FEDERAL VICTORIES AND THE SUBJUGATION OF THE SOUTH.

From the London Times, June 17.

Such battles as those of Shiloh and Richmond cannot fail to have a strong effect on the mind of the Northern people. Already, indeed, we seem to hear the quiver of apprehension in which the shout for each so-called triumph dies away, and to detect the falter of doubt in the uneasy earnestness of each man's assertions. For the Federal victories, though great, glorious, splendid, and so forth, have to be explained. Indeed, you would hardly know they were victories unless you were told so by some one who was in the secret. It needs to be demonstrated by arguments and diagrams that Secession is being duly crushed by the anaconda and swept away by the avalanche, and engulfed by the moral earthquake, as foretold in the figurative language of its opponents. We now have an elaborate comparison of advantages—how the loss of a battery of artillery is compensated by a successful bayonet charge, and a slaughter which is known to be heavy by a slaughter which is concluded to be enormous. The Confederates did not attain their object—therefore it was a Federal victory. General McClellan's army recovered the half-mile of ground and still holds its old positions—therefore it was a Federal victory. The siege of Richmond still goes on—therefore it was a Federal victory. Such is the highly scientific basis of the Northern jubilation. But the Federals must feel it rather a descent to become strategical and topographical. The battles may be very good battles, very fit for a future Jomini to describe. They may exhibit interesting facts for the student respecting expected wings, or the position of batteries, attack in column, attack in line, and what not. If the Federals come to delight in the art of Horace Vernet and Yvon, they may cover vast expanses of canvass with the masterly manœuvres and dashing charges at Williamsburg, Shiloh and Chickahominy. But this is not exactly what we were led to expect. Anything less like crushing and sweeping it has seldom been our lot to hear of. It must begin to dawn upon the minds of most people that if this kind of fighting is to go on, the conquest of the Southern States will be a greater achievement than even the acuteness of Mr. Lincoln anticipated.

The truth is that every successive month shows more clearly the impossibility of restoring the Union by force of arms. When we look back on the delusions which reigned little more than a year ago at the North, and which were shared to some extent by many of us in England, we are astonished at their magnitude, and the absence of any trace of truth. It was asked with wonder a few years since how the English in India could have lived in constant intercourse with the natives, and yet in total unconsciousness of their nature. The "faithful Sepoy," the "mild Hindoo," were implicitly trusted. Just as much was it taken for granted that the Sikh was irreconcilably hostile, the native Princes ambitious and eager to take advantage of our weakness, while the populations were anxious to escape from their power to the shelter of British law. The history of the Mutiny was the history of seemingly inexcusable error on the part of statesmen, generals and magistrates.

But what were these mistakes to the delusions of the Northern people respecting the race which lived in political communion and constant commercial and social intercourse with them, which bought and sold with them, called them fellow-citizens in electioneering speeches, sent its children to be educated at the same schools, sat side by side with them at hotels, served in the same regiments, sailed in the same men-of-war, boasted with them of American greatness in European company, and to the foreign spectator seemed part of the same people, one and indivisible? They now recollect that the Southerners clanned together, that they despised the Northerner, that they hated him as a plebeian and a creditor, and that, while appealing to glory in the Union, they were ready, almost to a man, to destroy it at the bidding of the leaders in whom they confided. How the Southerners bid their impulses and their resolution is, indeed, extraordinary, for to the last the chief men in the Union did not believe that even South Carolina was earnest in secession.

Since then it may be said that the North has been deceived in everything. First it could not believe that the Confederates would be able to raise an army at all. President Lincoln asked for 75,000 men for three months, and there is no reason to doubt that he expected the number and the time to be sufficient. Then it was said that the Southerners could not fight, had not the qualities of soldiers, were too wild for discipline, and would obey only a guerilla chief. Let the attacks and still more the retreats of the Confederate Generals declare how far this opinion was well founded. But the most conspicuous errors have related to the unanimity of the South, and its position in respect to the negro race. That a large Union party would rise wherever the Federals appeared is a fancy now cruelly dissipated, and with it vanishes the only justification of the war in the minds of impartial men. But a yet more remarkable fact is the attachment of the slaves to the white race in the South.

