold at Astoria, under the hammer, the early part of this week. This sale shows the reverses that the present rebellion has brought on us. It was owned by a gentleman who was one of the millionaires of New York. He was President of one of our banks, a leading man in all relations; but nearly all of his fortune was in the South, among which were $300,000 in North Carolina State bonds. To avoid confiscation he resigned his position in the bank, and even went to Canada to reside. But it was all in vain; the confiscation act swept all away, and now his splendid establishment was put up and knocked down at a ruinous sacrifice in these hard times, and is only a type of what is daily going on.—N. Y. Cor. Boston Journal.

THE SECOND LEGION OF WINCHESTER.—The females of Winchester were early possessed with the seven devils of secession. They were not rebels from argument. Women do not reason. They leap like a cat at a conclusion, and stay like a house a fire when it is once lighted in it. Treason has been no parallel in the world's history of such mysterious, slaughter, extraordinary, female proscription as in the Southern States of America. All the sweethearts and sweet mistresses and half-grown girls of a town have sunk their social distinctions and rivalries, and combined to outlaw, scorn, hiss and hoot into the army every man of patriotism of city place. And they do it. They have done it.

LATEST FROM KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE Cough and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D.,
Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 5 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. Je21 tf

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS PARTIALLY RESTORED.—After an involuntary absence of about three months, during which time we were made familiar with the classic and once hallowed grounds of Fort McHenry—we again resume, partially, our old vocation of enlightening the world with lamp-black." Our Press, being deemed dangerous by the Government, has been kindly limited, and, for the future, instead of publishing "THE SUN, or any other paper, without consent of the Commanding General," we shall modestly labor in the humbler department of the "art preservative of all arts," by executing every description of BOOK AND JOB PRINTING, hoping through that medium to sustain ourselves and those dependent upon us and would earnestly appeal to our friends to favor us with their patronage. We have prepared our Job PRINTING DEPARTMENT to execute all kinds of printing neatly, expeditiously and cheaply, and solicit a call at our old buildings.