Both the Northerners and those who echo them in this country were never tired of repeating that the Confederates would not dare to offer any real resistance, inasmuch as they held in bondage four millions of their fellow-creatures who would obey the natural instincts of humanity by massacreing the women and children as soon as the men had left for the war. But at last the crucial experiment has been tried. The Southerners have gone almost to the last man to the war, the victims of that tyranny which is described as so savage and revolting that "it unites in itself all crimes" are left almost uncontrolled, and in some places absolutely masters, yet there is no rebellion. A Federal General stationed in a region where the negroes are four fifths of the population, issues a proclamation declaring the slaves of these States free. Yet there is no uprising for liberty. It is a melancholy fact for philanthropists and literary ladies; but there is none. The only thing left now is to declare that the negroes have been so degraded by oppression that they have no desire for what is within their grasp.

The fact seems to be that the Southern commonwealth is socially far stronger than any one either at the North or in Europe had supposed. Nothing was more natural than for the great a priori reasoners to demonstrate that 300,000 slave-owners could never induce several millions of "mean whites" and four millions of negroes to aid them in an aristocratic revolution. Yet they have done it. Society at the South is evidently not in an artificial state; the equilibrium is not unstable which meets such a shock as the Northern invasion. The "mean whites"—in other words, the small cultivators, tradespeople, and artisans of the South—make up the Confederate armies, and are bitter secessionists without any personal interest in slavery; and, as our correspondent tells us to-day, the Southerners are not afraid to raise negro regiments to oppose those which the North are said to have levied.

The Americans are too shrewd not to see and understand these things, and, should the hot weather lead to a suspension of hostilities, we are inclined to hope that the voice of reason will once more be heard. Our letter from New York gives, no doubt, a truthful picture of the terror which restrains men from saying what they think. But when we find that a member of Congress and a representative of New York has the courage to rebuke the savage passions of his people, we are encouraged to hope for some change. The speech—or rather pamphlet, for it was never spoken—of Mr. Benjamin Wood is but the repetition of what we have been saying for months. He asks, "What is the use of a union of unwilling States, driven into companionship at the point of the bayonet, and held there thereafter by military power? * * * If not brought back by negotiation, they are lost to us forever. * * * To conquer them may be possible; but to hold them in subjection, having conquered them, would in itself be a final repudiation of the first principle of Republicanism." Such is the language of a man who sees the madness of his countrymen, and will save them if it be possible. May he find followers as bold and plain-spoken! Then, indeed, we shall begin to believe in the ninety days of Federal prophecy. Let the Northern people once perceive that the choice is between a peaceful settlement and a bootless war, gathering new horrors every day, and they will not refuse the advice even of England.

From the New York Post, Editorial, July 2.

AFFAIRS BEFORE RICHMOND.

The Government, which has taken possession of the telegraph lines, holds itself responsible that no intelligence of war movements shall be sent over the wires which can either, injure the public welfare or interfere with the movements of the armies. At the same time we have the promise of the Government that no news shall be withheld from the public, whether it be favorable or unfavorable.—We may take it for granted, therefore, that the moment certain intelligence is received from Gen. McClellan at the War Department, the telegraph will flash it over the country; and the restrictions placed over the public use of the telegraph will spare the people the thousand annoying and disquieting rumors of good or bad fortune which fly about at such times, and which can only do mischief.

We may wait, therefore, in patience. The movement of General McClellan, by which he withdrew the forces on his right and abandoned his base on the White House and West Point, not only placed the enemy at a disadvantage, but formed our own forces into a solid body, ready to strike in any direction with advantage, and having, by its superior concentration, the advantage of interior lines, which is counted so important by all commanders. Moreover, it gave General McClellan a new base of operations and line of communications which the enemy can with difficulty reach, and which is, in fact, covered by our whole army.

What may be the result of these movements no one can foretell; the enemy may, in desperation, assault us, and endeavor, by a vehement effort and at every sacrifice and all risks, to cut our army to pieces; or he may, seeing he is out-manœuvred, take time by the forelock and retreat, fighting. In either case we have no fear for the result. Whatever numbers the enemy may have gathered to the assault, he must attack us at such disadvantage that his superiority of force will be of little avail. The barrier of the Chickahominy, which the Confederates regarded as the best defence of Richmond, is now behind us, and protects us from attack from the rear, where a small force of artillery will keep the enemy back. And every step our army advances toward Richmond shortens its line of land communications with the James river and the gunboats, and more and more concentrates our forces.

Meantime, we must not forget that a movement such as General McClellan has made, even if unopposed, would require several days to yield its final results; but opposed at every step, and fighting our way through the enemy, it may be that a week or ten days will be needed to obtain the victory which our commander's brilliant combinations assure us. The people must, therefore, have patience. General McClellan is not left to battle alone. Reinforcements are pushing forward to him from different directions, and with that speed which brave men make when they know that their comrades look for succor. Burnside and Pope are on their way—are, perhaps, at this time near the scene of contest; and other troops must be by this time within call of our struggling army. There is every reason to believe that all so far has gone rightly. We hear that the highest military authority in the land has given the most thorough approval of the plan of General McClellan; and our correspondent writes from Fortress Monroe on Monday that a gunboat returned from City Point that morning, bringing news direct from the army, with which communications have been re-established, that "everything is progressing to the entire satisfaction of the General."

LATEST FROM KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 17, 1862.

GEO. PEARSON, Esq.

Dear Sir—I feel it a duty to express to you my sincere acknowledgments of the benefit derived from the use of a package of your MEDICATED TAR DROPS.

I was suffering with a SEVERE COUGH and SORE THROAT, when a friend presented me with a package of your celebrated TAR DROPS, and when I used them, I was free to confess it was more to gratify my appetite for sweetmeats than the idea of deriving any good from them; but really, the rapid allaying of the irritation and subsequent entire cure of the cough, induces me to thank you, and I take great pleasure in recommending to the public so effective a compound. Respectfully yours, J. E. SMITH, M. D., Assistant Surgeon Artillery Brigade U. S. A.

PEARSON'S MEDICATED TAR DROPS are prepared and sold by GEO. PEARSON, No. 8 North Liberty street, Baltimore, at 10 cents per package. Sold also by all the principal Druggists. je21-tf

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR HOWARD COUNTY, SITTING IN EQUITY—MARCH TERM, 1862.—EMANUEL W. KICHLINE, BERGER et al. vs. HENRY TIMBERLAKE.—The object of this suit is to obtain a decree for the sale of certain leasehold property in Howard county for the purpose of satisfying a mortgage. The bill states that a certain Henry Timberlake, of the State of Virginia, being indebted unto a certain William Allen, of Howard county, in the sum of nine hundred and twenty-five dollars in current money, for which sum he gave his several promissory notes, bearing even date, and intending to secure the payment of said notes, that said Henry Timberlake did by his deed of 5th day of October, 1859, convey unto the said William Allen, and his heirs, certain leasehold property situated in Howard county, in or near Ellicott's Mills, and particularly described in said deed, to which said deed there is a condition annexed, that it be void on payment to the aforesaid sum of money or promissory notes, and that the said William Allen assigned all his interest in said promissory notes to Emanuel W. Kichlineberger and John Allen and Henrietta Allen, his wife, the complainants in this cause, and that Henry Timberlake resides out of the State of Mary and, and the bill prays that a sale of said leasehold property may be decreed by the Court, and the proceeds distributed among the parties interested in proportion to their respective claims.

It is thereupon adjudged and ordered, that the complainants by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Baltimore city, once in each of four successive weeks before the first day of September next, give notice to the absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, and warn him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the first day of September next, to answer the premises and show cause why, if any he has, a decree ought not to pass as prayed.
